THE DISAGREEMENTS OF SCIENTISTS.

The diametrically opposite opinions expressed by scientific gentlemen concerning the effects of chemical preservatives upon the human system is calculated to shake public faith in the reliability of much that has gone forth in the name of science in these latter days. As the conflicting testimony of hired alienists employed on opposite sides of a murder case has caused among the rank and file a strong feeling of disgust and an impression that the average alienist is quite willing to be the partisan of the side which employs him, so the jarring views of eminent chemists concerning the ultimate effect of chemical preservatives upon the stomach and other organs is creating a feeling of apprehension among the consuming public and the thought grows that a part of modern science is merely guess work and much more the result of individual prepossessions and impressions. This view, which has been frequently expressed around the family fireside of late, as well as in the places where men are in the habit of congregating after the day's work has been finished, doubtless does very great injustice to a very worthy class of investigators. Still, when two learned men, chemists of great eminence, make careful experiments and arrive at irreconcilable conclusions, the result is certain to be confusing to the unlearned lay mind. The old expression, "Who shall decide when doctors disagree," comes into the mind of the student of the day's news and he wonders why there is so much uncertainty, so much disagreement, so much confusion, so many jarring opinions concerning matters which should be scientific certainties. He is persuaded that one of the disputants is wrong, but the important question is, Which one? He is not capable of choosing between the two. He stands by the wayside, halting between two opinions and with no man to guide him. If these learned doctors are divided concerning a matter quite within their own province to decide, if they are as wide apart as the poles in their views, where is the ordinary citizen to get the knowledge that will enable him to take the right path? The confusion grows as the controversy becomes more animated; the way of the unlearned is dark. He is tempted to renounce his belief in scientific certainty; to declare his conviction that there is no such thing. Yet if he were to take such an impression to his breast he would be a very foolish man. The disagreements of learned men are puzzling, but they are to be accounted for not only by the infirmities of human temper, but also by the equally important if mysterious fact that "what is one man's meat is another man's poison."

ONE HOUSEKEEPER'S EXPERIENCE.

A certain housekeeper writes the Bulletin her appreciation of the educational campaign it has undertaken to carry on during the last twenty months. She affirms that much wisdom has come to her during that period as the result of paying some attention to the relative importance of pure food and she believes her husband and children and all the other members of her large family are much better off because of the vigilance with which she has looked after their interests where the food supply was concerned. She is surprised at the indifference which marked her conduct for so many years and now understands why certain sorts of food seldom agreed with the family. She says she considers the selection of food as one of the most important of her daily duties. She tells us that the grocer and the butcher have become so accustomed to her new ways that they have fallen into the habit of assisting her in the choice of really meritorious foods. In no instance do they now offer her a cheap article, an adulterated article, an embalmed article, unless, indeed the label should deceive them, and they seem to take a very great interest in her pursuit of health for her family by way of the food supply. She feels, too, that her example has done some of her neighbors much good, although she has refrained from proclaiming her policies from the housetops, in the highways or even at the markets. She suspects that the grocer and the butcher and others whom she patronizes have spoken to those neighbors about her peculiarities, for she notices that other housekeepers are falling into line and examining the labels with much care. She is much gratified at the spread of her good example, although she has made no effort to do missionary work, for she knows that carefulness in the purchase and preparation of the food of the household will prove a great blessing to the other families of the neighborhood. She is persuaded of the truth of this belief because of the fine results which have been achieved in her own household. She feeds its members upon plain, substantial food. Pastry is not entirely debarred but it is permitted very sparingly. She believes the human stomach is better off without too many dainties. But everybody has enough to eat of the wholesome fare with which the table is spread and the result is a hardy and healthy family of growing boys and girls. The visits of the doctor are few and far between and his annual bill is very small as compared with the years before the light of knowledge led the footsteps of the Housekeeper into Wisdom's cheerful ways. She thinks pure food a great help in raising a family and the Bulletin believes she's right.

THE GOVERNOR URGES PURE FOOD LAWS.

At the annual dinner of the Grocers' and Importers' Exchange, of Philadelphia, some evenings ago, Governor Stuart went on record as earnestly in favor of the enactment and enforcement of genuine pure food laws. And he urged the grocers and others concerned in the sale of food to cast their influence on the side of pure, healthy food for the people of the Commonwealth. In this gratifying attitude he was cordially sustained by Mayor Reyburn, who was a State Senator before he was a Congressman and then Mayor of the metropolis of Pennsylvania. Among other things Governor Stuart said:

"Every American citizen should make it his duty to see that a pure food law as passed is a pure food law in every sense of the word. It is the duty of the officials of the state, above everything else, to protect the people; to see to it that their health is safeguarded in every possible manner. It is through the health of the people that a state may become great. I am against everything that is detrimental to the health of the people of Pennsylvania, and I urge upon you gentlemen, in a line of business whose influence will be strongly felt in such matters, to give to the State of Pennsylvania the purest food possible, and thus remove the menace that will in time have its effect upon our citizens. Get together and do what you can to bring this about. It is one of the important things that cannot longer be left undone."

The Bulletin is gratified at the opportunity to print these strong and timely remarks from the state's chief executive concerning a matter of such urgent importance as the food of the people. It is undoubtedly true that the preservation of free institutions depends upon the character of the people. It is also true that the quality of a people's food largely determines national destiny. That food should not be rich and luxurious, nor should it be adulterated with foreign substances or poisoned with chemical preservatives. In the first instance intellectual, moral and physical feebleness would result; in the second instance the blood of the consumer is poisoned and he loses courage and energy. Rome perished because her patricians were overfed and her plebians underfed. We have neither patricians nor plebians in this free land, fortunately, but we do have manufacturers of food stuffs who are not unwilling to foist upon the consuming public food and drink that are unfit for human use because of the nature of some of the ingredients they contain. That is the condition of affairs Governor Stuart urges the grocers and importers to help remedy.

UPON WHOM DOES THE BLAME REST?

The Bulletin has never felt that any considerable number of the grocers of the country were disposed to sell the consuming public counterfeit or adulterated food. Some there are, of course, who cannot be trusted, but they constitute so insignificant a minority that it would be a comparatively easy matter to suppress them if it were not for certain other factors in the case. These are the one that embarrass food officials, get entirely innocent persons into more or less serious trouble and compel the enactment and enforcement of pure food regulations.

In the first place, the consuming public is very largely responsible. There has been, there still is, a craze for cheap things among consumers. The housekeeper is naturally disposed to economy. That element in her nature has been cunningly catered to by shrewd advertisers until it has become the predominant trait of character in many. It is too much the custom to jump to the conclusion that an article is a bargain because it is advertised at a remarkably low price. It has been too much the fashion in the past to patronize the man who sells cheap goods, without reference to their real value.

Suppose two grocers announce to their patrons that they have a certain article of household necessity in stock. They may extol the merits of their goods in eloquent language, or they may simply announce the articles with the price attached. But one's goods may sell for two cents a pound less than the other's. The average consumer will patronize the cheaper store, without reference to the difference in the quality of the goods. And yet the article that costs two cents more than its rival may be so far ahead of the other in nourishing qualities as to be worth far more than the difference in price to the consumer. So that the cheaper article turns out to be costlier than its rival, after all. This fact is demonstrated in the markets of your town every working day in the year.

This desire for cheap things works evil in another way. Certain manufacturers who have a natural desire to cater to the cheap trade put up inferior goods and sell them to the retailer at a very moderate price. So cheaply do they manufacture this questionable food that they greatly undersell competitors while still making large profits. They offer extra inducements to grocers to handle their goods. The latter know nothing concerning ingredients or processes of manufacture, but the price attracts them because they know it will please their patrons. So you see how the evil thing works. We must begin the work of reform with the housekeeper.

AGITATION COUNTS.

Under the above title the Chicago Tribune of a recent date indulges in the following remarks: "There should be more discussion of health topics in the churches, schools, lodges, labor union meetings, and societies of Chicago. And these should bear fruit in the shape of plans suggested for securing better health conditions in every community."

That is a timely suggestion. The Bulletin trusts it will bear fruit not only in the city by the lake, but also in many other communities in this republic. The health of the people is a matter of the utmost importance. Much has been done during the last quarter of a century by way of securing better sanitary conditions, and as a result the life of a generation has been perceptibly lengthened. Fifty years ago the average lifetime of a generation was thirty-three years, now it is forty. The gain is largely the result of a better knowledge of the laws of health.

One of the important factors in the problem of good health is the food supply. If the milk furnished the infant be pure many of the diseases common to childhood will be avoided and a much larger proportion of infants will survive than would be the case when impure milk is furnished. For that reason every household having children among its members should know what kind of milk is being supplied. It is pretty well established by this time, also that cheap food, or food that has been adulterated by the admixture of some foreign substance, is not as nutritious as that which contains no admixture. Nor is it possible for the average man or woman to consume preserved food without feeling the effects of it sooner or later.

Why should not the churches, the schools, the lodges, the labor unions, the country literary societies take up the food question from time to time for serious discussion? From a material standpoint the preservation of the human body's vigor to the latest possible period is a matter of very great importance. Why not discuss the national food and drugs act and the state laws regulating food products, their manufacture and sale? Why not have a committee of the society for the purpose of looking up data on all sides of this important question and bringing them before the society from time to time? There are other much less important topics, some of them hoary with age, that are brought up for discussion from time to time. Some of them are of no earthly importance. But the food question is a matter of perennial importance. The body lives by what it feeds upon and the vigor of the mind depends largely upon the health of the body. Hence the value of knowledge to the family and the individual.

THE LAW AND A GOVERNOR.

The law is section 1 of Chapter 33 of the statutes of Wisconsin. The Governor is the chief executive of that commonwealth. The section of the law mentioned prescribes that "no person, firm or corporation shall, by himself or by his agents or servants, manufacture, sell, ship, consign, offer for sale, expose for sale or have in his possession with intent to sell for use or consumption within the state any article of food within the meaning of Section 4.600 of the statutes of 1898, and laws amendatory thereof, which contains formaldehyde, sulphurous acid or sulphites," etc. Some time ago the Louisiana Sugar and Rice Exchange and the National Molasses and Refiners' Association held a conference with the governor and the food commission of Wisconsin for the purpose of getting their views on the meaning of the section quoted. They wanted to know whether the use of sulphites in the manufacture of syrups and molasses is contrary to the law of that state. Now, since the manufacturers admitted that their products contain sulphites, and since the act of assembly seems to prohibit the use of the same, it looks as though the answer ought to be comparatively easy. But the governor declared that the question of the manufacturers could not be answered until the state chemist had completed an analysis of the articles mentioned and found out what they really contain. He declared that Wisconsin will take no backward step and that if their products are found to contain substances forbidden by the law of the state their sale would be forbidden.

In discussing this episode the Food Law Bulletin, of Chicago, expresses the conviction that "this case illustrates the fallacy of incorporating into food laws the prohibition of substances concerning the harmfulness of which there is doubt." But a cynic who looks over our shoulder as we write asserts that it might much more appropriately be said to illustrate the tendency of officialdom in some sections of the country to postpone enforcement of an act of assembly from fear that the powerful interests opposed to enforcement might make trouble in the future. It is not the province of this Bulletin to do more at this time than to note the facts and to express cordial and complete agreement with the declaration of the Food Law Bulletin that "food laws should be made to be enforced." With the following declaration, that "nothing should be put into them which is not based upon thorough, exact and unbiased knowledge," we are likewise in accord. But this does not mean that nothing should be put into the law to which certain manufacturers and their attorneys file strenuous exceptions. For in some instances the "knowledge" which moves them to opposition is neither thorough nor exact, not to say unbiased.

PURE FOOD AND DECENT FOOD.

Discussing the relations of the national food and drugs act to the health of the consuming public, as well as in various other aspects, under the above heading, "The Outlook" suggests that one of the best results of the operation of the pure food law has been to make it possible for people to learn for themselves what prepared food products are mixed with chemicals and what not, and to decide, apart from any question of possible poisoning, which kind they prefer to eat. There are certain chemical questions concerning which, among scientists, some doubt may exist as to their injurious effects; yet if even these are used, the label on the bottle or package must state the fact. Now, it is urged, with much force and truth, that even where chemicals used for preservative reasons are not in themselves poisonous, yet their use allows the manufacturer to put up inferior fruit, or meat, or what not, and even to put up refuse material—in some cases it is alleged that the material rejected and thrown on the floor when putting up the superior brands is swept up and included in goods of the cheaper brand. If it is true that the use of chemical preservatives allows such abominations to go undetected, then the consumer may well, for his own sake, refuse to buy tinned or bottled food products when the label shows, in however small print, that a chemical preservative has been used. But this raises another question, namely: Is it possible to put food products on the market without the use of chemical preservatives?

Here we find another exceedingly encouraging result of the pure food law: several of the larger and better known manufacturers of such products, actuated evidently both by genuine interest in the consumer's welfare and by a sound commercial instinct, have declared that in most if not in all cases the use of preservatives is quite unnecessary. Every housewife knows that fruit, for instance, if carefully selected, with the rejection of all tainted parts, carefully handled, not diluted with water, and protected accurately and positively from the air, will "keep" perfectly well with only the addition of sugar, and, if desired, of spices. What can be done by the ordinary housewife can be done with far more certainty if performed on a large scale with the increased accuracy of measurement, mixing and handling which naturally and necessarily accompanies wholesale manufacture. It is true that some large manufacturers declare that unless chemicals are used there is danger of ptomaine poisoning, and that their rivals who will not use chemicals bring about the same result to some extent by the excessive use of condiments, and that these in turn may serve to conceal the early stages of taint. The best authorities in this country, however, and we may add the practical experience in every household, confirm the reasoning of those who believe that "pure food" means "nothing but food"—that is, no chemicals. Furthermore, the consumer must be very careful not to assume that a chemical is not in fact injurious. Take, for instance, benzoate of soda. The chemist of the Department of Agriculture has never declared that this substance is altogether harmless, and, as we understand it, entertains a contrary belief. Yet, since there is a fair difference of opinion among scientists on this point, and as regards certain other chemical substances used in the preparation of food, their use in limited quantities and with the fact stated on the label has been permitted temporarily. In the meanwhile President Roosevelt has done, in regard to this matter, exactly what he has done as to the question of seaboard or locks for the Panama canal—that is, he has called in, for advice, not for decision, the services of a board of recognized experts. [This article was written before the expert board's report was given to the public.] These experts are not government officials, and have no power to decide questions. They were for many months engaged in a series of thorough scientific analyses of the substances referred to them, and their report will be of value as furnishing a scientific basis for decision, while the government remains perfectly free to follow its own judgment, and, if it desires, to ignore any recommendations by the board. As regards the general use of preservatives we may quote two paragraphs from a recent address by Dr. H. W. Wiley, the Chief of the Bureau of Chemicals, of the Department of Agriculture:

"There is a mistaken notion that preservatives are necessary. There is not a single article of food which in any way is necessary to human nutrition and happiness which cannot be offered for consumption in its best state without the use of any chemical preservative. The experience of reputable manufacturers has shown that all food products for which it is claimed preservatives are a necessity can be manufactured and supplied to the consumer without such adventitious aid.

"Another vice in connection with the use of preservatives in foods is that it is a benefit to the poor man. This, I believe, is the most vicious of the vices. Of all persons who should procure wholesome food, the poor man and the laboring man are the first to be considered. Whenever a food is debased in order to make it cheap, the laboring man pays more for any given nourishment than the rich man who buys the pure food. Why should a poor man buy a spice two-thirds flour, and pay twice as much for the actual spice he gets as if it were pure? Why should the poor man pay approximately the same price for a bottle of catsup made from the sweepings of a tomato factory when he can get a good deal more catsup for the same price in a pure state?"

Meanwhile it may be noted that there have been lately several important decisions relating to pure food questions. The bleached flour matter has already been discussed. Hearings before the Secretary of Agriculture and the Board of Food and Drug Inspection, at which opportunities were given both to the advocates and opponents of the process to express their views, were followed by a decision from Secretary Wilson and the board that flour bleached by nitrogen peroxide is an adulterated product under the law, and cannot be brought within the law by any statement on the label. The sale of bleached flour is therefore forbidden, but as a temporary relief to those who have large stocks on hand, prosecutions will not be recommended for six months; the prohibition, of course, applied as usual, to interstate commerce, the territories, the District of Columbia and foreign commerce, while an exception is made in the last case when the laws of the foreign country do not forbid the sale of the article. Our readers will understand that the objection to this form of bleaching from the consumer's point of view is that by it an inferior grade of flour may be so "doctored" as to make it possible to sell it in competition with really fine grades; but the decision is made possible because of the use of a chemical forbidden under the law as interpreted by the decision. It is interesting to note also in this connection that the Food Commissioner of North Dakota, Dr. Ladd, has just obtained from the courts a decision upholding the constitutionality of the state pure food law which forbids the bleaching of flour under what is known as the Alsop process. Another decision from the food board forbade the entry into this country of vegetables greened with copper salts; but later this was amended to allow the entry, if the label states the fact, and in like manner another decision permits the use of benzoate of soda, provided not over a tenth of one per cent. is used; It is noteworthy that Dr. Wiley declined to sign these decisions because he still maintains that any chemical preservatives in food are unnecessary and, in time, injurious to health. Other interesting facts included by Secretary Wilson in his annual report, which go to show advance in the enforcement of the pure food law, are that during the year the number of branch laboratories has grown from six to twenty-one, that over thirteen thousand samples of food and drugs have been examined by the inspectors, that over eight hundred prosecutions were brought, and only two of these were lost. Adulterated goods seized and confiscated included such things as cider, honey, coffee, flour, syrup, wine, beer, vinegar, and canned fruit and vegetables. A large number of seizures of whiskey have been made under the opinion of the Attorney General that whiskey made from neutral spirits is misbranded if labeled as straight or blended whiskey. How the interest of the consumer is protected is indicated by such facts as that a dealer of eggs was fined $100 in every case where he had sold stale eggs labeled "fresh," and that the same penalty was inflicted on a man who sold canned goods weighing less than the figures stated on the label, while a much-advertised "skin-food" was shown by analysis to be made up solely of Epsom salts and a pink dye.

WITHOUT THE USE OF CHEMICALS.

The short paper by Professor Steifel in which he tells about a "find" of eatable catsup nineteen years old, shows that catsup can be kept for a long time if it be properly prepared and secured from the intrusion of air, and that without the employment of chemical preservatives. It is true that once the receptacle is opened and the catsup exposed to the air it will not keep very long. But the evidence seems to favor the idea that when it is made of perfect fruit and properly put up it will last the ordinary family quite as long as prudence permits. No food product is the better for venerable age. The fresher it is the better.

BLEACHED FLOUR IN NORTH DAKOTA.

Food Commissioner Ladd, of North Dakota, finds his recent order to millers to discontinue the manufacture and sale of bleached flour somewhat difficult to carry into effect. The millers of the state deny his power to prohibit the manufacture and sale of bleached flour because the courts have not yet passed upon the question. They declare they will defy his order for the present. Just what is going to happen nobody can predict. But it is generally admitted that by means of the bleaching process it is possible to make an inferior flour look like a better grade. Thus the people are deceived and taxed the price of a superior article while receiving an inferior grade.

MANUFACTURERS WARMLY ENDORSE DR. WILEY.

At the first annual meeting of the American Association for the Promotion of Purity in Food Products, composed entirely of manufacturers of food products, strong resolutions were passed protesting against the preservation of food products by means of chemical preservatives and impliedly sustaining the opinions hitherto expressed by Dr. Wiley. The association declared itself unreservedly in favor of the strict enforcement of both the letter and the spirit of the national food and drugs act of 1906. It completed its organization, it declares, for the purpose of aiding the federal authorities in enforcing this act.

ONE TRADE JOURNAL'S VIEW.

The "Retailer's Journals," published in Chicago, referring to the recent opinion of the referee board appointed by the President to consider the effect of benzoate of soda upon the human body, says: "We believe that manufacturers should be permitted to use a certain percentage of benzoate of soda, the amount to be determined by competent authorities, but that wherever this or any other like preservative is used, the label must state the fact in plain type so that the consumer may know just what he is buying."

BENZOATE OF SODA IN SODA WATER.

State Food Commissioner A. H. Jones, of Illinois, having been told that many of the fruits and syrups used at soda water fountains in that state are adulterated with benzoate of soda, has issued a bulletin referring to the matter and making certain regulations. He says that soda water is consumed in large quantities by many individuals. Some of these, he takes it for granted would not use soda water so prepared if they were informed of the presence of this preservative. The commissioner accordingly directs that in all such cases there shall be placed in a prominent place a label bearing this inscription in large letters: "The syrups and fruits at this fountain are preserved with one-tenth of one per cent. of benzoate of soda." No prosecutions will be entered against venders who comply with the foregoing regulation. This seems to be a reasonable proposition. The public have the right to be informed.

BUTTER BY THE PRINT.

Under the foregoing heading "The Eli Grocer and General Merchant" tells how the grocers of Kansas has discovered a new way of evading the provisions of the pure food law requiring each package of butter sold by the pound to be of full weight. The practice of selling by the pound has been discontinued and hereafter butter will be sold by the print in the State of Kansas. This will secure a somewhat higher price for the product and make of none effect the law. The journal which furnishes this information adds that the grocers were not to blame for short weight butter in the first instance, the dairymen and farmers from whom they procured it having instituted the short weight practice for the purpose of getting better prices. Some persons will continue to believe in the righteousness of old-fashioned honesty and to practice it in their dealings with their fellows.

CONCERNING NEBRASKA'S FOOD LAW.

Out in the state of Nebraska the wholesale and retail dealers as well as the druggists are very much dissatisfied with the requirements of the pure food law. They declare that it harasses dealers while actually doing nothing to protect the consuming public. As a result they have combined for the purpose of agitating for the repeal of the act and have framed a substitute which is wholly admirable from their standpoint. No legitimate business should be harassed by oppressive or unjust laws; at the same time the state owes its first duty to the people. Pure food should everywhere be demanded on behalf of the consumer.

NOT SPECIALLY HARMONIOUS.

The Grocery World and General Merchant appears to cherish the suspicion that things have not been exactly harmonious among the food and drug officials at Washington during recent months. Among other things it cites the following instance of wavering; The federal board not long ago issued a ruling providing that no artificially colored French vegetables should be admitted to this country after the beginning of the present year. A week later, however, another ruling appeared diametrically contradicting the first and providing that "until further notice vegetables greened with copper salts, but which do not contain an excessive amount of copper, and which are otherwise suitable for food, will be allowed entry into the United States, if the label bears the statement that sulphate of copper or other copper salts have been used to color the vegetables." It is the belief of the Grocery World and General Merchant that "such an unbusinesslike condition will not be permitted to continue very long."

CAREFULLY EXAMINE THE LABELS.

If the scientists differ so widely concerning the effects of certain preservatives on the human body, one set positively declaring that the effect is highly injurious, the other that it is by no means harmful, it can not be wondered at if the common people are hopelessly befogged. Dr. Wiley, as the result of a series of exhaustive experiments, came to the conclusion that sodium benzoate is injurious to the human body and that when it is mixed with food for the purpose of preserving the latter it does harm to the stomach and other organs. Now come the experts of the commission appointed by President Roosevelt who inform us that they also have investigated the effects of this drug by means of three separate "poison squads" and are satisfied it does no harm. Even in very large quantities, they say, it injures nobody who uses it. It is impossible for the unlearned layman to decide between warring experts. The wise man, however, knowing that it is quite possible to preserve food products without the use of sodium benzoate, and preferring to take no risks, will carefully examine the labels on all articles purchased for household use, rejecting those containing the suspicious article. The manufacturers depend upon the carelessness and indifference of the consuming public. A general refusal to purchase preserved or embalmed food would be much more effective in working a change for the better than the most drastic laws. Public sentiment is even more powerful than statutes.

COLLEGE TRAINING FOR WISCONSIN FARMERS.

During the present month of February an interesting experiment has been in progress at the University of Wisconsin college of agriculture. For ten days a school has been conducted for the exclusive benefit of farmers. "The Conservation of Farm Resources" was the principal topic under discussion by the lecturers. Soil, fertility, crops, all matters germane to the subject were discussed by competent instructors and the class of farmers in attendance doubtless gained a great deal of information that will be of the utmost value to them in their future operations on their farms. It has come to be generally understood that there is a scientific method of farming as there is of doing other divisions of the world's work. Four county high schools in the state have also introduced special courses for the benefit of farmers, to be given during the winter.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The best food products are invariably the cheapest in the end.

Impure food is usually dear at any price, as its victims discover.

The grocer who keeps his store looking tidy gets the best custom.

Several of the states are beginning to issue interesting bulletins.

Every citizen ought to be on confidential terms with his grocer.

The pure food laws simply seek to induce manufacturers to be truthful.

There is a natural and invincible public repugnance to embalmed food.

This Bulletin seeks to promote the welfare of consumers. It solicits the advice of its readers.

Whenever a manufacturer undertakes to deceive the public he commits a wrong which law should punish.

All laws should be enforced with discretion; education is better than punishment.

After all, there's nothing to surpass the natural preservatives exclusively used by our good old grandmothers.

The merchant who is always good-natured and accomodating and who sells first class goods is likely to succeed anywhere.

The leading newspapers of the country are outspoken against the effort to drive Dr. Wiley into private life.

Pennsylvanians are looking to the present legislature to perfect the state's shattered food laws.

It should be made unlawful in Pennsylvania to sell adulterated drinks, whether alcoholic or non-alcoholic.

Cold storage products need to be handled with care by the man with a delicate stomach.

The various state food commissioners are doing much to promote the welfare of the consuming public.

Many of the daily newspapers, including the most influential, are now devoting much attention to the important topic of pure food.

An occasional grocer who insists upon purchasing "cheap" cider vinegar, innocent of apple juice, falls into the toils.

It is the experience of those who violate law that transgressions are costly episodes in business life.

The very fact that any article is an imitation of a better one is an argument against it.

Every citizen has the undoubted liberty to eat adulterated food if he prefer it, but it is his right to know that it is adulterated.

After all, the wise manufacturer of food products understands that it doesn't pay to put out inferior or dangerous goods.

It is worth a good deal to any manufacturer to have established an international reputation for the superior quality of his goods.

A nation of healthy men and women must be a happy and a prosperous nation. And that's what we seek in America.

He who knowingly degrades the food of a people for the sake of larger profit deserves the severest punishment.

The vigilant scrutiny of food products by the housekeeper will do much to make an end of the adulteration habit.

There has been a decided improvement in the quality of the milk sold in this state in recent years; still eternal vigilance is the price of safety.

Men and women are sometimes compelled to purchase cheap goods, but it is well to remember that the craze for cheap things has done much harm.

The individual who recklessly tampers with the health of the consuming public for the sake of gain is nothing better than a criminal. That is the reason law should seek him out and punish him.

The farmers of Pennsylvania are encouraged by the vinegar law to manufacture good vinegar from the pure juice of the apple. They should be patronized.

The people of Pennsylvania expect their representatives to do their duty in the making of food and drink laws; they are not likely to be disappointed.

Our large cities contain so many varieties of human nature that it is not surprising that some persist in making trouble for themselves by violating the food laws.

The health of the people is a matter of supreme importance in a free state. For healthy bodies are usually essential to sound minds.

The manufacture of "lemonade" from acid should be impossible in this state during the coming summer without incurring the risk of severe punishment.

The retail dealer who always keeps a sufficient supply of first class food products and tells his customers the exact truth soon wins a reputation for reliability which his rivals may well envy.

In every section of our great country the people are growing more and more concerned for the enforcement of the laws regulating the manufacture and sale of food and drink.

While the interests of dealers must be considered and nothing done to oppress the innocent, yet the interests of the consumer are paramount.

It may be true that prudence requires one to rise from the table while still slightly hungry; it certainly is true that one should insist upon having pure article of diet on the menu.

Whatever may be the present outlook, the people mean that the pure food laws, state and nation, shall be strengthened and enforced.

The sentiment of the people of Pennsylvania is very pronounced in behalf of reasonable regulations that will prevent the adulteration of their food.

The Dairy and Food Division is maintained by an annual appropriation. The receipts of the office are turned into the state treasury.

Very few of the grocers of Pennsylvania would knowingly sell food that has been adulterated or poisoned by the addition of foreign substances. The law is for the few.

The people of this state are entitled to butter when they ask for it. Oleomargarine may be sold so long as it goes under its own name. The law forbids deception.

The newspapers of the country are devoting a constantly increasing amount of space and attention to the discussion of the food question. And they are almost all on the right side.

In the enforcement of food laws there should be no vacillating. An official who does not know his own mind is pretty likely to bring the law into disrepute.

The label increasingly tells the truth, although it sometimes tells it in terms not readily understood by the average consumer. Schools for the proper education of the housekeeper might be profitably established in most communities.

The unselfish men and women who devote a considerable portion of their lives to laboring for the improvement of the food supply of the country deserve well of their fellow citizens. The improved conditions existing at present are largely the result of their labors.

National legislators are not likely to take any backward step in the amendment of the food and drugs act. To do so would be fatal to their future prospects. That is a substantial sign of continued progress.

Leslie's Weekly appears to have taken a brief for the food adulterators. It has recently been indulging in some very foolish comparisons and declarations; so foolish indeed as to deceive nobody who doesn't want to be deceived.

Rumor continues to report the impending retirement of Dr. Wiley from the position he has so long and so ably occupied under the Secretary of Agriculture. But rumor has been at this sort of work for a long time and the fact has always proved her a false prophet.

When a public official is hated in certain quarters because he insists upon protection for the people in the matter of food and drink, the people are warranted in drawing conclusions unfavorable to the haters.

It is merely a reasonable proposition which requires every article of food offered for sale to have a label on the package which contains it plainly setting forth what it is and the nature of its ingredients.

Persons who persist in selling colored oleomargarine as yellow butter are sure to get into trouble with both the state and the national authorities. And they deserve all the punishment inflicted upon them.

While it may be true that the average householder has a natural right to select his own food, it is also true that it is his right to be fully informed concerning the nature, the ingredients and the probable effects of the particular food which he selects.

The agents of the Dairy and Food Division are the servants and helpers of the people of the state. They seek to serve the greatest number in the most effective way and are always grateful for the encouragement and assistance they receive by the way.

The various trade journals of the country are edited with much ability. Every business man should read one or more regularly, and the housekeeper who has the privilege of looking over one from time to time will derive great benefit therefrom.

Bringing a civil suit against an individual who has conspired against the health of you and your family by agreeing to sell damaged or adulterated articles of food isn't the best way of putting a stop to such nefarious proceedings.

There are some schemers after sudden wealth who cannot be induced to treat the consuming public on the square unless confronted by danger of imprisonment and a heavy fine; either or both. They will go crooked unless adequate punishment threatens them.

Out in Minneapolis a milk inspector, acting under the authority of the city health department, recently had his assistants dump 630 gallons of milk in the Mississippi river because the herds it came from had not been inspected, as required by a city ordinance.

The traffic in spoiled eggs has received somewhat of a reverse during the last few weeks. There is some reason to believe that it has got its death blow in this state. It is a particularly disreputable business, without a single redeeming quality.

Perhaps there are few more nauseating scoundrelisms existing than the very profitable one of buying spoiled eggs by the barrel and then selling them to bakers and others who use them in cakes and pastry, without any qualms of conscience. It is hoped to speedily break up this nefarious traffic in Pennsylvania.

Let us indulge the hope that the Legislature of Pennsylvania will enact at the present session every law that seems essential to the proper enforcement of pure food and drink regulations. We are in a chaotic condition in Pennsylvania on account of recent decisions of the courts and we need to have the kinks straightened out.

There is much reason to believe that the representatives of the people in state and nation are in sympathy with the urgent desire of their constituents for the enactment of such laws regulating the manufacture and sale of articles of food and drink as will prevent the marketing of impure and dangerous products.

It is not interfering with private business to insist that the manufacturer of food products shall refrain from using ingredients which are injurious to the stomach and other organs of the human body. It is simply providing a proper protection for the innocent consumer.

Occasionally some thoughtless individual or corporation falls into the clutches of the federal government. Thus not very long ago a co-operative creamery located in Minnesota was compelled to pay a fine of $900 for violating the national law regulating the moisture contents of butter.

The current number of the Grange News, organ of the Patrons of Husbandry in Pennsylvania, comes out under the editorial direction of Representative William T. Creasy, Worthy Master of the State Grange. The new editor starts off with all the precision and facility of a veteran.

The various local associations of retail merchants in Pennsylvania are doing an admirable work, not only on behalf of their members, but also for the advantage of the general public. In some places they are performing the functions of a board of trade, much to the benefit of business.

The offense of oleomargarine dealers who are confronted by the law they have violated is not that they have sold oleomargarine, but that they have made it to resemble yellow butter and sold it as such to the unsuspecting consumer. There is no law against the sale of oleomargarine in its natural state and under its own name. It is attempted deception the law forbids.

The housekeeper should never neglect to look at the label. She should post herself on the significance of labels and then look for them every time she makes a purchase. Thus will she protect the health of her family, encourage manufacturers to make and grocers to sell pure goods and assist in the enforcement of pure food regulations.

The dairymen are sometimes tempted to rebel against the restrictions imposed upon them by state law and regulations of local boards of health. But as this Bulletin has observed upon other occasions, they have the health and the lives of the rising generation largely entrusted to their keeping; hence the necessity for the utmost caution.

Out in Los Angeles the city councils have enacted an ordinance undertaking to regulate the sale of butter. The ordinance forbids the sale of any print butter "otherwise than in terms of pounds or ounces avoirdupois." That is to say, every package of print butter sold must specifically declare how many ounces or pounds it contains.

Minnesota's new State Dairy and Food Commissioner, Andrew French, of Plainview, that state, assumed the duties of his office with the beginning of the present year, succeeding E. K. Slater. He has been a member of the state legislature and has for years taken a prominent part in legislation affecting the interests of the farmers of Minnesota.

The food authorities of the nation and the several states must depend largely upon the head of the household for timely assistance in creating public sentiment against impure or adulterated foodstuffs and in favor of the best that can be made. Grocers will only too gladly fall into line if their patrons will only encourage them by buying the best.

The painstaking householder who insists upon investigating the quality of every article of food she purchases for the use of her family is the best friend the pure food laws have. When she becomes so numerous as to be in the majority in every community a great light will dawn upon those food manufacturers who find themselves unable to rest satisfied with modern conditions and the problem of harmless food for the masses will be solved.

It is a shame that there is as yet no protection for the children of the poorer sections of the city during the sweltering months from the venders of dangerous "soft" drinks. Anybody who will take the trouble to procure and analyze some of the soda water, pop, lemonade and other drinks sold to poor children at a penny a glass will conclude that a law regulating the sale of beverages and punishing its violation is badly needed. [Since the foregoing was written the law has come.]

Much credit is due the public-spirited men and women who stand up, in season and out of season, in defense of the rigid enforcement of pure food and pure drink laws, and who freely spend their own time and money in the punishment of offenders against law and in the creation of a healthy public sentiment. They will have their reward in the grateful plaudits of future generations should their own age forget to honor them.

The very decided reduction in infant mortality in various sections of the country last summer was largely due to the improved quality of the milk sold by dairymen. There is nothing more wholesome than pure milk; there is nothing more deadly in its effects, especially upon very young children, than poisoned milk. And few food products are more easily made unfit for use by human beings than milk. That is why health and dairy authorities insist upon so many precautions in the dairy and the home.

Under certain limitations cold storage of eggs and poultry is all right. But too long retained in the cold storage chambers a mysterious change occurs which unfits the stored article for human food, often converting it into virulent poison. That is the reason many reflecting citizens insist upon the law imposing a limit of time after the expiration of which cold storage shall be unlawful. This may be offensive to those who employ the cold storage process, but the health of the people must be considered above everything else.

The city of Rochester is also about to enact an ordinance which is expected to do something for the folks who want full measure and good quality when they purchase strawberries in the spring. The city sealers of weights and measures wants the councils to enact an ordinance he has prepared forbidding the facing of fruit, vegetables and merchandise. That is to say the vender who puts the best and biggest strawberries on top will be guilty of an offense. The Rochester grocers are opposing the proposed local law, however, and it may never become effective.

The legislature of Louisiana recently gave the state board of health authority to make rules and regulations having all the force of law. The board has prepared a decidedly drastic code which went into effect at the beginning of the year. Some question whether a legislature has the right to delegate to another body the power to make laws affecting the entire state and the matter may yet be taken into the courts for decision. Very good lawyers hold that a legislative body cannot delegate its powers to a commission or a board of any sort. Others disagree with this view.

It will be a splendid moment in the history of our state when we return to the primitive methods of our grandparents or their parents before them. Then we will eat uncolored butter at the proper season of the year and take our preserves and catsups soberly, their preparation having been made with the natural spices and preservatives that hurt neither man nor his food. We will get genuine buttermilk to drink, too, instead of the manufactured article and in every way our situation will be better. Not that we believe the former times were better than these, but that the old-fashioned methods of making butter and of preserving fruits and vegetables and making catsup have never been improved upon.

A FAR REACHING DECISION.

The following report of a very important decision is taken from the Washington Evening Star:

That benzoate of soda used as a food preservative is not injurious to health is the judgment of the referee board of consulting experts of which Dr. Ira Remsen, president of Johns Hopkins University, is chairman. This conclusion, which has been approved by Secretary Wilson, reverses the findings of Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry.

Three separate investigations were made by the board, which, it is stated, were in close agreement in all essential features.

The main general conclusions reached by the referee board are as follows:

First. Sodium benzoate in small doses (under 0.5 gram per day) mixed with the food is without deleterious or poisonous action and is not injurious to health.

Second. Sodium benzoate in large doses (up to 4 grams per day) mixed with the food has not been found to exert any deleterious effect on the general health, nor to act as a poison in the general acceptance of the term. In some directions there were slight modifications in certain physiological processes, the exact significance of which modifications is not known.

Third. The admixture of sodium benzoate with food in small or large doses has not been found to injuriously affect or impair the quality or nutritive value of such food.

This is the first victory for the food manufacturers who want to use benzoate of soda as a preservative. The chemical had been used for a long time, unknown to the general public, in pickles, catsups various sorts of preserved fruits and vegetables, and in the fillings for pies. This filling is manufactured by the barrel and sold to many bakeries, which get the filling for mince pies, apple and peach pies, and many other sorts in barreled form, and spoon it out as they need it.

The principal object of the manufacturers in using a preservative is to put up a compound that will not spoil too soon after the original package is opened. Any one who has done home preserving knows that cooking and putting in an airtight receptacle will preserve most food for a long time, but when a jar or a can is once opened the contents have to be used or it will spoil.

Dr. Wiley held that benzoate of soda was essentially harmful, and that its use ought to be prohibited altogether. The referee board has decided that it is not harmful, and that its use can be permitted, if the fact that it is used and the amount used is stated on the package.

The decision just approved by the Secretary of Agriculture was made by Ira Remsen, president of Johns Hopkins University; Russell H. Chittenden, director of the Sheffield scientific school of Yale University and professor of physiological chemistry of Yale University; John H. Long, professor of chemistry, medical school, Northwestern University; C. A. Herter, professor physiological chemistry College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, and Alonzo E. Taylor, professor of pathology, University of California.

Dr. Wiley has not changed his opinion as to the harmful nature of benzoate of soda and the manufacturers are not so very much better off than they were before, for they had been allowed to use one-half of 1 per cent. of benzoate, pending the report of the referee board. The consumer is just in about the same position he was before, but he will have the satisfaction of knowing from the label on the jar how much of the preservative he is consuming.

CONCERNING BENZOATE OF SODA.

In another part of this number of the Bulletin will be found an extract from the Washington Star giving a synopsis of the report of the special commission appointed by the president to look into the nature and effects of benzoate of soda. Almost every newspaper in the country has had something to say about this decision. Some cordially endorse the action of the commission and congratulate the manufacturers who were back of the effort to have Dr. Wiley over-ruled upon the notable victory they have won. Others accept the verdict of the commission with some regret, but they regard it as conclusive because of the high character of the scientists who unanimously join in it, and express the hope that Dr. Wiley will be good enough American to yield gracefully to the will of the majority. They almost always conclude with the hope that the doctor will not resign but will remain at the head of the chemical bureau. Of his honesty and his entire sincerity in the fight he has made for pure food they entertain no doubt. But an overwhelming majority of the newspapers that come under our observation take sides with Dr. Wiley and express regret over the complications that are likely to ensue. We give some extracts from the editorial page of the Scranton Times as expressive of the views of many other editors throughout this and other states:

"Dr. Wiley, the government chemist, after experimenting for weeks with a so-called 'poison squad'—young men who were willing for pay to eat foods in which the benzoate of soda was used as a preservative for a stated period, during which the effect of the preservative might be seen in the human system—announced that the soda was poisonous, deleterious to health, weakened the stomach, brought on dyspepsia, etc. Then an outside board was appointed by the department of agriculture, and these experts determined that the benzoate of soda was harmless, and Secretary Wilson stands by the decision. This committee of 'experts' was appointed at the request of manufacturers who had been using benzoate of soda, and who were dissatisfied with Dr. Wiley's ruling. That Dr. Wiley is an honest man, and a thoroughly competent expert, no one doubts. He has been fighting this pure food battle for years. And in the performance of his duty he found that this drug was injurious when mixed with food products.

"In cases involving expert testimony the personal point of view is always a large factor. So we are inclined to believe that the people will be very strongly inclined to uphold Dr. Wiley. One thing they know, and that is, though subjected to great pressure, he has stood resolutely for what he believed to be the welfare of the people. To him the pure food law seemed to be one that ought to be vigorously enforced. No doubt he knew, better than most, how easy it is for great interests to get round and nullify any law that interfered with their profits. The men who opposed this law have been "after" him for years. Dr. Wiley has no possible motive to misrepresent matters. He found what he conceived to be the truth. His sole desire has been to protect the neglected consumer. And he feels that even if there is a doubt, that doubt should be resolved in favor of the people rather than of the interests.

"As the Indianapolis News remarks, this finding of the outside board will no doubt have the effect of leading to other assaults on the law. Already we have a decision that for the present vegetables greened with copper salts may be imported into the country. This is another letdown. Unless we are careful we are likely to see the pure food law practically nullified. That there are powerful interests that want to draw the teeth out of it every one knows. Under such conditions we should think that the government would be glad that it could command the services of as brave and determined a man as Dr. Wiley. But this does not seem to be the case. There are likely to be many appeals and no one can really know what this boasted law forbids or permits. It all depends on construction, and on the testimony of men employed to decide a certain case."

THAT REFEREE BOARD.

Elsewhere the Bulletin gives a synopsis of the report of the special referee board to whom was referred the question of the harmfulness or the reverse of benzoate of soda as a preservative of food products, as well as an expression of opinion from one of the state papers, representative of the general trend of editorial sentiment among the dailies of the country. Herewith is given an editorial from "The Eli Grocer and General Merchant," representing the opinion of some of the trade journals:

"There is no man who likes to have his opinions contradicted flat-footedly and his decisions reversed, much less a man of the calibre and stamp of Dr. H. W. Wiley, Chief of the Food and Drug Department. It has been announced that the Referee Board of Chemists appointed by President Roosevelt over a year ago, has at last made a report and that it is entirely adverse to the ruling of Dr. Wiley. In making this decision this board is evidently fulfilling the purpose for which it was created—namely, to throttle the zealous efforts of the Chief Chemist, who has been criticised for his "pernicious activity." In other words, for trying to carry out his honest (we believe) convictions instead of taking his cue and retiring from the front of the stage, confining his attention entirely to the box-office and his pay envelope. That he has not done so is common knowledge and the action taken is pretty generally endorsed by the common people, and since we find ourselves in this same class which retain an element of "hero worship" we cannot resist the impulse to verbally slap Dr. Wiley on the back and in football parlance say, "Tear 'em up, old man."

"Dr. Wiley may be radical, we suspect that there is little doubt of it in the minds of most food manufacturers, and we are inclined to agree with them. However, there will always be radical and there will always be conservative minds and it is a debatable question which serves the most useful purpose rather than which accomplishes the most.

"We presume it is entirely proper to employ the highest chemical authorities such as compose the present Referee Board, in dealing with the food supply of the nation. The pendulum of reform swings to the extreme and we suppose the American people are willing to pay the $60,000 that the board cost last year for its decision on benzoate of soda and some likewise important subjects yet to be reported on.

"Chemists like other mortals disagree on subjects, and it would appear that the higher up they go, the more their opinions converge, and so the composite opinion of a number of them is no doubt the safest one upon which to base the laws of a nation, provided of course the majority are honest in their convictions.

"But why have a system that is not harmonious, that one department reverses the decisions of another, thus keeping commercial interests in a turmoil. A radical opinion or ruling loses half its sting when it is accepted as something permanent. It is knowledge that a law may change suddenly that makes it hard to enforce and a burden when it is enforced.

"Every ruling made should stand any and all tests and be infallible. If pure food chemistry is such a doubtful subject, put these renowned chemists in the department and let them have their bouts in private announcing only the decisions.

"What consumers want and what manufacturers and retailers will welcome is rulings that conform with the laws, common sense and then chemistry. And then men with the courage of Wiley."

AN OLD KETCHUP.

By H. C. STIEFAL, Ph. D., Pittsburg, Pa.

Nineteen years ago Mrs. G. F., Pittsburg, made several gallons of ketchup and stored the same in "pop" bottles in the cellar.

After her death, the same year, no more ketchup was made in the family. The stock on hand was used up in due course of time, with the exception of one single bottle that had been placed so carefully out of the way that it was overlooked until a few weeks ago.

When Mr. H. F., the son, found the bottle he brought it to the laboratory with the request that I analyze the ketchup and see what changes it had undergone in nineteen years.

The bottle containing the ketchup was an old time "pop" bottle, eight ounce capacity, closed with common cork held down by a heavy wire. The neck of the bottle had been dipped in melted sealing wax; after filling and corking, this wax covering was smooth and unbroken. Color of the ketchup was a clear chocolate brown, consistency that of a good normal article. Odor on opening was pleasant (clove odor very pronounced).

No bacteria whatever were present. Tests with gelatine, agar-agar, beef broth with glucose, milk, and water gave negative results. The sterilization was absolutely perfect.

No doubt the filling had been carried out in the usual household way, the bottles placed in cold water first. This was then heated to boiling and then the hot ketchup was filled into the hot bottles, corked while hot and sealed.

On the day I opened the bottle I took it along at noon to a Grab and Gobble lunch room and placed it on the counter beside my dishes. I ate about an ounce of it and must confess that it wasn't so very bad. It was eatable. My neighbor tried some of it also. As he made no remarks about it I take it for granted that he took it to be some of the usual lunch counter ketchup (if he reads this will know better and will perhaps hunt me up to argue the question) thinned down with a little vinegar.

This find has simply shown again that if ketchup is made out of good materials and packed properly it will keep without fermentation even if no benzoate of soda is added.

RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

AS TO FOODS AND CONDIMENTS.

Rule 1. The use of coal tar dye or other foreign coloring matter in catsup or other condiments is regarded with disfavor, and catsup found to contain such coloring matter in connection with benzoate of soda will be regarded as adulterated and treated accordingly.

Rule 2. The use of boric acid, salicylic acid or sulphites in meats or other articles of food will be regarded as an adulteration and treated accordingly. Any poisonous or deleterious preservative or coloring matter applied externally which has been permitted to permeate or penetrate the meat or other food product, or any portion thereof, will be regarded as an adulteration.

Rule 3. Until otherwise ordered articles of food imported from countries which have been found to be in compliance with the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, will not be regarded as sold in violation of the laws of Pennsylvania.

Rule 4. Pepper and all other spices containing any added or foreign substances whatsoever will be regarded as adulterated.

Rule 5. Milk will be regarded as adulterated when any portion of the butter fat has been removed therefrom or when water has been added thereto.

Cream containing less than 16 per cent. of butter fat will be regarded as adulterated.

Ice cream must be true to name, and must not contain less than 12 per cent. butter fat, together with sugar and pure fruit flavor. Eggs and a small amount of gelatin may be used.

AS TO CONFECTIONERY.

Rule 6. Mineral substances of all kinds are especially forbidden in confectionery, whether poisonous or not. Only harmless colors or flavors should be added to confectionery.

The term "narcotic drugs" include all drugs mentioned in section 8 of the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, relating to foods, their derivatives and preparation, and all other drugs of a narcotic nature.

AS TO MISBRANDING.

Rule 7. The provisions of the act of June 1, 1907, as to the misbranding of food, will be strictly observed and rigidly enforced.

The principal label on articles of food shall be in English, with type not smaller than 8-point (brevier) caps: Provided, That in case the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type the size of the type may be reduced proportionately.

Descriptive matter upon the label shall be free from any statement, design, or device regarding the article or the ingredients or substances contained therein, or quality thereof, or place of origin, which is false or misleading in any particular.

Jellies, fruit butters, fruit jams, or other like products shall not be labeled with the name of any distinctive fruit unless such fruit alone has been used in its preparation. Articles intended as substitutes for pure food jellies, butters, jams and other like products, shall be plainly marked as compounds, and the several ingredients shall be plainly stated thereon, and the name of no distinctive fruit shall be used upon the label thereof to indicate its flavor.

Prepared mustard shall bear upon the label thereof a distinct statement of all the ingredients and the percentage of mustard contained therein.

Flavoring extracts must be true to name. Imitation flavoring extracts shall not be designated by terms which indicate in any way by similarity of name that they were prepared from a natural fruit or from a standard flavor.

Flavoring extracts in the preparation of which any substances are employed for natural fruits or standard flavors shall not be labeled as if prepared from standard flavors or from the fruits themselves.

GUARANTEE.

The guarantee referred to in the new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, should in all cases be a written or printed invoice guarantee upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor and substantially in the following language, to wit:

I (or we) the vendor of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the federal act of June 30, 1906, popularly known as the "Foods and Drugs Act," and also further hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the act of General Assembly of Pennsylvania, popularly known as "the new Pennsylvania Food Law," approved June 1, 1907, in that said articles are not adulterated within the meaning of the aforesaid act of Congress or the aforesaid act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, and that the said articles are not misbranded within the meaning of either of the said acts.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAIL DEALERS.

The new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, is intended to protect retail dealers in food products. In order to avail themselves of this protection it is important that every retail dealer shall secure from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes purchases, a signed guarantee of each invoice of goods. In order that the goods may be subsequently identified, it is important that the date of purchase be marked upon the goods secured under each invoice. Where the goods are contained in separate packages, this identification can readily be secured by the use of a rubber stamp giving the date of purchase. Unless the retail dealer is able to identify with absolute certainty the vendor from whom his goods were procured, the act will not protect him. This will require the greatest care, not only in marking the date of purchase, but in keeping the articles purchased from different manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers bearing the same brand, entirely apart from each other, so that at any time the identification of the vendor of each article can be clearly established. It is equally important that the retail dealer shall keep the articles purchased in precisely the same condition as when they are received. A failure to distinctly identify the vendor, or to clearly prove that articles purchased have been kept in the exact condition as to quality as when purchased, will deprive the retail dealer of any protection.

When an agent of the Dairy and Food Division calls upon a retail dealer, it is requested and confidently expected that courtesy will be exercised both by the dealer and the agent.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

N. B. CRITCHFIELD,
Secretary of Agriculture.

Rules Nos. 8, 9 and 10.

(Issued July 1, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 1 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 8, LARD. RULE 9, FRUIT OR NUT ICE CREAM. RULE 10, MEATS AND FISH.

Rule 8. Lard must contain no ingredient but the pure fat of swine. Any foreign substance will constitute an adulteration and will be treated accordingly.

Rule 9. Fruit or nut ice cream must be true to name and must not contain less than 10 per cent. of butter fat together with sugar, eggs and a small amount of gelatine, not exceeding three (3) ounces to ten gallons of cream.

The foregoing rule applies where fruit (fresh or canned) or nuts are used for flavoring.

Rule 10. Meats and fish must at all times be kept in a pure, clean and healthful condition.

In the summer season they must be covered or protected from flies and insects by screens or other device, and must be kept at such temperature as will absolutely prevent any decomposition.

Refrigerators and ice boxes for the storage of meats and fish must be kept well iced and clean.

Stores, market houses and all rooms used for the storage or sale of meats and fish must be clean, properly ventilated and kept in a sanitary condition.

Any meat or fish not so cared for will be considered in violation and treated accordingly.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rule No. 11.

(Issued September 25, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 2, TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE NO. 11. EVAPORATED FRUITS.

Rule 11. It should be understood by the trade and the public that Rule 2, specifically referring to meat and other articles of food, covers evaporated fruits, and that if said fruits contain any added substance or ingredient which is poisonous or injurious to health, such as sulphurous acid, the sale thereof will be treated as a violation of the law.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rules Nos. 12 and 13.

(Issued October 25, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 3 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 12, LABELS. RULE 13, SODIUM BENZOATE AND BENZOIC ACID.

Rule 12. Numerous requests are referred to this Division for the approval of labels to be used in connection with food products under the Pennsylvania Pure Food Act of June 1, 1907. This Act does not authorize the Dairy and Food Commissioner, nor any Agent of the Division, to approve labels. The Division, therefore, will not give its approval to any label. Any printed matter upon the label implying that this Division has approved it will be without warrant. It is believed that with the law and regulations before the manufacturers they will have no difficulty in arranging labels in conformity with the requirements set forth.

Rule 13. No prosecutions will be based upon the manufacture, sale or having in possession with intent to sell, foods and food products manufactured or packed during the season of 1907 which contains sodium benzoate in quantities not exceeding one-tenth of 1 per cent., or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, provided sodium benzoate or benzoic acid has hitherto been generally used in such foods and food products; and provided further that sodium benzoate or benzoic acid is not used in connection with coal-tar dyes or any foreign coloring matter.

The label of each package of food or food product containing sodium benzoate or benzoic acid shall bear a statement that the food contains one-tenth of 1 per cent. of sodium benzoate, or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, as the case may be.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rule No. 14.

(Issued July 2nd, 1908.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 4 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 14, DRIED OR EVAPORATED FRUITS SUPERSEDING RULE NO. 11.

Whereas, it is provided in Section 3 of the Pure Food Act of June 1, 1907, (P. L. 386), that

"The Dairy and Food Commissioner shall make uniform rules and regulations under and subject to which the provisions of this Act shall be enforced and such rules and regulations shall, where practicable, conform to and be the same as the rules and regulations adopted from time to time for the enforcement of the Act of Congress, approved June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and six, and known as the 'Food and Drugs Act.' Such rules and regulations to be published from time to time in Bulletins to be issued by the Department," and

Whereas, it is provided in Section 5 of said Act:

"That no action shall be brought or sustained for violation of the provisions of this section when the article alleged to be adulterated is not adulterated within the meaning of the provisions of the 'Food and Drugs Act' of June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and six, enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, and the rules and regulations promulgated from time to time for the enforcement of the same, and

WHEREAS, the United States Department of Agriculture on March 5, 1908, promulgated Decision No. 89, providing, substantially, inter alia, that pending determination by the Referee Board of the wholesomeness or unwholesomeness of the use of Sulphur Dioxide as an addition to food in minute quantities, its use will be allowed under certain restrictions, viz:

"No objection will be made to foods which contain the ordinary quantities of Sulphur Dioxide if the fact that such foods have been so prepared is plainly stated upon the label of each package. An abnormal quantity of Sulphur Dioxide placed in food for the purpose of marketing an excessive moisture content will be regarded as fraudulent adulteration * * * and will be proceeded against accordingly."

Now therefore, in compliance with said Section 3 the following rule is hereby promulgated:

Pending said determination by said Referee Board no prosecutions will be instituted for selling, offering for sale or having in possession with intent to sell, dried or evaporated fruits which contain ordinary quantities of Sulphur Dioxide, if the fact that such foods have been so prepared is plainly stated upon the label of each package.

An abnormal quantity of Sulphur Dioxide placed in food for the purpose of marketing an excessive moisture content will be regarded as fraudulent adulteration and will be proceeded against accordingly.

This rule is made to conform with the rules and regulations of the United States Department of Agriculture, and if occasion for its rescission shall arise notice of such rescission will be published in a Bulletin issued by this Department.

JAMES FOUST,

Dairy and Food Commissioner.

N. B. The above rule supercedes Rule No. 11, heretofore promulgated.

Harrisburg, Pa., October 1, 1907.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE GUIDANCE AND GOVERNMENT OF PERSONS PROPOSING TO ENGAGE IN THE MANUFACTURE, SALE OR USE OF OLEOMARGARINE OR RENOVATED BUTTER, AS AUTHORIZED UNDER THE ACTS OF ASSEMBLY APPROVED THE 29TH OF MAY, 1901, AND JULY 10TH, 1901, AS PRESCRIBED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE THROUGH ITS AGENT, THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER.

1. No license will be granted to a non-resident of the State of Pennsylvania.

2. No license will be transferred from any person, firm or corporation convicted of any violation of the Acts of Assembly under which such license is issued, nor while proceedings are pending for violation of said acts against such person, firm or corporation.

3. Remittance (either bank draft, cashier's cheque or certificate of deposit, preferred) for license fees must accompany the application for license. Individual cheques must be certified by the bank on which same are issued or drawn. Checks and drafts must be made payable to the order of the State Treasurer, and upon receipt thereof by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, if the application is approved, a license certificate will be promptly issued.

4. The attention of intending applicants for license and of all licensees, is especially directed to that portion of Section 7 of the Act of 29th of May, 1901, which provides: "That upon conviction of any subsequent offense, the person so offending shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than twelve months."

The express direction of said act is imprisonment in addition to the minimum fine therein specified.

In addition to the fine and imprisonment imposed for second offenses, injunction proceedings will be instituted, and no license will be transferred from any person against whom such proceedings are pending.

JAMES FOUST,

Dairy and Food Commissioner.

CONSCIENTIOUS MANUFACTURERS ABOUND.

While there are unscrupulous manufacturers of food products in the land it is a pleasure to believe that the vast majority of these gentlemen are upright business men. While some are quite willing to palm off inferior material upon the consumer for the sake of making a larger profit while catering to the vicious popular demand for cheapness, the majority are anxious to comply with the federal and state laws which require publicity concerning ingredients and are likewise making a sincere effort to give the consumer the very best article at the lowest possible price. Nothing more encouraging has happened since the agitation in favor of the exclusion of adulterated articles from the market began than the voluntary formation of an association by leading manufacturers of catsup and similar articles for the purpose of discouraging the use of chemical preservatives and supporting the officials who are sworn to do all in their power to enforce the laws and prevent the injury of the consumer. These gentlemen, actively engaged in putting up catsup, pickles, etc., declare that the use of benzoate of soda, for instance, as a preservative is not necessary. They say they do not use it in the preparation of their wares for the market and they have no occasion for such use. They add that the use of this suspicious article is very convenient for those who wish to utilize the refuse of the canneries or rotten fruit, tomato peel and other articles that cannot be put in first class goods. For that reason they will have none of it. They want the foodstuffs they put on the market to be above suspicion. They tell us they have acquired a reputation at home and abroad which constitutes one of the most important factors in their capital and they do not propose to permit anything to be done by their workmen which will shake the confidence now felt by the consumer in the purity and desirability of their goods. There is an increasing number of business men of that sort in our country. They do not believe it is right to deceive the public. They would not befool their customers even for the good of those customers. Much less can they be persuaded, as a mere matter of convenience and economy of production, to use any ingredient concerning which there is a difference of opinion among eminent scientists. So long as there is a possibility of harm coming to the consumer from the use of questionable preservatives so long will they avoid them as they would the plague. It should be a great satisfaction to the consumer, who must depend largely upon his grocer, in the end, to be told that so many reputable business men have already placed themselves upon record, in no uncertain terms as in favor of absolute purity in articles of food.

THE COW AND ITS MILK.

Dr. M. Donsett contributes to "Pure Products" an article on "The Sanitary Composition of Cow's Milk," in the course of which he discusses the chief cause of dirt in milk, which he holds to be a certain lack of cleanliness in milking and in the handling of the milk, to which may be added unclean cows, unclean vessels used in milking and in keeping the milk and also insufficient infiltration of the milk. For a sufficiently clean milking the milker, after washing the hands well, should, before milking, thoroughly clean the udder of the cow with pure water. The first milk coming from the udder of the cow should be collected separately from the main portion, for it is this first portion of the milk which contains germs which have entered the excretory ducts of the udder since the last milking and have there multiplied under the influence of the body temperature of the animal. With proper milking in well kept stalls, a filtration of the milk is scarcely necessary. It is otherwise with cows kept in old and cramped stalls. In this case the milk may best be purified by the use of a suitable filter of wadding. Such a filter retains the dirt and the bacteria, while milk that has been cleaned by passing through centrifugals still contains the bacteria.

Dr. Donsett holds that milk inspection should extend to the first content and not alone to the contents of nutrients. It is as proper, he declares, to interdict dirty milk as sour or watered milk, since dirty milk is at least equally dangerous to health, especially to that of small children. It has been shown that in periods when the milk supply was especially dirty and therefore rich in bacteria, an increased number of cases of sickness and deaths of children was to be looked for, indicating that a certain connection exists between the dirt content of milk and the sickness and mortality of children. Among the methods mentioned by Dr. Donsett for the determination of dirt in milk are the so-called sedimentation tests, which are founded on the fact that the dirt, as the specifically heavier body, sinks to the bottom with comparative rapidity. Even the method for the exact quantitative determination of the dirt depends upon sedimentation and subsequent filtration. For this test one liter of milk is allowed to stand for two hours in a covered mixing cylinder. At the end of this time a more or less considerable sediment has settled out, whereupon the supernatant milk is carefully removed down to about twenty or thirty cubic centimeters. The cylinder is twice filled with water, allowed to stand one hour, when the water is removed in the same manner. If now the water above the dirt is almost clean, the washing has been sufficient; the dirt is brought upon a weighed filter, washed, dried and weighed. The result so obtained is calculated as fresh cow dung, assuming the dried residue to have contained 80 per cent, moisture.

All this may seem like going to a great deal of trouble and we may be told it recommends processes of which our grandparents knew nothing. And yet many of those good women were careful in their way, too, living up to their knowledge. Who does not recall the fact that his grandmother always washed the udders of the cows carefully before beginning to milk them; that the first portion of the milk coming from the udder was spilled upon the ground—the milking being usually done in the open air, always in summer—that the milk was carefully strained before being put in the vessels arranged for its reception and carried off to the spring house. More than one of the ladies who milked their own cows half a century or three-quarters ago practiced the method above recited. They did not know anything about bacteria or microbes; even the learned men of their day were ignorant of the facts which scientific research has since made plain. But those housemothers of the olden time were enemies to dirt. They could not abide it in their milk or on their dairy floors. They waged unrelenting warfare upon it and thus provided for the sanitary care of their milk without ever having compassed the meaning of the word "sanitation." In those days the business of selling milk was confined within narrow limits. We had very few large cities and few dairy routes. In the country districts nearly everybody had their own cows and the precautions taken by the good housewife in the care of her milk supply were largely in the interest of the members of her own household or a few immediate neighbors. Conditions have greatly changed. The dairyman is now engaged in business on a large scale; he is not acquainted with his customers and may feel somewhat less responsibility toward them than if it were otherwise. Nevertheless, the conscientious dairyman, knowing the importance of milk as a food and the ease with which it takes on infection of one sort or another, will not omit the precautions essential to the preservation of purity, even though it put him to some inconvenience and expense to comply with the mandates of law and the duty he owes to others.

THE PLAINT OF THE HOUSEKEEPER.

The Housekeeper halted the editor of the Bulletin the other day and wanted to know what in the world was the matter with the scientific experts. When he inquired what she meant, she held up her hands in simulated astonishment, exclaiming, "What! You don't mean to tell me that you haven't been noticing the contradictory evidence the experts are giving us concerning the value or otherwise of preserved catsup and other foodstuffs? It is enough to give the healthiest person in the state a fit of indigestion to read the varying statements of men who profess to be practical chemists and to be able to analyze correctly whatever may be put in their hands. Here's Dr. Wiley, for instance. He has been telling us right along that benzoate of soda and similar chemical products are unhealthy for the reason that they retard digestion. He is quite sure that he knows what he is talking about. Then come the manufacturers who insist upon using benzoate of soda and they move heaven and earth—or try to—for the purpose of getting that Wiley decision reversed. Whereupon our excellent and energetic president appoints a consulting or referee board of famous chemists to make experiments with benzoate of soda and report the result. In due time comes the report. Dr. Wiley was mistaken, the other eminent chemists tell us. Benzoate of soda, even in much larger quantities than that hitherto permitted by the government, pending a final decision, is not harmful, it is declared. And then the government authorizes the use of benzoate of soda as a preservative, provided the manufacturer so using it gives public notice to that effect upon the label. Then begins a war of the manufacturers, largely conducted by the agency of hired experts who, after the fashion of experts, testify strongly on behalf of the interest employing them. The war has been particularly intense in the advertising pages of the weeklies that come into the house, and I have seen reports of various charges in some of the trade journals my husband takes. We have heard a great deal about the injurious effects of benzoate of soda from one side; now the other comes to the front and begins to warn us of the evil influence of acetic acid which, they tell us, is found in undue quantities in the catsup that is innocent of chemical preservatives. Then along comes another chemist who declares he has analyzed various brands of catsup and finds a greater proportion of acetic acid in the preserved article than in the other. Under such embarrassing circumstances what is a poor Housekeeper to do?"

There is a good deal of truth in this outburst of the Housekeeper. She is a woman of more than average intelligence. She tries to keep up with the times and is especially interested in the question of pure food and pure beverages. Her confusion is not to be wondered at under the circumstances. When she was young her teachers taught her that science never guesses; that it absolutely knows. Guess-work, she was told, is not science. But here are learned men by the dozen who are utterly unable to agree concerning so simple a thing as the action of a certain chemical preservative upon the human stomach and other organs. Dr. Wiley, who is the servant of the whole people and whose honesty and sincerity is admitted by his enemies, declares, as the result of careful investigation and practical experiment, protracted over many months, that benzoate of soda arrests the processes of digestion and thus does injury to the consumer of food preserved with it. One can understand the motives of those manufacturers who withstood this decision. As between them and the chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture the majority of the people would trust the doctor, for he is not selfishly interested, while the manufacturers certainly are. They raised the commotion because they felt that compliance with the decision for which Dr. Wiley was responsible would largely reduce their profits, perhaps ruin their business. Thus far the case is simple. But now arrives another phase of the matter which transforms the situation and makes it decidedly complex. The referee board appointed by the President, composed of eminent chemists, also makes experiments, not so extensive, however, as those conducted by Dr. Wiley, and decides that benzoate of soda, even in much larger quantities than those hitherto tentatively permitted by the Government, is not injurious to any part of the human anatomy. Then the storm begins, the government, however, having accepted the decision of this board as conclusive and issued a bulletin permitting the use of benzoate of soda, provided the fact that it is used be stated on the label. Some of the manufacturers have engaged in a war of words since, with the result that the consuming public is becoming alarmed and is rapidly getting ready to exclaim, "A plague on both your houses!" When eminent chemists and scientific experts engage in so singular a controversy it is no wonder the Housekeeper and her sisters become mystified and alarmed and feel like "taking to the woods," so far as the particular food products involved are concerned.

MANUFACTURERS DISAGREE.

The recent decision of the Federal Department of Agriculture to permit the use of benzoate of soda in limited quantities has stirred up a bitter controversy between the rival manufacturers of catsup in which that chemical preservative is chiefly used. A minority of the manufacturers dispensed with its use some time ago and have been so advertising for some months. Since the reversal of Dr. Wiley's policy their advertisements have not been changed and the majority have begun to say ugly things about them in the advertising departments of the newspapers and in circulars. No man knows where to this war will grow, but it promises to give the consuming public a large amount of valuable information concerning the use of benzoate of soda and other preservatives. What the end will be in this commonwealth depends largely upon the action of the legislature which still has the food question under consideration at the moment this is written. It is greatly to be hoped that the final outcome will be to the advantage of the consuming public.

BENEFITS OF GROCERS' ASSOCIATIONS.

Elton J. Buckley, the able editor of the "Grocery World," recently attended a meeting of the leading Grocers' Associations of the Lehigh Valley at Bethlehem and delivered an address in which he showed the advantage of such associations. He said that while the benefits of a live mercantile association extended through many channels, an analysis of the results seemed to show that the greatest and best good done by an association was that it prevented jealousy between competitors, miscalled competition, from going too far. The speaker emphasized the fact that there is good competition which amounts simply to friendly, healthy rivalry, and bad competition, which is practically jealousy run mad, and which is responsible for most of the competitive troubles of business life. He suggested that many an association, by drawing within its ranks merchants who, if let alone, would have run amuck, has saved the whole trade of the town from demoralization. The speaker made many other valuable points in his talk.

A POINT IN LAW.

The "Grocery World" holds that the edict of the Federal Government requiring every manufacturer to place upon his food products a label indicating how much benzoate of soda is used, in case it is employed as a preservative, is incapable of enforcement, since the Department of Agriculture has accepted as correct the decision of the special referee board that benzoate of soda is not injurious. If the use of this preservative is not a violation of law, as seems to be the case under the recently promulgated decision, it occurs to the editor of the "Grocery World" that the effort to compel manufacturers who use it to disclose that fact would not be sustained by the courts. It is a curious problem.

CONCERNING ANCIENT EGGS.

Some of the gentlemen who have been interested in the business of peddling ancient and decayed eggs in this commonwealth must have been specially attracted by the recently published account of a dinner given by some Chinese merchants to a number of leading citizens of San Francisco. Among the other delicacies served were eggs a hundred years old. The process by which they were preserved would net the user a handsome fortune in a short time if put into active operation in the United States. At present the taste of the average citizen revolts against eggs that have reached the age of one year. Our preservers do not have the skill to keep an egg a century. The impression among consumers is that some of them would gladly use it if they had it. Nevertheless, the people, who are increasingly disposed to resent the cold storage business, would hardly be willing to stand for eggs that had survived a full century.

THE CONSUMER MAKES THE MARKET.

If there is still a considerable quantity of impure or adulterated food in the market it is largely due to the ignorance or the apathy of the consumer. That very considerable part of the population living in hotels or taking its meals at boarding houses or restaurants is, of course, at the mercy of the landlord or the cook. Many of the housekeepers who attend to the purchase of food for their families are unaware of certain important facts they should know. Others are chiefly concerned to get their food in the cheapest market. They do not stop to consider. They only know that necessity or prudence impels them to patronize the cheapest vender. They do not bother themselves about the quality of the goods they purchase or about the statements made on the label. Their conduct encourages certain manufacturers to persist in their purpose to prevent the adoption of satisfactory food laws or the enforcement of decisions against chemical preservatives.

POSTPONED UNTIL 1910.

Congress has adjourned until December, 1909, so far as the transaction of general business is concerned. It is true a special session is now on in Washington, but the President called it for the special purpose of considering the tariff question and there is little reason to suppose that any other business will be considered. Nor is there any likelihood that the existing food and drugs act will be enforced any more vigorously during the interim. The same influences that have compelled the pure food officials to pursue an ultra conservative course are to the front and some of them have received a new access of authority and therefore of power. It looks now as though little progress is to be made at present. What the future has in store by way of increased activity on behalf of the consumer time alone will be able to tell. Nevertheless, the right is sure to win out in the end, no matter how many years of arduous struggle are before it. That thought should inspire the enemies of fraud to fresh efforts.

FOR UNADULTERATED SOFT DRINKS.

The bill regulating the sale of adulterated soft drinks in this commonwealth has passed both branches of the legislature and received the approval of the governor. It is the law of the state and will be rigidly enforced. The enormous sale of dangerously adulterated drinks during the summer months, especially in the cities and to children in the poorer quarters, caused an urgent demand for legislative action. This has now been taken and if anybody undertakes to defy the provisions of the law there is likely to be trouble. The children are entitled to pure beverages as well as pure food.

CONSCIENCE IN BUSINESS.

The author of "Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Merchant," discusses "Conscience in Business" in his latest paper, and opens with this sentence: "Conscience may be a hard master, but he never makes mistakes when it comes to deciding between right and wrong." That is true of a properly educated conscience. But there's such a thing as a perverted conscience and it is not a safe guide. It frequently commends a course of action which is not in accordance with the welfare of the community. But when one's conscience whispers that a certain thing is wrong it would be well to heed. Most of the successful business men of to-day have paid attention to the whispers of an enlightened conscience. All of the permanently successful men have done so. The conscientious man may lose money at the start, but if he has sufficient capital to tide him over the initial months he will come out all right. When the buying public learn to trust a business man, when they are absolutely certain that he conducts his business upon conscientious lines, the battle is won. And it is won for good, nor does it leave any unpleasant reflections.

THE WAY TO DECIDE.

Whenever there is the least question about the value or wholesomeness of a food product put up in a certain way the wise consumer will give himself the benefit of the doubt and abstain from that particular brand. Most of us are not able to distinguish truth from falsehood when a controversy arises among eminent scientific experts concerning the harmlessness or otherwise of a chemical preservative. But, until the issue is definitely decided we can abstain from the use of articles of food containing such a preservative. By this action we place ourselves upon absolutely safe ground.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The prudent housewife is a vigilant reader of labels these days.

The agitation against impure or adulterated foods will not cease so long as there is need for it.

The wise public official will insist upon obedience to law, but he will not be arrogant or dogmatic.

Prudence in the selection of food is one of the secrets of good health and long life.

Pennsylvania is likely to have much better food laws by the beginning of summer than she had at the beginning of 1909.

The one claim of the consumer which should be heeded and conceded is that he has a right to get what he pays for.

With good food, pure drinks and ordinary prudence long life should be the portion of the average Pennsylvanian.

After all the housekeeper who examines all the labels and acts accordingly is the important factor in the pure food proposition.

Fresh eggs are luxuries that can best be appreciated by the man who has recently had an experience with some of the other sort.

The world will be all the better when every suspicious substance has been eliminated from the food of the people.

After a while the people of Pennsylvania will be amply protected by wholesome laws in the matter of beverages as well as food.

After all the wise plan is to be on the safe side, eschewing all articles of food that contain suspicious preservatives.

The Dairy School of the University of Wisconsin has just given its first special dairy course. The registration of students was 51.

Laws are of little permanent value unless the rank and file of the people are back of them, insisting upon their enforcement.

The legislature of the state of Washington has decided not to prohibit the bleaching of flour.

Pure beverages of all sorts should be demanded by the law of the commonwealth. The health of the people is a matter of supreme importance.

Honest competition is not objected to by the wideawake business man. It is the crooked methods of unprincipled competitors that raise the trouble.

Men, women and children must eat to live; more than should be the case, many live to eat. Of such as these it has been truly said that they dig their graves with their teeth.

The housemother who makes meal time one of the most fascinating periods of the day fastens husband and boys to the home with strong cords.

Most of the states are now deeply concerned for the elimination of impure or adulterated food from the markets. This is the result of an evil which originated in covetousness and had a rapid growth.

The business man who has established a reputation for truthfulness among his patrons is certain to increase his boundaries from year to year so long as he scrupulously lives up to that reputation.

Seldom does the humble and reticent servant of the people get all the credit that is due him for the good he accomplishes from day to day.

The chap who persists in violating law, recklessly resolving to have his own way, can blame nobody but himself when he runs up against a stone wall.

The grocer who has won fame in the community which he serves, as a man whose word can be depended upon, is to be congratulated upon his good fortune.

The time of year is again approaching when it will be necessary for the grocer who is strictly up-to-date to provide for the ample protection of goods displayed out of doors.

Public sentiment throughout the union favors the more rigid enforcement of the Federal food and drugs act. The majority of the people are undoubtedly in sympathy with Dr. Wiley's attitude.

The Retail Grocers' Association of Philadelphia, has just closed its twenty-second year and is in a prosperous condition. In spite of the business depression it has had a healthy growth during the year.

The next state convention of the Retail Grocers' Association will be held in Pottsville and that lively town is already preparing for the event, which occurs in August.

The consumer and the retailer have many interests in common. They should try to get together on the pure food proposition, each working for the best interests of the other.

Carefulness in the purchase of food for the family is of the utmost importance. It saves many a period of sickness, to say nothing of the doctor's bill.

Optimists are hoping that the clouds at Washington will disappear and that the interests of the consumer will be considered as equally important with those of the manufacturer and vender of food products.

When greed leads the maker of food products astray it is a piteous thing. When the same passion induces the retailer to become a willing participant in the fraudulent deception of the people the situation is urgently in need of improvement.

Sometimes it takes a long time for the people to realize that they are not securing all their rights under national laws, but the time always comes when they rise up in their might. Then the situation changes. It will be so with the federal food and drugs act.

Impure food is responsible for many deaths each year. It gives insufficient nourishment, affects the stomach or other organs of the body injuriously and thus saps the strength and prepares the system for the easy intrusion of deadly disease germs.

There is every reason to believe that the sale of impure beverage in this commonwealth will soon be a violation of law. The people have a right to protection from poisoned drinks as well as impure food.

The passage of the act relating to the sale of decayed and ancient eggs in this commonwealth will doubtless do much to break up one of the most offensive businesses in which unscrupulous men engage for gain. A determined effort will be made to enforce it.

No citizen who has a properly educated conscience will undertake to gain fortune for himself at the expense of the health of the people who innocently purchase his wares. He will do an honest business and take pains to be on the safe side of any disputed question.

Many a faithful servant of the people goes to his death in obscurity because of the malign slanders of those whose plots against the public health he has made of no effect. Justice is usually done his memory.

The proper care of milk after it has been received by the householder is a matter of vital importance. A little carelessness in this respect may open the door to many sorrows. It may also cast unmerited reproach upon a perfectly honest milkman.

Pennsylvania may not be as far advanced in her laws regulating the manufacture and sale of food and drink within her boundaries, but she is surely strengthening the weak points and in due time will be in the front rank. Let us all do what we can to hasten the hour.

Good citizens do not violate law knowingly. Good citizens do not try to evade those provisions of law which are meant to protect the consuming public from imposition or injury. Good citizens do not care to cultivate bad consciences.

Patriotism should impel every manufacturer of food products to do his level best to provide pure food for his patrons to the end that the American republic may continue to grow the healthiest men and women on earth.

Good milk will largely reduce infant mortality in every community in which it is sold. In the past thousands of babes have been sacrificed upon the altar of cupidity or ignorance or indifference, but we are coming into a much better state of affairs now.

The people who purchase articles of food in the groceries of the land are not interested in abstruse controversies between warring scientists or manufacturers. They are vitally concerned about the quality of the food they procure for daily use.

While the children of the state are entitled to protection against bogus soda water and lemonade the adult portion of the population should also be taken care of. The laws should severely punish the adulteration of beverages of every description.

There should be unanimity of opinion and action between reputable food manufacturers and those charged with the enforcement of food laws. And there usually is. Occasionally misunderstandings are removed by frank consultations.

The organization of county or district societies composed of buttermakers, creamery managers and dairymen is commended by the "Dairy Record," which claims that much good has been derived from these meetings.

The butter-makers of the country are entitled to the continued protection of the government against unfair competition. The butter-consumer is also entitled to protection against those who undertake to give him bogus butter under the name of the genuine article.

A French savant informs a startled world that each cow in a herd should be provided with an individual tooth brush and should have her teeth carefully brushed every morning. This for sanitary reasons.

Organization of the retail merchants of Pennsylvania, according to the "Grocers' Review," has passed out of the experimental stage and is going rapidly forward. Organization will be helpful in many ways.

A bill is before the legislature of New York striking out the specific prohibition in the present law against dealing in oleomargarine and limiting said prohibition to the manufacture and sale of counterfeit butter which is such "in color, flavor or taste."

If all men were as honest as the majority of manufacturers and venders there would never have been any occasion for the adoption of rules and regulations affecting the food products of the country. Unfortunately there are black sheep in every family, in every profession, in every occupation.

Taking life by the whole and not by the transitory incidents of a single month or year or decade, it pays in business as in private life to be perfectly frank with one's customers. A good name is better than great riches, we are told, and it might be added that it usually brings prosperity with it.

Controversy between interested parties can contribute little of enlightenment to the discussion of the food problem. The men who make the laws should take their cue from their constituents and endeavor to frame a workable law that will protect the people and do no harm to honest manufacturers.

Many of the manufacturers who oppose the passage of laws which would prohibit certain practices, believing that the acts would hamper their business, would be greatly surprised if they were to come under the actual operation of such laws. They would find actual benefit to themselves in the widening confidence of the public.

Bills providing against discrimination in the purchase price paid for butterfat by concerns buying cream at various points in a state have been introduced in a number of states in the northwest, observes the "Dairy Record." Some of them, perhaps most, will become laws.

The Iowa and Nebraska Wholesale Grocers' Association recently held a meeting at Council Bluffs, Iowa, and decided to make a concentrated effort to have the pure food laws of the two state amended so as to conform to the national law and the decisions and regulations rendered under that law.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Dunlap, of Ohio, has brought suit against a Pittsburg firm dealing in vinegar for selling artificial vinegar as pure cider vinegar. The suit was brought under the federal pure food law and is the first to be instituted in Ohio under that act.

Dairymen and milkmen sometimes get a bit restless over the large demands made upon them by board of health and others. They should remember, however, that milk is one of the most important articles of diet and that it is very easily contaminated. The health of the consumer and the peace of mind of the dairyman must be considered by the state.

Self-interest is a powerful factor in the formation of opinion. Men who profit by the craft in which they engage are predisposed to give favorable attention to any argument which commends the use of doubtful preparations that reduce their expenses and minify their difficulties in the preservation of the food products they manufacture.

There should be a constant effort upon the part of the grocer to procure for the use of his patrons food that will stand the test of experiment. This does not necessarily mean costly food, but food that is genuine and wholesome. The people require nothing more; they should be content with nothing less and we don't believe they will.

Appreciation of one's work makes the workman strive all the harder to do the right thing. He who serves the public sometimes has a hard master; sometimes a generous one. In any event his work is greatly forwarded and his heart lightened by the appreciative words of those who know. Empty flattery is worthless; sincere appreciation of honest effort is priceless.

The Grocery World calls attention to the interesting fact that the American refiners are selling granulated sugar at 2.70 cents per pound for export as against a price of 4½ cents to the trade of this country. But the refiners are not at fault; since the duty of 1.68 cents per pound on raw sugar imported into this country is refunded when the refined sugar is sent abroad.

Upon information given by a former employe, the members of a Pittsburg firm have each been held in $2,500 bail before a federal commissioner to answer the charge of violating the oleomargarine laws in various ways. It was stated by the informant that the product was made in a stable where horses and wagons were kept, and that it was the most filthy place he had ever been in.

At a recent meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association of Columbus, Ohio, a speaker of the evening proposed the following query as the theme of his address: "Instead of appropriating $12,400,000 for the purpose of enforcing the pure food laws, why doesn't congress offer an award to the manufacturer who produces the best and the purest food?" That is a question calculated to provoke considerable discussion.

An interesting controversy is now in progress between the New York State Retail Grocers' Association and an organization of small retail dealers in Buffalo. The Buffalo organization wants to sell canned, bottled, baked and other kinds of cooked foods on Sunday. The state organization favors making the Sunday observance law more stringent than it already is. The sympathy of friends of the Sabbath will be with the state association.

H. E. Barnard, chemist to the Indiana State Board of Health, says in a communication to the "Grocery World," that a recent examination of non-preserved and benzoated goods shows that the acidity calculated as acetic acid on the first class of goods averaged 1.52 per cent., while the acidity of the latter averaged 1.15 per cent. But he adds that if the acidity is calculated to the amount of solid material present, eliminating the water, more acetic acid is present in the goods preserved with benzoate of soda than those not preserved.

This is what the "Grocer's Review," edited by William Smedley, has to say in a recent issue concerning a much spoken about public servant: "The enemies of Dr. Wiley are using every effort to belittle his effort for a proper enforcement of the pure food laws. Dr. Wiley pursues the even tenor of his way, however, and notwithstanding the fierce fire he has been under for some time, still enjoys the esteem and confidence of the great majority of the American people.

Dr. Wiley is a big man and his honesty of purpose is beyond criticism. Our prediction is that the energetic Dr. Wiley will come out of the fight with honor and be more highly esteemed than ever by those who believe in a square deal."

SOME NEW FOOD BILLS.

Features of Five New Measures Passed by the Legislature and Signed by Governor Stuart.

Up to the time this is written five acts regulating the sale of certain articles of food and drink have passed both branches of the legislature and received the approval of Governor Stuart. They are therefore laws of the state and should be studied and obeyed by all concerned. For the information of readers of the Bulletin we herewith reproduce the substance of each act:

Regulating the Sale of Milk and Cream.

This is an act relating to milk, providing for the protection of the public health and the prevention of fraud and deception by regulating the sale of milk, skimmed milk and cream, providing penalties for the violation thereof and providing for the enforcement thereof.

Section 1 provides that it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporate body, by himself, herself, itself, or themselves, or by his, her, its, or their agents, servants, or employes, to sell offer for sale, expose for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell, milk which contains any added water, or milk which has had the butter fat, or any portion thereof, removed therefrom, provided, however, that skimmed milk, when clean and wholesome, may be sold, if sold as skimmed milk, and provided further, that no cream shall be sold as cream if it contains less than 15 per centum butter fat.

Section 2 provides that any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than $20 nor more than $50.

Section 3 provides that the Dairy and Food Commissioner shall be charged with the enforcement of the provisions of the act.

Section 4 provides that all fines and penalties imposed and recovered for the violation of any of the provisions of this act shall be paid to the Dairy and Food Commissioner, or his agent, and when so collected and paid shall thereafter be by the said Dairy and Food Commissioner paid into the state treasury for the use of the Commonwealth.

Section 5 provides that the act shall not apply to nor in any way affect the act entitled "An act to prohibit the adulteration or coloring of milk and cream by the addition of so-called preservatives or coloring matter and to provide for the enforcement of the same," approved June 10, 1897, and the amendment thereto, approved April 19, 1901, entitled "An act to amend the first section of an act to prohibit the adulteration or coloring of milk and cream by the addition of so-called preservatives or coloring matter and to provide for the enforcement of the same, approved June 10, 1897," which act shall remain in full force. All other acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are repealed.

Prohibiting the Sale of Eggs Unfit for Food.

This is an act for the protection of the public health by prohibiting the sale, offering for sale, exposing for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, of eggs unfit for food, as therein defined, and prohibiting the use of such eggs in the preparation of food products, providing penalties for the violation thereof and providing for the enforcement thereof.

Section 1 provides that it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporate body, by himself, herself, itself, or themselves, or by his, her, its, or their agents, servants, or employes, to sell, offer for sale expose for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell, eggs that are unfit for food within the meaning of this act.

Section 2 provides that the act shall apply to eggs that, either before or after removal from the shell, are wholly or partly decayed or decomposed and to eggs in the fluid state any portion of which is wholly or partly decayed or decomposed, or that are mixed with parts of eggs that are derived from eggs that are wholly or partly decayed or decomposed. The act also applies to frozen masses, or broken eggs, if the mass contains eggs that are wholly or partly decayed or decomposed, or that are mixed with parts of eggs that have been taken from eggs that were wholly or partly decayed or decomposed.

Section 3 provides that it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporate body, by himself, herself, itself, or themselves, or by his, her, its or their agents, servants, or employes, to use eggs that are either wholly or partly decayed or decomposed in the preparation of food products. It is also provided that there shall be no delivery, sale, purchase, or acceptance of wholly or partly decayed or decomposed eggs in or at any establishment where food products are prepared or manufactured.

Section 4 provides that any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than $200 nor more than $1,000, or to undergo an imprisonment of not less than three months nor more than nine months, or both, or either, at the discretion of the court.

Section 5 provides that the Dairy and Food Commissioner shall be charged with the enforcement of the act.

Section 6 provides for the payment of all fines and penalties imposed and recovered to the Dairy and Food Commissioner or his agent and by the said Dairy and Food Commissioner to the State Treasurer or the use of the Commonwealth.

Prohibiting the Manufacture or Sale of Adulterated Non-Alcoholic Beverages.

This is an act relating to non-alcoholic drinks, defining the same and prohibiting the manufacture, sale, offering for sale, exposing for sale or having in possession with intent to sell, of any adulterated or misbranded non-alcoholic drinks and providing penalties for the violation thereof, and providing for the enforcement thereof.

Section 1 provides that it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporate body, by himself, herself, itself or themselves, or by his, her, its or their agents, servants, or employes, to manufacture, sell, offer for sale, expose for sale or have in possession with intent to sell, any article of non-alcoholic drink which is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act.

Section 2 provides that the term "non-alcoholic drink," as used in the act, shall include carbonated beverages of all flavors, sarsaparilla, ginger ale, soda water of all flavors, lemonade, orangeade, root beer, grape juice and all other non-intoxicating drinks.

Section 3 provides that a non-alcoholic drink shall be deemed to be adulterated within the meaning of this act if it contains any added boric acid or borates, salicylic acid or salicylates, formaldehyde, sulphurous acid or sulphites, hydrofluoric acid or fluorides, fluoborates, fluosilicates or other fluorine compounds, dulcin, glucin, saccharine, betanaphthol, hydronaphthol, abrostol, asapol, oxides or nitrogen, nitrous acid or nitrates, compounds of copper, pyroligneous acid or other added substance deleterious to health.

Section 4 provides that for the purpose of this act a non-alcoholic drink shall be deemed to be misbranded:

First.—If it be an imitation of, or offered for sale under the distinctive name of, another article, or if it is colored or flavored in imitation of the genuine color or flavor of another substance.

Second.—If it be labelled, or branded, or tagged, so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser.

Third.—If the bottle or receptacle containing it or its label shall bear any statement, design, or device regarding the ingredients or the substances contained therein, which statement design or device shall be false or misleading in any particular; provided that any non-alcoholic drink which does not contain any added poisonous or deleterious ingredients shall not be deemed to be adulterated or misbranded under the following conditions:

(A) In the case of mixtures or compounds which may be now or from time to time hereafter known as non-alcoholic beverages under their own distinctive names and not an imitation of, or offered for sale under the name of another article.

(B) In the case of non-alcoholic beverages which are labeled, branded, or tagged so as to plainly indicate that they are compounds, imitations, or blends and the word "COMPOUND" "IMITATION" or "BLEND," as the case may be, is plainly stated on the container in which it is offered for sale; provided, that the term "blend" as used herein shall be construed to mean a mixture of like substances, not excluding harmless coloring or flavoring ingredients not prohibited by this act and used for the purpose of coloring or flavoring only.

Section 5 provides that any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than $50, nor more than $100.

Section 6 provides for the enforcement of the provisions of the act by the Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Section 7 provides for the collection of all fines and penalties by the Dairy and Food Commissioner or his agent and the payment of the same to the State Treasurer for the use of the Commonwealth.

Section 8 provides that this act shall not apply to nor in any way affect the act entitled "An act to prohibit the adulteration or coloring of milk or cream by the addition of so-called preservatives or coloring matter, and to provide for the enforcement of the same," approved June 10, 1897; and the amendments thereto approved April 19, 1901, entitled "An act to amend the first section of an act entitled 'An act to prohibit the adulteration or coloring of milk and cream by the addition of so-called preservatives or coloring matter, and to provide for the enforcement of the same,' approved June 10, 1897;" nor the act entitled "An act regulating the manufacture or sale of fruit-syrups, providing for the enforcement thereof, and to repeal an act entitled 'An act relative to adulteration of natural fruit juice and providing penalties for the violation thereof,' approved May 2, 1901," approved April 26, 1905, which acts shall remain in full force.

Prohibiting the Sale of Adulterated Ice Cream.

This is an act for the protection of the public health and to prevent fraud and deception in the manufacture, sale, offering for sale, exposing for sale and having in possession with intent to sell, of adulterated or deleterious ice cream, providing penalties for the violation thereof and providing for the enforcement thereof.

Section 1 provides that no person, firm, or corporate body, by himself, herself, itself, or themselves, or by his, her, its, or their agents, servants or employees, shall sell, offer for sale, expose for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell ice cream adulterated within the meaning of this act.

Section 2 provides that ice cream shall be deemed to be adulterated within the meaning of this act.

First.—If it shall contain boric acid, formaldehyde, saccharine, or any other added substance or compound that is deleterious to health.

Second.—If it shall contain salts of copper, iron oxide, oeres, or any coloring substance deleterious to health; provided, that this paragraph shall not be construed to prohibit the use of harmless coloring matter in ice cream when not used for fraudulent purposes.

Third.—If it shall contain any deleterious flavoring matter or flavoring matter not true to name.

Fourth.—If it be an imitation of, or offered for sale under, the name of another article.

Section 3 provides that nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit the use of fresh eggs and not exceeding one-half of one per centum of pure gelatine, gum tragacanth, or other vegetable gums.

Section 4 provides that no ice cream shall be sold within the State containing less than eight per centum butter fat, except where fruit or nuts are used for the purpose of flavoring when it shall not contain less than six per centum butter fat.

Section 5 provides that it shall not be lawful for any person, firm, or corporate body to sell, offer for sale, expose for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell, any ice cream in any container which is falsely labeled or branded as to the name of the manufacturer thereof or to misrepresent in any way the place of manufacture of ice cream or the manufacturer thereof.

Section 6 provides that any person, firm, or corporate body who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $50.

Section 7 provides for the enforcement of the provisions of the act by the Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Section 8 provides for the collection of all fines and penalties by the Dairy and Food Commissioner or his agent and the payment thereof by the said Dairy and Food Commissioner to the State Treasurer for the use of the Commonwealth.

To Prevent Fraud in the Manufacture of Lard or Its Substitutes.

This is an act to protect the public health and prevent fraud and deception in the manufacture or sale of lard, lard substitutes, imitation lard and lard compounds, providing penalties for the violation thereof and providing for the enforcement thereof.

Section 1 provides that no person, firm or corporate body by himself, herself, itself, or themselves, or by his, her, its, or their agents, servants, or employes, shall, within the state, manufacture, sell, offer for sale, expose for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell, lard which contains any ingredients other than the pure fat of swine, except as hereinafter provided.

Section 2 provides that imitation lard and lard substitutes not containing any lard, may be made and sold when offered for sale and sold under the distinctive trade name thereof; provided, however, that if said imitation lard or lard substitute is offered for sale or sold from a broken package, then the vessel, receptacle, or wrapper receiving the same, at the time of every sale shall be plainly labeled or marked on the outside thereof in letters at least one-half inch in length and plainly exposed to view, with the words "IMITATION LARD," or "LARD SUBSTITUTE," or the distinctive trade name of the said article or substance; and provided further, that the said imitation lard or lard substitute shall not be composed of or contain any article substance or ingredient deleterious to health.

Compounds composed of not less than fifty per centum of pure lard and other substance or substances not deleterious to health, may be made and sold if the vessel, receptacle or other wrapper receiving the same at the time of every sale thereof, is plainly marked or labeled on the outside thereof in letters at least one-half inch in length and plainly exposed to view with the words "COMPOUND LARD."

Section 3 provides that any person, firm or corporate body who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than $50, nor more than $100.

Section 4 provides for the enforcement of the act by the Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Section 5 provides that all fines and penalties imposed and recovered shall be paid to the Dairy and Food Commissioner or his agent and by the said Dairy and Food Commissioner paid to the State Treasurer for the use of the Commonwealth.

Section 6 repeals all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act.

RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

AS TO FOODS AND CONDIMENTS.

Rule 1. The use of coal tar dye or other foreign coloring matter in catsup or other condiments is regarded with disfavor, and catsup found to contain such coloring matter in connection with benzoate of soda will be regarded as adulterated and treated accordingly.

Rule 2. The use of boric acid, salicylic acid or sulphites in meats or other articles of food will be regarded as an adulteration and treated accordingly. Any poisonous or deleterious preservative or coloring matter applied externally which has been permitted to permeate or penetrate the meat or other food product, or any portion thereof, will be regarded as an adulteration.

Rule 3. Until otherwise ordered articles of food imported from countries which have been found to be in compliance with the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, will not be regarded as sold in violation of the laws of Pennsylvania.

Rule 4. Pepper and all other spices containing any added or foreign substances whatsoever will be regarded as adulterated.

AS TO CONFECTIONERY.

Rule 6. Mineral substances of all kinds are especially forbidden in confectionery, whether poisonous or not. Only harmless colors or flavors should be added to confectionery.

The term "narcotic drugs" include all drugs mentioned in section 8 of the federal food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, relating to foods, their derivatives and preparation, and all other drugs of a narcotic nature.

AS TO MISBRANDING.

Rule 7. The provisions of the act of June 1, 1907, as to the misbranding of food, will be strictly observed and rigidly enforced.

The principal label on articles of food shall be in English, with type not smaller than 8-point (brevier) caps: Provided, That in case the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type the size of the type may be reduced proportionately.

Descriptive matter upon the label shall be free from any statement, design, or device regarding the article or the ingredients or substances contained therein, or quality thereof, or place of origin, which is false or misleading in any particular.

Jellies, fruit butters, fruit jams, or other like products shall not be labeled with the name of any distinctive fruit unless such fruit alone has been used in its preparation. Articles intended as substitutes for pure food jellies, butters, jams and other like products, shall be plainly marked as compounds, and the several ingredients shall be plainly stated thereon, and the name of no distinctive fruit shall be used upon the label thereof to indicate its flavor.

Prepared mustard shall bear upon the label thereof a distinct statement of all the ingredients and the percentage of mustard contained therein.

Flavoring extracts must be true to name. Imitation flavoring extracts shall not be designated by terms which indicate in any way by similarity of name that they were prepared from a natural fruit or from a standard flavor.

Flavoring extracts in the preparation of which any substances are employed for natural fruits or standard flavors shall not be labeled as if prepared from standard flavors or from the fruits themselves.

GUARANTEE.

The guarantee referred to in the new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, should in all cases be a written or printed invoice guarantee upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor and substantially in the following language, to wit:

I (or we) the vendor of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the federal act of June 30, 1906, popularly known as the "Foods and Drugs Act," and also further hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the act of General Assembly of Pennsylvania, popularly known as "the new Pennsylvania Food Law," approved June 1, 1907, in that said articles are not adulterated within the meaning of the aforesaid act of Congress or the aforesaid act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, and that the said articles are not misbranded within the meaning of either of the said acts.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAIL DEALERS.

The new Pennsylvania food law, approved June 1, 1907, is intended to protect retail dealers in food products. In order to avail themselves of this protection it is important that every retail dealer shall secure from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes purchases, a signed guarantee of each invoice of goods. In order that the goods may be subsequently identified, it is important that the date of purchase be marked upon the goods secured under each invoice. Where the goods are contained in separate packages, this identification can readily be secured by the use of a rubber stamp giving the date of purchase. Unless the retail dealer is able to identify with absolute certainty the vendor from whom his goods were procured, the act will not protect him. This will require the greatest care, not only in marking the date of purchase, but in keeping the articles purchased from different manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers bearing the same brand, entirely apart from each other, so that at any time the identification of the vendor of each article can be clearly established. It is equally important that the retail dealer shall keep the articles purchased in precisely the same condition as when they are received. A failure to distinctly identify the vendor, or to clearly prove that articles purchased have been kept in the exact condition as to quality as when purchased, will deprive the retail dealer of any protection.

When an agent of the Dairy and Food Division calls upon a retail dealer, it is requested and confidently expected that courtesy will be exercised both by the dealer and the agent.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rule No. 10.

(Issued July 1, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 1 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 10, MEATS AND FISH.

Rule 10. Meats and fish must at all times be kept in a pure, clean and healthful condition.

In the summer season they must be covered or protected from flies and insects by screens or other device, and must be kept at such temperature as will absolutely prevent any decomposition.

Refrigerators and ice boxes for the storage of meats and fish must be kept well iced and clean.

Stores, market houses and all rooms used for the storage or sale of meats and fish must be clean, properly ventilated and kept in a sanitary condition.

Any meat or fish not so cared for will be considered in violation and treated accordingly.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rule No. 11.

(Issued September 25, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 2, TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE NO. 11. EVAPORATED FRUITS.

Rule 11. It should be understood by the trade and the public that Rule 2, specifically referring to meat and other articles of food, covers evaporated fruits, and that if said fruits contain any added substance or ingredient which is poisonous or injurious to health, such as sulphurous acid, the sale thereof will be treated as a violation of the law.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rules Nos. 12 and 13.

(Issued October 25, 1907.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 3 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 12, LABELS. RULE 13, SODIUM BENZOATE AND BENZOIC ACID.

Rule 12. Numerous requests are referred to this Division for the approval of labels to be used in connection with food products under the Pennsylvania Pure Food Act of June 1, 1907. This Act does not authorize the Dairy and Food Commissioner, nor any Agent of the Division, to approve labels. The Division, therefore, will not give its approval to any label. Any printed matter upon the label implying that this Division has approved it will be without warrant. It is believed that with the law and regulations before the manufacturers they will have no difficulty in arranging labels in conformity with the requirements set forth.

Rule 13. No prosecutions will be based upon the manufacture, sale or having in possession with intent to sell, foods and food products manufactured or packed during the season of 1907 which contains sodium benzoate in quantities not exceeding one-tenth of 1 per cent., or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, provided sodium benzoate or benzoic acid has hitherto been generally used in such foods and food products; and provided further that sodium benzoate or benzoic acid is not used in connection with coal-tar dyes or any foreign coloring matter.

The label of each package of food or food product containing sodium benzoate or benzoic acid shall bear a statement that the food contains one-tenth of 1 per cent. of sodium benzoate, or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, as the case may be.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Rule No. 14.

(Issued July 2nd, 1908.)

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION, SUPPLEMENT NO. 4 TO RULES AND REGULATIONS PREPARED BY THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER OF PENNSYLVANIA IN PURSUANCE OF SECTION 3 OF THE ACT OF JUNE 1, 1907.

RULE 14, DRIED OR EVAPORATED FRUITS SUPERSEDING RULE NO. 11.

Whereas, it is provided in Section 3 of the Pure Food Act of June 1, 1907, (P. L. 386), that

"The Dairy and Food Commissioner shall make uniform rules and regulations under and subject to which the provisions of this Act shall be enforced and such rules and regulations shall, where practicable, conform to and be the same as the rules and regulations adopted from time to time for the enforcement of the Act of Congress, approved June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and six, and known as the 'Food and Drugs Act.' Such rules and regulations to be published from time to time in Bulletins to be issued by the Department," and

Whereas, it is provided in Section 5 of said Act:

"That no action shall be brought or sustained for violation of the provisions of this section when the article alleged to be adulterated is not adulterated within the meaning of the provisions of the 'Food and Drugs Act' of June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and six, enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, and the rules and regulations promulgated from time to time for the enforcement of the same, and

WHEREAS, the United States Department of Agriculture on March 5, 1908, promulgated Decision No. 89, providing, substantially, inter alia, that pending determination by the Referee Board of the wholesomeness or unwholesomeness of the use of Sulphur Dioxide as an addition to food in minute quantities, its use will be allowed under certain restrictions, viz:

"No objection will be made to foods which contain the ordinary quantities of Sulphur Dioxide if the fact that such foods have been so prepared is plainly stated upon the label of each package. An abnormal quantity of Sulphur Dioxide placed in food for the purpose of marketing an excessive moisture content will be regarded as fraudulent adulteration * * * and will be proceeded against accordingly."

Now therefore, in compliance with said Section 3 the following rule is hereby promulgated:

Pending said determination by said Referee Board no prosecutions will be instituted for selling, offering for sale or having in possession with intent to sell, dried or evaporated fruits which contain ordinary quantities of Sulphur Dioxide, if the fact that such foods have been so prepared is plainly stated upon the label of each package.

An abnormal quantity of Sulphur Dioxide placed in food for the purpose of marketing an excessive moisture content will be regarded as fraudulent adulteration and will be proceeded against accordingly.

This rule is made to conform with the rules and regulations of the United States Department of Agriculture, and if occasion for its rescission shall arise notice of such rescission will be published in a Bulletin issued by this Department.

JAMES FOUST,

Dairy and Food Commissioner.

N. B. The above rule supercedes Rule No. 11, heretofore promulgated.

Harrisburg, Pa., October 1, 1907.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE GUIDANCE AND GOVERNMENT OF PERSONS PROPOSING TO ENGAGE IN THE MANUFACTURE, SALE OR USE OF OLEOMARGARINE OR RENOVATED BUTTER, AS AUTHORIZED UNDER THE ACTS OF ASSEMBLY APPROVED THE 29TH OF MAY, 1901, AND JULY 10TH, 1901, AS PRESCRIBED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE THROUGH ITS AGENT, THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER.

1. No license will be granted to a non-resident of the State of Pennsylvania.

2. No license will be transferred from any person, firm or corporation convicted of any violation of the Acts of Assembly under which such license is issued, nor while proceedings are pending for violation of said acts against such person, firm or corporation.

3. Remittance (either bank draft, cashier's cheque or certificate of deposit, preferred) for license fees must accompany the application for license. Individual cheques must be certified by the bank on which same are issued or drawn. Checks and drafts must be made payable to the order of the State Treasurer, and upon receipt thereof by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, if the application is approved, a license certificate will be promptly issued.

4. The attention of intending applicants for license and of all licensees, is especially directed to that portion of Section 7 of the Act of 29th of May, 1901, which provides: "That upon conviction of any subsequent offense, the person so offending shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than twelve months."

The express direction of said act is imprisonment in addition to the minimum fine therein specified.

In addition to the fine and imprisonment imposed for second offenses, injunction proceedings will be instituted, and no license will be transferred from any person against whom such proceedings are pending.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

THE NEW PURE FOOD LAW.

The pure food act passed at the recent session of the Legislature and signed by Governor Stuart May 13th, will be found in full in another part of this number of the Bulletin. Those readers who are interested in the new measure—and manufacturers, venders and consumers ought to be—are advised to study its various provisions carefully at their leisure. In many respects it is one of the most important measures of the sort ever enacted in this State and we do not just now recall any food law that goes to such lengths in the effort to protect the consumer from doubtful preservatives or adulterants. While the general lines of the federal food law are followed the new law prohibits the use of nitrous acid, compounds of copper and various other chemicals, all of which are specifically banned by name. The use of benzoate of soda, in quantity not to exceed one-tenth of one per centum, in certain foods in which it has heretofore been generally used, and sulphur dioxide in dried fruits and molasses only, is permitted, provided notice is given on each package of such food.

Aside from the positive merits of this act it must be remembered that the Superior Court affirmed the action of Judge Smith, of Clearfield county, in declaring unconstitutional certain essential features of the Tustin act, the law of 1907. As the section annulled by this action referred specifically to the use of preservatives or adulterants it will readily be perceived that the act was so badly shattered as to be practically useless and that had not the Governor approved the Murphy act it would have been necessary to fall back upon the act of 1895, which was very obnoxious to retail dealers and also very decidedly behind the age. As this act contains a guarantee feature which protects the retailer who can establish a guarantee from the person or firm from whom he bought the goods certifying that the products comply with the State law, a feature which the act of 1895 lacked, it will doubtless be satisfactory to retailers.

Readers of the Bulletin may be interested in the following expression of opinion concerning the effectiveness of the new act. It was given to some of the newspaper people by Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust on the day the act became a law by the Governor's approval:

"This act can be enforced. Its technical features are for the courts to interpret, but administratively it is not only a distinct

THE NEW PURE FOOD LAW.

The pure food act passed at the recent session of the Legislature and signed by Governor Stuart May 13th, will be found in full in another part of this number of the Bulletin. Those readers who are interested in the new measure—and manufacturers, venders and consumers ought to be—are advised to study its various provisions carefully at their leisure. In many respects it is one of the most important measures of the sort ever enacted in this State and we do not just now recall any food law that goes to such lengths in the effort to protect the consumer from doubtful preservatives or adulterants. While the general lines of the federal food law are followed the new law prohibits the use of nitrous acid compounds of copper and various other chemicals, all of which are specifically banned by name. The use of benzoate of soda, in quantity not to exceed one-tenth of one per centum, in certain foods in which it has heretofore been generally used, and sulphur dioxide in dried fruits and vegetables, is also prohibited, and the law requires the placing on each package of such food.

Aside from the positive merits of this act it ought to be remembered that the Superior Court, directed by action of Judge Smith, of Chautauque County, has taken cognizance of the new law, and has held it to be valid. This is the first time since the law of 1907. As the law is so generally accepted by the courts, it will readily be perceived that the act was so badly motivated as to be practically useless, and that had not the Governor approved the measure it would have been necessary to fall back upon the act of 1895, which was very objectionable to merchants and also very decidedly behind the age. As this act contains a guarantee feature which protects the retailer who can establish a guarantee from the person or firm from whom he bought the goods, certifying that the products comply with the State law, a feature which the act of 1895 lacked, it will doubtless be satisfactory to retailers.

Readers of the Bulletin may be interested in the following expression of opinion concerning the effectiveness of the new act. It was given to some of the newspaper people by Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust on the day the act became a law by the Governor's approval:

"This act can be enforced. Its technical features are for the courts to interpret, but administratively it is not only a distinct improvement, generally speaking, over any previous law in Pennsylvania, but, as far as I know, it is better than the food law of any other state to-day. It is certainly better than the national food and drugs act.

"The national act prohibits nothing by name and its general provision regarding preservatives reads as follows: 'If it contain any added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient which may render such article injurious to health.' Under this language it would be necessary to prove that the quantity of the chemical used rendered the particular article of food injurious to health, while under the new Pennsylvania law, which prohibits any added ingredients deleterious to health and also specifically names all known injurious chemical preservatives, it will only be necessary to prove the presence of the deleterious ingredient, regardless of quantity. This language is the same as that of the act of 1895, on which the Supreme Court has decided that the question of quantity is immaterial if the chemical itself is injurious.

"One of the best features of the law is the criminal proceeding. The act of 1907 provided only for a civil proceeding, which was found to be too slow, cumbersome and expensive to permit of proper enforcement.

"The guarantee feature protects the honest retailer who can establish a guarantee from the house from which he obtained the goods that the same is not adulterated or misbranded in violation of the Pennsylvania law but an additional provision prevents the abuse of the guarantee by stating that if the retailer continues to sell after being officially notified he will be prosecuted regardless of the guarantee.

"Large sums will be saved to the Commonwealth by the fact that under this law it will not be necessary to call medical experts in any prosecution, whereas under the old law this was necessary in every case."

SURE SIGNS OF PROGRESS.

In the last number of the Bulletin appeared the new acts passed by the Legislature of 1909 and signed by the Governor up to the time of the preparation of that number. In connection with the acts already on the statute books these enactments greatly strengthen the hands of the Dairy and Food Commissioner and his agents and make it more difficult for the unscrupulous dealer to impose unfit food upon the consuming public. Pennsylvania is rapidly acquiring a body of laws which place her among the foremost and most progressive states of the union in the matter of prohibiting the use of questionable preservatives or adulterants.

These new laws are largely the result of agitation among the rank and file of the people on their behalf. There was a period in the history of this State when very few of the consumers bothered themselves about the quality of the food handed out to them by their grocers. Nor were the latter any better informed, as a rule, than their patrons. They knew that the people wished to get their food at the lowest possible price and about the only restriction they laid on the manufacturer or jobber from whom they made their purchases was that the goods should look well and sell for a low price. Cheapness was the rage then as it still is to a considerable extent. Public sentiment had not yet been roused.

A great change has taken place within the last few years. The more unscrupulous among the manufacturers were largely responsible for that change. They became too eager to cater to the craze for cheap things. In order to do that successfully it became necessary to reduce the quality of the foodstuffs put on the market. While making no decrease in quantity they cut down the quality to such an extent that their cheapest products brought them in the greatest relative profits. But the thing got so bad that pure food legislation was demanded. It came and is coming more effectively with each legislative session. More than that, householders have awakened to a realization of the danger of the situation and an increasingly large number of them must be satisfied by an inspection of the labels concerning the actual quality of the goods they purchase. This sentiment not only makes it necessary for the Legislature to enact better laws with each passing session; it also makes the housekeepers of the State effective agents in the enforcement of every act intended to prevent adulteration of food. The situation is still far from perfect, but it's decidedly encouraging.

CONCERNING DEALINGS IN ROTTEN EGGS.

One of the needed acts passed by the Legislature at the session of 1909 was that prohibiting the sale of rotten eggs in this Commonwealth and providing drastic punishment for violations of the act. The Bulletin gave the details of that iniquity at the time of the very complete exposure of the vile traffic through the investigations of Agent Cassidy, of the Dairy and Food Division. There was nothing nice or soothing about the revelations made, but public sentiment was roused to such a degree that the bill providing for the suppression of this detestable traffic went through both branches of the Legislature with little or no opposition. If any disposition is shown to evade the provisions of this act or to continue the traffic in noisome eggs examples will surely be made of the traffickers. Much of the buying of the American people is done on faith. The average consumer cannot go to headquarters every hour of every day and make a first hand inspection of the condition of the various plants in which his food is prepared or of the quality of the ingredients of which that food is composed. The average citizen is honest enough to do the best he knows how in his daily work and he naturally takes it for granted that his neighbor—meaning thereby the manufacturer of the food he purchases in the grocery or at the bakery—is similarly conscientious. Unfortunately the facts dug out in connection with the rotten egg investigation showed that some bakers were not proof against the temptation to increase their profits by the use of the hideous mixtures they bought from men whose special business it was to sell old and partially decayed eggs at a trifling cost per pound. Thus it was revealed that many bakers—especially in Philadelphia—were deliberately poisoning their trusting customers by the use of eggs utterly unfit for human food. The facts as they came to light caused many a shudder to convulse those who had been so grossly deceived and so badly treated and the result was the prompt preparation, introduction and passage of the act making it a misdemeanor to impose such foul and unwholesome articles of food upon the unsuspecting public. In the enforcement of this excellent law the consumer is quite as vitally interested as the officer charged with its execution. The man who acts as did those Philadelphia bakers is unfit to do business in a civilized community. He should be relentlessly punished after full exposure has been made of his nefarious methods. And this is what is pretty sure to happen to anybody who undertakes to violate this particular law for the sake of the profits.

WISDOM OF OBEDIENCE TO LAW.

In the operations of the Dairy and Food Department an effort has been made to persuade everybody concerned to obey the laws of the State voluntarily. It is certainly no pleasure to any agent or official of this division to set the forces of the law in operation against a citizen who has been foolish enough to believe he could evade that law and put money in his pocket thereby. Those who are tempted in this direction should look over the field and examine the history of the past ten or twelve years. In most every instance persons who ventured to try the experiment of ignoring the requirements of the act of Assembly, hoping thereby to reap very largely increased profits, came to grief at an early period in their career of wrong-doing. Their crookedness became public property. They were brought face to face with justice. They were convicted and sentenced to pay a more or less heavy fine, or the evidence of their guilt was so overwhelming that they undertook no defense but submitted. In either case they lost all the profits they had reaped by their misconduct and more. Sometimes exposure was followed by financial ruin. In no instance was the expectation of large wealth realized. One would suppose such experiences as have befallen so many adventurers in the realm of business dishonesty would have made a deep impression upon the minds of others who have been tempted to travel the same road. One would have supposed that by this time the truth would have been pregnantly realized that "Honesty is the best policy." Yes, as a mere matter of policy, ignoring one's obligations to duty or to the community, it has been proved time after time, that "Honesty is the best policy." That is the lowest possible view to take; and yet one wonders why more business men do not accept it and act upon it in their relation to the State and the consuming public. We do not admire that mechanical view of one's proper attitude toward others. It is a very poor one; still, it is better than the chronic dishonesty which ever and anon brings a dealer in foodstuffs before the judgment bar and starts him on the road to bankruptcy and ruin. The ideal dealer, of course, is the one who is always frank enough to take his customers into his confidence and to tell them the exact truth about any article he has for sale, so far as he knows that truth. Nor does he omit any legitimate effort to learn what the truth is. A business man of that sort will constantly enlarge the boundaries of his trade for he will win the confidence of his patrons and these will bring him others.

THE PEOPLE AND THE LAW.

The administration of law is invariably made much easier if public sentiment be favorable to that law and if the people sustain the efforts of their servants to enforce it. Experience has proved that legislation which is not backed by public sentiment is never long enforced. Every state in the union has a body of laws concerning which neither officers nor people hear much as the years pass. Whatever may be the fact under despotic governments, it is vitally true in a country like the United States that the people must sustain an act of Assembly if it is to be more than an empty name.

We have in Pennsylvania many good people who sincerely believe that a new law is the panacea for a new evil. If they feel that an action or a practice is wrong they forthwith besiege the halls of legislation until the measure they advocate has become a law; then they calmly fold their hands and sit down, expecting the act to possess some hidden potency and virtue whereby it can be depended upon to enforce itself. As a matter of fact many of these obsolete acts should be repealed, for nobody ever makes the least effort to carry their provisions into effect and it is the experience of every generation that laws disregarded are far more dangerous than laws repealed.

The Bulletin is persuaded that there never was a time in the history of this Commonwealth when public sentiment was more thoroughly aroused on behalf of the enforcement of the statutes regulating the manufacture and sale of food products or of beverages. Within the past few years a great change has taken place in public sentiment concerning these matters. Until the session of the Legislature of 1909 Pennsylvania had no statutes regulating the making or the selling of beverages and the result was certainly deplorable. Public sentiment, informed concerning the practices of manufacturers and dealers, insisted upon additional legislation and this has been provided by the lawmakers. The food laws have likewise been greatly strengthened.

The most encouraging sign of the times in connection with this whole matter is the great advance in public sentiment. Householders are now conscious of the fact that if their families are provided with inferior or adulterated foods it will be largely because they fail to examine the labels or because they do not impress upon their grocers their desire to be provided with the best the market affords. Thus the people are aiding powerfully in the work of enforcing laws, new and old, and the situation is very decidedly improved.

A PARABLE OF NEATNESS.

"I was in a certain barber shop the other day," observed the casual acquaintance, "where I received a shave that will forever stand out in my memory as an evil and an uncanny thing. The half-grown boy who performed the preliminary operations had no gentle hand.

His touch was not a caress. It was more like a blow. The sensation produced by lathering and brushing was exceedingly disagreeable. One felt that when one had good money to pay one was entitled to more consideration, somewhat less contemptuous handling. The barber himself could shave very well; he did his work quite as handily as the average member of his useful calling. But his towels were by no means immaculate; in truth they created the impression that they had been used upon scores of customers. When I left the shop it was with sensations not easily uttered.

"The next time I had need of a barber I hunted up a different looking sort of a place. The room was large, airy, neat and clean, the wall covered by handsome pictures, every one appealing to the noblest part of one's being. The barber who took me in charge had a dainty, caressing touch. His razor was in perfect condition. He gave me an elegant shave, used fine, clean towels upon my face and sent me forth feeling that I had been made to look cleaner in every way. The charge was exactly the same at both places, but I gladly handed the second operator more than double the regular charge. Perhaps that was a bit of foolish and unnecessary extravagance, but I didn't feel it so at that hour and I don't feel it so now. Where will I go next time? Why, where would you go? To the place that made you feel comfortable, wouldn't you, not to the one you left with a guilty sensation that you were urgently in need of a bath."

Now, while there doesn't seem to be any close relation between barber shops and grocery stores, yet may it not be possible that the foregoing true experience of the casual acquaintance contains a moral of considerable significance? The man who takes pains with the appearance of his storeroom, who keeps it neat and clean, brightened up, it may be by the presence of beautiful illustrations, is wise in his day and generation, and may attract custom and retain it, quite as much by the beauty of the room in which he does his daily work as by the worth of his wares. At all events he never loses anything by the experiment.

MARKETABLE MILK.

Under the foregoing title "Hoard's Dairyman" pays its respects to the people who object to the fixing of a standard of butter fat richness in milk which will determine whether or not it is merchantable milk. They say that if the cow gives poor milk, the farmer who is unfortunate enough to be her owner should not be held responsible.

This strikes "Hoard's Dairyman" as very poor logic, both intrinsically and as to its effects upon the farmer. Suppose an apple tree yields poor fruit which is taken to market by the owner. Is he to be absolved from all responsibility? Suppose rust strikes a field of wheat, so that the grain is shrunken and of only half value. Is the farmer who takes it to market to be accounted in the same class as he who takes good wheat? Every man who takes his product to market must be held to some standard of market responsibility for the quality of that product. To say it was inferior when produced does not absolve him. Any other logic or law would have a demoralizing effect. And the conclusion is that it should be made as difficult to sell poor milk as poor apples.

ADVANCING ALL ALONG THE LINE.

"The Milk Reporter" has little sympathy with the farmer who makes no effort to observe the laws of cleanliness, which are the laws of sanitation. Observing the trend of modern methods and the evident determination of the State and local authorities to promote the interests of the cleanly farmer, it wants to know why this should not be the case. Why should the sloppy, dirty, careless farmer receive as much for his milk as his neighbor who makes a good, clean milk, a man who complies in every way with the requirements of the city health boards? The men who are in the business, handling his milk will soon discover his defects and the inferiority of the product he sends to market. The dairyman who is careless and worse will learn perhaps when it is too late that custom cannot be retained unless a first rate article is produced. Careless producers are standing in their own light. As for the work of inspection by the cities it will not be discontinued. On the contrary it will be increased in efficiency as the weeks go by. This is demanded by public sentiment. It is now fully recognized that milk, while one of the most important of human foods, is also very susceptible to adulteration. In its preparation the utmost care is necessary. Those who are unwilling to comply with the demands of modern sanitary science must be left by the wayside.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The cause of pure food is marching on from day to day.

The wise food reformer is never fanatical or intolerant.

One who gets in the habit of examining the labels is wise.

A short-weight man is an abomination in the sight of an honest community.

Cheerfulness, good humor and truthfulness are valuable trade auxiliaries.

The wise man fights for the best thing he knows and accepts what he can get.

A handsome manner in business relations is more valuable than a handsome face.

One never knows how little really good food one can not only exist upon but actually thrive.

To unselfishly and diligently seek the good of others is one of the highest of earthly aims.

One never knows how valuable the good will of patrons is until it threatens to take its flight.

Now get ready for a campaign against the predatory and dangerous little pest, the common house fly.

Most men find it very easy to obey food laws. A few find it very difficult. It is these who cause the trouble.

Many advertisements of food products, like the foods themselves, must be taken with several grains of salt.

They say the people over in Europe are also beginning to wake up to the importance of the right sort of food and drink.

Many discussions of the existing food situation are not the result of well-digested information; quite the contrary.

The grocer who observes things knows that cleanliness and neatness are powerful aids in the expansion of business.

The new milk law is in the interest of the children of the State. They are entitled to this additional bit of protection.

Success in business at the expense of one's self-respect is no better than the ashes of Sodom—it leaves a bitter taste in the mouth.

How many high-minded, strictly reliable business men there are whom it is at once a pleasure, an honor and a happiness to know.

A dog is frequently a noble animal; in spite of that he should be excluded from the grocery store and its immediate surroundings.

The attitude of the leading newspapers of the country toward the question of pure food is one of the most encouraging signs of the times.

The servant of the people who responds to the highest welfare of his constituents is the ideal public officer. Pennsylvania has more than one such.

The little bits of tidiness which the careful dealer displays about his premises are evidences of character that will impress the average customer from day to day.

It is believed there are few business men in Pennsylvania who are capable of the meanness of purposely deceiving their patrons to the disadvantage of those patrons.

The practice of placing samples of one's groceries and vegetables on the sidewalk is one which may not contribute to cleanliness unless great circumspection be used.

There are many valuable and enterprising trade journals in this country and the Bulletin, which finds many suggestions from their columns, hopes each is prospering as it deserves.

We are going to have a very good time in the old Commonwealth of Pennsylvania over the food and drink question, and that very shortly. The situation is shaping itself up splendidly.

Arrangements should be made now to give our coming visitors, the flies, the bugs and various other troublesomely persistent pests of the welcome summer season a cordial, although hostile reception.

If the great Apostle was willing to be all things to all men for a good purpose, why may not a humble advocate of the best sort of food laws accept what he gets with thankfulness and a hopeful expectancy for the future?

Men may differ in their estimates of the desirability or the undesirability of certain debated products, but they need not quarrel and call names. Far better argue the matter out in loyal devotion to truth as each sees it.

It still remains true that what is one man's meat is another man's poison. That is one of the reasons there are so many conflicting opinions afloat concerning the desirability or otherwise of certain food products and other substances.

Legislators are not such bad fellows as some of their critics try to make out. Those of Pennsylvania have just given us more legislation regarding the regulation of food and drinks than any of their predecessors. And, taking it on the whole, it is better.

The common sense of the consuming public, and especially the active energy of the housekeeper who makes her own purchases and insists upon getting the best will do more to settle the food question than the discussions of dealers or the work of legislators.

This Bulletin is not disposed to be gloomy in its reflections upon the present situation in the pure food realm or concerning the future outcome of the varying discussions, opinions and reflections that are likely to be indulged in during the coming weeks and months.

Every manufacturer, every jobber, every retailer, all who have to do with the manufacture or sale of food in this Commonwealth, should do their best to obey the laws and to compel others to observe them. That would help to bring in the best possible condition of affairs.

Those who are disposed to be pessimistically inclined toward the progress of the agitation favoring better and purer food for the people should devote a few reflective hours to the study of the change in conditions which has occurred during the past few years in this regard.

While the sale of many articles of artificial food products may be legal the law prohibits their sale under assumed names. That is where the hitch comes in. The theory of the law is that the consumer has a right to the precise article he inquires and pays for. Surely, there is nothing unreasonable about such a perfectly sane proposition.

This Bulletin is not dogmatic. It disclaims any belief in the infallibility of its own opinions. It makes no charges of insincerity or self-interests against those with whose views it is unable to coincide. It desires to go the even tenor of its way, seeking the confidence of its constituency in its purpose to serve them in their homes and in the health and long life of their families.

THE FOOD ACT OF 1909.

Synopsis of the Provisions of the Act which Supersedes the Tustin Law of 1907.

The act known as the Murphy Food bill, which received the sanction of both branches of the Legislature and has been approved by Governor Stuart, provides that it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, co-partnership, limited partnership, joint stock company, or corporate body, by himself, herself or themselves, or by his, her, its, or their agents, servants, or employes, to manufacture, sell, offer for sale, expose for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell, any article of food which is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act.

Section 2 provides that the term "Food" as used in this act, shall include not only every article used for food by man, but also every article used for, or entering into the composition of, or intended for use as an ingredient in the preparation of, food for man.

That the term "Person," as used in this act, shall include individuals, firms, co-partnerships, limited partnerships, joint stock companies, and bodies corporate, as well as all officers, agents, servants, employes, or others acting for any of the same, and shall be taken as applying in the singular or plural as the case may require.

Section 3 provides that for the purpose of this act, an article of food shall be deemed to be adulterated:

First—If any substance has been mixed or packed with it so as to reduce, or lower, or injuriously affect its quality, strength, or purity.

Second—If any substance has been substituted, wholly or in part, for the article.

Third—If any valuable constituent of the article has been, wholly or in part, abstracted.

Fourth—If it be mixed, colored, or changed in color, coated, polished, powdered, stained, or bleached, whereby damage or inferiority is concealed, or so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser, or if by any means it is made to appear better or of greater value than it is.

Fifth—If it contains any added sulphurous acid, sulphur dioxide, or sulphites, benzoate acid or benzoates, except as hereafter provided, or if it contains any added boric acid or borates, salicylic acid or silicic acid, formaldehyde, hydrofluoric acid or fluorides, fluoborates, fluosilicates, or other fluorine compounds, dulcin, glucin, saccharin, alum, compounds of copper, betanaphrol, hydronaphrol, abrasol, asaprol, oxides of nitrogen, nitrous acid or nitrites, pyroligneous acid, or other added ingredients deleterious to health; or if, in the case of confectionery, it contains any of the substances mentioned in this paragraph, or any mineral substance or injurious color or flavor, alcoholic liquor, or any other ingredient, not herein mentioned, deleterious to health: Provided, That this act shall not be construed to prohibit the use of harmless colors of any kind in confectionery, when used for coloring, and not for any fraudulent purpose: And provided further, That nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit the use of common salt, sugar, pure corn syrup, pure glucose, wine vinegar, cider vinegar, malt vinegar, sugar vinegar, glucose vinegar, distilled vinegar, spices or their essential oils, alcohol (except in confectionery), edible oils, edible fats, wood smoke applied directly as generated, or proper refrigeration: And provided further, That in the manufacture of confectionery, the use of alcohol shall be permitted as it may be found in customary alcoholic tinctures or extracts, used for flavoring purposes only, and as a solvent for glazes, and that oil of sweet birch, or methyl salicylic ester, may be used as a substitute for oil of wintergreen as a flavor: And provided further, That in the preparation of dried fruits and molasses, sulphur dioxide, either free or in simple combination, may be used in such quantities as will not render said dried fruits or molasses deleterious to health; and that sodium benzoate may be used in the preparation of those articles of food in which it has heretofore been generally used in quantities not exceeding one-tenth of one per centum, or benzoic acid equivalent thereto: And provided further, That when any quantity of sodium benzoate is used in any article of food, or any quantity of sulphur dioxide is used in the preparation of dried fruits or molasses, the fact that sodium benzoate or sulphur dioxide has been used in the preparation thereof, shall be plainly stated on each package of such food.

Sixth—If it consists of, or is manufactured in whole or in part from, a diseased, contaminated, filthy, or decomposed substance, either animal or vegetable, or an animal or vegetable substance produced, stored, transported, or kept, in a way or manner that would render the article diseased, contaminated, or unwholesome, or if it is any part of the product of a diseased animal, or the product of an animal that has died otherwise than by slaughter.

Section 4 provides that for the purpose of this act, an article shall be deemed to be misbranded:

First. If it be in imitation of, or offered for sale under the name of, another article.

Second. If it be labeled or branded so that it may deceive or mislead the purchasers, or purport to be a foreign product when not so, or if the contents of the package as originally put up shall have been removed, in whole or in part, and other inferior contents shall have been placed in such package.

Third. If the package containing it, or its label, shall bear any statement, design or device regarding the substances or ingredients contained therein, which statement, design, or device shall be false or misleading in any particular.

Fourth. If it be a mixture or compound which may now be known, or from time to time hereafter known, as an article of food, unless it be accompanied on the label or brand with a statement that it is a mixture or compound and a statement of the substance entering into said mixture or compound. All labeling of packages required by this act shall be on the main label of each package, and in type not less than eight point brevier caps in size, unless the size of the package will not permit the use of eight point cap type, in which case the size of the type may be reduced proportionately, and in such position and terms as may be plainly seen and read by the purchaser: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed as requiring or compelling the proprietors, manufacturers, or sellers of proprietary foods to disclose their trade formulas, except in so far as may be necessary, under the provisions of this act, to avoid adulteration, imitation or misbranding.

Section 5 provides that when the Dairy and Food Commissioner, or his agent, shall obtain an article of food, or a sample or portion thereof, from any person for the purpose of determining whether the same is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act, and it shall be found that the said article of food is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act, then the Dairy and Food Commissioner shall proceed against the said person from whose store, warehouse, or other place of business said article, sample, or portion thereof, shall have been obtained, for a violation of this act.

But no prosecution shall be sustained under the provisions of this act against a retail dealer for the selling, offering for sale, exposing for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, of any adulterated or misbranded article of food as defined herein, if the retail dealer from whom the said article of food, sample or portion thereof, was obtained by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, or his agent, can establish a guaranty, signed by the manufacturer, or wholesale dealer, or jobber, or distributor, residing in the United States, from whom such article of food was purchased or procured, to the effect that the same is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act designating it.

Said guaranty, to afford protection, shall contain the name and address of the manufacturer, or wholesale dealer, or jobber, or distributor, making the sale of such article of food to such retailer, and in such case the said manufacturer, or wholesale dealer, or jobber, or distributor, so as aforesaid, giving such guarantee shall be amenable to the prosecution, fines and other penalties which would attach in due course to the retailer holding such guaranty under the provisions of this act, and for a violation hereof, and every manufacturer, or wholesale dealer, or jobber, or distributor, giving a guaranty under the provisions of this act shall be held responsible, and shall be proceeded against for the adulteration or misbranding of any article of food sold under said guaranty, and shall be subject to the penalties for the violation of the provisions of this act. No such guaranty shall operate as a defense to prosecution for a violation of the provisions of this act, if the retailer holding such guaranty shall continue to sell the same article of food after written or printed notice from the Dairy and Food Commissioner, or his agent, that such article is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act.

But if said person shall violate the provisions of paragraph six, section three, of this act, by having stored, or transported, or kept, said article, in said paragraph mentioned, in a way or manner to render it diseased, contaminated, or unwholesome, said person shall be proceeded against for a violation of the provisions of this act, and it shall not be necessary for conviction that any article, sample or portion thereof, shall be obtained by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, or his agent, as a condition precedent to prosecution.

Section 6 declares that for the purpose of this act, an article shall be deemed to be the same article:

First—When it shall be of the same brand, or have thereon the same label, and shall be adulterated or misbranded in the same way.

Second—When it is not labeled or branded, but is sold, offered for sale, or exposed for sale, under the same name, and adulterated or misbranded in the same way.

Third—When although sold, offered for sale, or exposed for sale under another name, or labeled or branded in a different way, it shall be found to be the product of the same manufacturer, grower, or maker, and to be adulterated or misbranded in the same way: Provided, however, That an article shall be deemed to be adulterated in the same way when it shall contain the same adulterant substance or substances.

Section 7 provides that any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than sixty dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars.

Section 8 provides that the Dairy and Food Commissioner of the State shall be charged with the enforcement of the provisions of this act, and shall make rules and regulations for the proper enforcement thereof, and shall cause such rules and regulations to be published in the official bulletin in the issue immediately following the preparation of the same.

Section 9 provides that all fines and penalties imposed and recovered for the violation of any of the provisions of this act shall be paid to the Dairy and Food Commissioner, or his agent, and by the Dairy and Food Commissioner be paid into the State Treasury for the use of the Commonwealth.

Section 10 provides that the following acts of Assembly, namely, an act, entitled:

"An act to provide against the adulteration of food; and providing for the enforcement thereof," approved, the twenty-sixth day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five;

And an act, entitled,

"An act for the protection of public health, by prohibiting the manufacture, sale, offering for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, within the State, of adulterated, misbranded, poisonous, or deleterious foods and confections; regulating the enforcement of the provisions hereof; providing for the protection of persons buying and selling adulterated or misbranded foods and confections under a guaranty; and providing penalties for the violation thereof," approved, the first day of June, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and seven, be, and the same are, hereby repealed.

Provided, nevertheless, That this act shall not apply to, nor in any way affect;

An act, entitled,

"An act to prohibit the adulteration or coloring of milk and cream by the addition of so-called preservatives or coloring matter, and to provide for the enforcement of the same," approved, the tenth day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven,

And the amendment thereto, approved the nineteenth day of April, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and one, entitled,

"An act, to amend the first section of an act, entitled, 'An act to prohibit the adulteration or coloring of milk and cream by the addition of so-called preservatives or coloring matter, and to provide for the enforcement of the same,' approved the tenth day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven.

Nor the act entitled,

"An act to prohibit the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, butterine, and other similar products, when colored in imitation of yellow butter; to provide for license fees to be paid manufacturers, wholesale and retail dealers, and by proprietors of hotels, restaurants, dining rooms and boarding houses; for the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, butterine, or other similar products, not colored in imitation of yellow butter; and to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, butterine, or other similar products, not colored in imitation of yellow butter, and prevent and punish fraud and deception in such manufacture and sale as an imitation butter; and to prescribe penalties and punishment for violations of this act, and the means and the method of procedure for its enforcement, and regulate certain matters of evidence in such procedure," approved, the twenty-ninth day of May, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and one.

Nor the act, entitled,

"An act defining boiled or process butter; designating the name by which it shall be known; providing for the licensing of manufacturers and dealers therein, and regulating the sale and labeling of the same so as to prevent fraud and deception in its sale; providing for violations of this act, the methods of procedure for its enforcement, and certain matters of evidence in such procedure," approved, the tenth day of July, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and one,

Nor the act, entitled,

"An act to prohibit the selling, shipping, consigning, offering for sale, exposing for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, as fresh, any meat, poultry, game, fish, or shell-fish, which contains any substance or article possessing a preservative or coloring character or action; making the same a misdemeanor; and to prescribe penalties and punishment for violations, and the means and the methods of procedure for the enforcement thereof," approved, the twenty-eighth day of March, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and five,

Nor the act, entitled,

"An act providing for the regulation of the manufacture and sale of distilled and fermented vinegars; prescribing their standard, to prevent the adulteration of the same; providing for the enforcement thereof, and punishment for the violation of the same," approved, the eighteenth day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven,

Nor the amendment thereto, approved the twenty-first day of May, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and one, entitled,

"An act, to amend the first and second section of an act, entitled, 'An act providing for the regulation of the manufacture and sale of distilled and fermented vinegars, prescribing their standard to prevent the adulteration of the same; providing for the enforcement thereof, and the punishment for the violation of the same,' approved, the eighteenth day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven, so as to provide that vinegar made wholly from grapes, apples, or other fruits, shall not be required to contain an acidity of four per centum,"

Nor the act, entitled,

"An act to prevent fraud and deception in the manufacture and sale of cheese, and defining what shall constitute the various grades of cheese; providing rules and regulations for marking and branding the same; providing for the enforcement of this act; prescribing penalties for its violation," approved, the twenty-third day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven,

And the amendment thereto, approved the second day of May, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and one, entitled,

"An act, to amend section two of an act, entitled 'An act to prevent fraud and deception in the manufacture and sale of cheese, and defining what shall constitute the various grades of cheese, providing rules and regulations for marking and branding the same; providing for the enforcement of this act; prescribing penalties for its violation,' approved, the twenty-third day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven,

Nor the act, entitled,

"An act regulating the manufacture or sale of fruit syrups, providing for the enforcement thereof, and to repeal an act, entitled 'An act relative to adulteration of natural fruit juice, and providing penalties for violation thereof,' approved, the second day of May, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and one, approved the twenty-sixth day of April, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and five;

All of which acts shall remain in full force.

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE. DAIRY AND FOOD BUREAU.

Rules Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10.

Rules and regulations for the enforcement of the provisions of the Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909.

As required by Section 8 of the Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, the Dairy and Food Commissioner, charged with the enforcement of the provisions of said act, has made the following rules and regulations for the enforcement thereof.

These rules, where possible, conform to and are the same as the rules and regulations adopted for the enforcement of the act of Congress, approved June 30, 1906, commonly known as the "Food and Drugs Act."

RULE NO. 1, SAUSAGE. Sausage or sausage meat shall be held to be a comminuted meat from neat cattle or swine, or a mixture of such meats, either fresh, salted, pickled or smoked, with added salt and spices and with or without the addition of edible animal fats, blood and sugar, or subsequent smoking. It shall contain no larger amount of water than the meats from which it is prepared, contain when in their fresh condition, and if it bears a name descriptive of kind, composition, or origin, it must correspond to such descriptive name. All animal tissues used as containers, such as casings, stomachs, etc., must be clean and sound and impart to the contents no other substance than salt. All sausage found to contain any cereal, or added water, or other substance, except as herein stated, shall be deemed to be adulterated.

RULE NO. 2, FRUIT PRESERVES, JAMS AND JELLIES. All fruit preserves, jams and jellies shall be true to name and contain nothing but the fruit after which they are called, together with sugar; except, that fruit butters may contain spices and vinegar. Where glucose is used as a substitute for sugar, either in whole or in part, for the purpose of sweetening or cheapening an article of food, the substance should be marked to show the presence of glucose, such as glucose jelly, glucose jam, glucose fruit butter, together with the name of the fruit which gives it the flavor, in accordance with the provisions of the act relating to branding.

RULE NO. 3, POWDERING AND COATING. The term "powdered," as used in the fourth clause of section 3 of the act, shall be held to mean the application of any powdered substance to the exterior portion of articles of food.

The term "coated," as used in the same clause, shall mean the application of any substance to the exterior portion of a food product.

RULE NO. 4, COATING OF RICE. No coating of any kind may be used for rice where the same is used to conceal damage or inferiority, or to make the rice appear of better or greater value than it is. In each case, whether or not such a result be secured, is a question of fact to be decided by the evidence.

RULE NO. 5, COLORS. The use of any dye, harmless or otherwise, to color or stain a food in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed, or whereby the food is made to appear of better or greater value than it is, is specifically prohibited by law. The use in food for any purposes of any mineral dye, or any coal tar dyes not hereinafter listed, will be grounds for prosecution. Until further notice the coal tar dyes hereinafter named, made specifically for use in foods, and which bear a guaranty from the manufacturer that they are free from subsidiary products and represent the actual substance the name of which they bear, may be used in foods. The following coal tar dyes which may be used in this manner are given numbers, the numbers preceding the names referring to the number of the dye in question as listed in A. G. Green's edition of the Schultz-Julius Systematic Survey of the Organic Coloring Matters, published in 1904.

The list is as follows:

RED SHADES:

107. Amaranth.

56. Ponceau 3 R.

517. Erythrosin.

ORANGE SHADE:

85. Orange I.

YELLOW SHADE:

4. Naphthol yellow S.

GREEN SHADE:

435. Light green S. F. yellowish.

BLUE SHADE:

692. Indigo disulfoacid.

Each of these colors shall be free from any coloring matter other than the one specified and shall not contain any contamination due to imperfect or incomplete manufacture. (F. I. D. 76.)

RULE NO. 6, SODIUM BENZOATE AND SULPHUR-DIOXIDE. Under the fourth proviso of the fifth clause of section 3, the following articles of food are designated as those articles of food in which benzoate of soda, or benzoic acid, have heretofore been generally used, to wit:

Catsup, mince-meats, sweet chow-chow, sweet pickles, preserves, jams, jellies, fruit-butters, shredded and dried codfish and cider, when used as a food ingredient.

For the purposes of this act, one-tenth of one per centum of benzoate of soda, or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, may be used in the foods above enumerated, provided, the fact that sodium benzoate has been used in the preparation of such foods shall be plainly stated on each package thereof.

The use of sodium benzoate is not permissible in any other articles of food, except those hereinabove designated.

The word "package," as used in the fourth proviso of the fifth clause of section 3 of the act, shall include all containers, whether supplied by the dealer or by the consumer.

RULE NO. 7, SODIUM BENZOATE AND SULPHUR-DIOXIDE, continued. When any quantity of sodium benzoate or sulphur-dioxide has been used in the preparation of a food that fact shall be plainly stated on each package, and the act also provides, under the fourth clause of section 4, relating to misbranding, that the labeling of packages required by this act shall be on the main label of each package, and in type not less than 8-point brevier caps in size, unless the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type, in which case the size of the type may be reduced proportionately and in such position and terms as may be plainly seen and read by the purchasers.

Under these separate clauses the presence of sodium benzoate or sulphur-dioxide will be held to be plainly stated on each package of food when the fact of such presence is stated in such a way as that it may be plainly seen and read by the purchaser, in colors contrasting with the ground on which it is placed and in character of type and position upon the container in conformity with the provisions of the act.

RULE NO. 8, MEATS, PRESERVES AND SIMILAR FOOD SUBSTANCES THAT ARE LIKELY TO BE CONTAMINATED BY EXPOSURE TO FLIES AND OTHER INSECTS, OR EXPOSED TO THE DUST OF THE STREET OR THE STORE. Under the provisions of the sixth clause of section 3 of the act, an article of food is adulterated where the same is an animal or vegetable substance produced, stored, transported, or kept in a way or manner that would render the article diseased, contaminated or unwholesome. Under this clause of the act, meats, preserves and similar food substances that are likely to be contaminated by exposure to flies and other insects, or exposed to the dust of the street or the store will be required to be kept screened so as to prevent all contamination.

RULE NO. 9, GUARANTY. The guaranty referred to in the Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, shall in all cases be a written or printed invoice guaranty, bearing the date of said invoice, upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor, and substantially in the following language, to wit:

I (or we) the vendor of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, known as the "NEW FOOD LAW," approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, in that the said articles are not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the aforesaid act.

(Signature).....

RULE NO. 10, LABELS. Numerous requests are referred to this Bureau for the approval of labels to be used in connection with food products under the Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909. This act does not authorize the Dairy and Food Commissioner, nor any agent of the Bureau, to approve labels. The Bureau, therefore, will not give its approval to any label. Any printed matter upon the label implying that this Bureau has approved it will be without warrant. It is believed that with the law and regulations before the manufacturers they will have no difficulty in arranging labels in conformity with the requirements set forth.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAIL DEALERS.

The new Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, protects innocent retail dealers when its provisions are complied with. In order to avail themselves of this protection, it is important that every retail dealer secure from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes purchases, a signed guarantee of each invoice of goods. In order that the goods may be subsequently identified, it is important that the date of purchase be marked upon the goods secured under each invoice. Where the goods are contained in separate packages, this identification can readily be secured by the use of a rubber stamp giving the date of purchase. Unless the retail dealer is able to identify with certainty the vendor from whom his goods were procured the act will not protect him. This will require the greatest care, not only in marking the date of purchase, but in keeping the articles purchased from different manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers bearing the same brand, entirely apart from each other, so that at any time the identification of the vendor of each article can be clearly established. It is equally important that the retail dealer shall keep the articles purchased in precisely the same condition as when they are received. A failure to distinctly identify the vendor, or to clearly prove that articles purchased have been kept in the exact condition as to quality as when purchased, will deprive the retail dealer of any protection.

When an agent of the Dairy and Food Bureau calls upon a retail dealer, it is requested and confidently expected that courtesy will be exercised both by the dealer and the agent.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Issued May 14, 1909.

Harrisburg, Pa., October 1, 1907.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE GUIDANCE AND GOVERNMENT OF PERSONS PROPOSING TO ENGAGE IN THE MANUFACTURE, SALE OR USE OF OLEOMARGARINE OR RENOVATED BUTTER, AS AUTHORIZED UNDER THE ACTS OF ASSEMBLY APPROVED THE 29TH OF MAY, 1901, AND JULY 10TH, 1901, AS PRESCRIBED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE THROUGH ITS AGENT, THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER.

1. No license will be granted to a non-resident of the State of Pennsylvania.

2. No license will be transferred from any person, firm or corporation convicted of any violation of the Acts of Assembly under which such license is issued, nor while proceedings are pending for violation of said acts against such person, firm or corporation.

3. Remittance (either bank draft, cashier's cheque or certificate of deposit, preferred) for license fees must accompany the application for license. Individual cheques must be certified by the bank on which same are issued or drawn. Checks and drafts must be made payable to the order of the State Treasurer, and upon receipt thereof by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, if the application is approved, a license certificate will be promptly issued.

4. The attention of intending applicants for license and of all licensees, is especially directed to that portion of Section 7 of the Act of 29th May, 1901, which provides: "That upon conviction of any subsequent offense, the person so offending shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than twelve months."

The express direction of said act is imprisonment in addition to the minimum fine therein specified.

In addition to the fine and imprisonment imposed for second offenses, injunction proceedings will be instituted, and no license will be transferred from any person against whom such proceedings are pending.

JAMES FOUST,

Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Statement made by Dairy and Food Commissioner James Foust at a meeting of the Pure Butter Protective Association in Philadelphia, June 17, 1909, held at the rooms of the Philadelphia Produce Exchange, Front and Chestnut Streets, at 1.30 P. M.:

"The recent agitation concerning the prosecutions under the Oleomargarine Act of 1901, and the queries raised as to whether the Act was being enforced in Allegheny and surrounding counties, render it proper that a brief statement should be made at this time of what has actually been undertaken and accomplished by the Dairy and Food Department since the passage of the Act.

"The figures given, of course, convey little idea of the actual amount of work done in the cases, as very many of the samples taken proved to be pure butter, and, when otherwise, frequently great difficulty has been experienced in procuring the trial and conviction of offenders. Samples must be taken and preserved with the greatest possible care to prevent confusion, the ownership or responsibility of and for the article sold must be ascertained, in most cases one or more witnesses of the sale must be provided, careful analyses made, and the clearest possible presentation of all the facts set forth, amounting to a positive demonstration, else, in most cases, the offenders escape the consequences of their illegal acts.

"The following is a statement of the work done by this Department since the enactment of the present oleomargarine law in Allegheny, Beaver, Fayette, Lawrence, Mercer, Washington, and Westmoreland counties:

"It must be remembered that a portion of the time of the Department must be devoted to the enforcement of the other food laws, and the same number of samples are not taken each and every month.

"Attention has been called in a certain publication to the report of this Department for December, 1908, which appears to indicate that only one sample was taken for that month. The error of the critic grew out of the careless reading of the report for the month, wherein appears one case of "butternut" bread which was misbranded, isolated and reported because of being terminated. The same report shows 15 samples taken in Allegheny county which proved to be pure butter, and, in addition thereto, there were instituted 22 prosecutions upon 22 other samples taken in that month and analyzed, which showed them to be oleomargarine colored in imitation of yellow butter. These latter do not appear in the report and will not appear until the cases have been terminated. There are also 22 samples of milk and cream reported in said Bulletin. The grand total for said month of December, 1908, therefore, is 59.

"I desire also to call your attention to the fact that manufacturers are placing upon the market oleomargarine manufactured from cotton-seed oil and certain fats from Jersey and Guernsey cattle, the color of which causes the finished product to resemble butter, and gives it a canary color. This product has been passed by the Federal Government as uncolored oleomargarine taxed at $\frac{1}{4}$ cent per pound. Our experience has been in prosecuting cases of this character that it is difficult to convict, and recently in the courts of Philadelphia several of these cases were ably tried and the jury in each case returned a verdict of "not guilty."

"A number of the samples alleged to have been taken by a reporter of a newspaper are such cases, and I venture the assertion that if the names of the parties from whom the reporter obtained his samples were to be compared with the official records of prosecutions instituted by this Department under my administration it will be found that these persons have all been recently convicted or are now under indictment for violation of the Oleomargarine Law.

"Our agents are instructed to exercise the greatest possible discretion in the taking of samples, because, in the first place, each analysis costs the Commonwealth considerable money, and if samples were purchased promiscuously the aggregate expense would very soon exhaust our appropriation; and, in the next place, the number of cases usually pending in court is as large as can conveniently and properly be prepared and tried. For example, the number of cases in court pending and ready for trial in Allegheny County in the said month of December, 1908, was 121, of which 115 were first offenses and 6 second offenses. In addition, there were 46 injunction orders pending, applications which were made to restrain the defendants from selling oleomargarine during the pendency of the prosecutions against them, all of which required special attendance in court of the agents. There were also 14 cases pending for contempt of the court's previous restraining orders, making a grand total in Allegheny County for the month of December, 1908, of 181 cases of oleomargarine alone.

"Every effort has been made to follow up each and every case instituted in such way as to punish the offender for his offense and deter others from the commission of like offenses. Offenders have been proceeded against both by indictment for first and second offenses and by injunction in the way and manner prescribed by the Act, and the work has been so well kept up that of the cases instituted in Allegheny County all have been disposed of except 50 first and 3 second offense cases, which are listed for trial beginning June 28, 1909, and a number of injunction cases have been tried and are now in the hands of the court. Eighty cases have been terminated in open court in Allegheny County since February 15, 1909.

"With the force of assistants at my command and the amount of appropriation available, I believe the results accomplished have been all that could be expected."

DR. WILEY'S ATTITUDE TOWARD CANNED GOODS.

In a recent letter to the Secretary of the National Canned Goods and Dried Fruit Growers' Association, Dr. Wiley, head of the bureau of chemistry of the national department of agriculture, indulges in the following observations:

"I have often regretted the inadvertant injury which is done to the canned goods trade by enthusiastic, well-intentioned and yet not fully informed writers implying that canned goods, as such, are adulterated. I think I can safely say that, taking the whole matter of canned goods together, including fish, canned meats, canned vegetables and canned fruits, only an extremely small percentage of them ever contain any added substance whatever, except food and perhaps a little salt or sugar. I think this fact ought to be well advertised and published.

"Of course, I do not include in canned goods articles which have not been sterilized, for in such articles preservatives are often employed. I do not think the great canning trade should suffer because such an insignificant few persist in either using artificial color, artificial sweetener or a chemical preservative.

"Under the rules of the Department of Agriculture certain substances may be used in foods legally, provided their presence is plainly stated upon the label. Buyers of canned goods, therefore, have a certain method of protecting themselves in this matter, and that is to look at the label. When we consider the immense benefit of the canning industry to the consuming public, it appears to me that we ought to use every honorable endeavor to set the minds of the community right in regard to the composition of such articles. Of course some canned goods are of better quality than others; that is a natural and necessary consequence, but the impression that some people obtain that all canned goods contain artificial colors, artificial sweeteners and preservatives is a most erroneous one and is harmful to the trade. I am, as you know, a believer in canned goods and in the canning process. I think it is a blessing, and a blessing which is not in disguise. I realize as well as any one that public prejudice is difficult to control and to rectify, but I should like to do as much as I can to help this good trade along by appealing to the public not to condemn the whole trade because occasionally a sample may be found which is not in that state of purity which the public demands. Let the people give their confidence to the trade and let them eliminate those goods which they do not want to purchase, by inspection of the label."

Quoting the foregoing generous sentiments by Dr. Wiley, the National Food Magazine tells us that "the disparagement of the canning industry began with the pure food agitation several years ago. Then chemicals were used freely by the illegitimate canners, and many products containing them came into the hands of the food officers. The discoveries of the adulteration were given wide publicity. Thus the innocent were made to suffer for the sins of the guilty, and all canned products sank into disrepute." This may be an extreme statement; still there's much truth in it. The National Food Magazine suggests that the strong associations now engaged in the effort to rehabilitate the canning business should at once take steps to separate the offenders against public sentiment from those who do not use adulterants or chemical preservatives. I believe decisive action of that sort would soon produce the happiest results.

Dr. Wiley touches the heart of the matter when he calls attention to the fact that under the law the label betrays the nature of the goods offered for sale and adds that a careful study of the labels and a declaration of hostility to brands of goods containing preservatives or foreign ingredients would work out a wholesome reformation. So long as the national and State officials rigorously enforce the laws it will be difficult for any consumer who really wishes to be informed to fall into error in the choice of food. The label is an increasingly important factor in the case. This fact is coming more and more to the knowledge of the people.

A DEFECT TO BE REMEDIED.

The most serious defect yet existing in the laws of this Commonwealth relating to the food and the drink of the people is to be found in the absence of an act prohibiting the adulteration and misbranding of alcoholic beverages. The bill passed by the Legislature at the session of 1909 was not approved by Governor Stuart because of a defective definition, and the Legislature of 1911 will have the opportunity of trying it over again. It is apparent to every observer that considerable poor liquor is sold to the people of this State. They have no protection outside of total abstinence, save in so far as the Federal food and drugs law gives it to them. While this act has done much good it does not cover some cases that can be reached only by a State law.

It is clear to those who have given the matter any consideration that the beverages of the people bear quite as vital a relation to the public health as the food they consume. Indeed, some believe that impure beverages are very much more to be dreaded than impure food, especially as we now have laws of our own governing pretty nearly every phase of the food question. There is much truth in the claims of our friends, the advocates of total abstinence, that the average alcoholic liquor supplied to the people in States where there is no supervision of the manufacture and no regulation forbidding the sale of impure or misbranded goods, is of inferior quality. Human nature is weak in almost everything, and there are opportunities and temptations toward the adulteration of liquors that are peculiarly strong.

Of course, the existing condition in Pennsylvania is simply a temporary halt on the highway of progress. There is reason to believe that the Legislature of 1911 will give the matter its serious attention, and it may be able to enact a law that will be at once constitutional and just, so that neither the people nor the dealers will be discriminated against.

ADULTERATED SOFT DRINKS.

The following statement by Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust for the information of the newspapers is herewith reproduced. It contains some facts the public may be glad to know, and announces a purpose that will be inflexibly maintained:

"Under the recently approved law, the State has authority to prosecute persons selling adulterated or misbranded non-alcoholic drinks. Agents of this division have already collected samples of so-called soft drinks in almost every county in the State. Of about 600 samples taken nearly 200 have shown violations of the law. Some of these concoctions were composed, for instance, as follows: Water as a basis, artificial color, artificial flavor, and artificial sweetener in the form of saccharine, thereby producing a drink that has not one particle of natural quality in it, and, aside from its deleterious nature, is an utter fraud on the purchaser.

"These conditions will not be tolerated, and the quicker the manufacturers of these drinks discontinue their nefarious practice the better it will be for all concerned. We have been without a law covering non-alcoholic drinks for about four years, but now that we have a law, its provisions must be complied with. These preparations must be true to name and must be labeled in a manner to show their real character. Compounds, imitations and blends may be prepared and sold when properly labeled as such, provided they contain nothing that is injurious to health. Purchasers must know just what they are buying."

Since the foregoing statement was made for the benefit of the press, the agents of the division have been going forward in the performance of duty, collecting samples which have been turned over to the chemists of the division for analysis. Wherever it is found that the sample is adulterated within the meaning of the act, prosecutions are instituted. There is no other alternative, nor is there any other policy that would be right. The man who poisons the beverages of the people deserves severe punishment. For it is a practice the final result of which no man can predict.

IMPORTANCE OF PURE MILK.

Much has been written concerning the importance of milk as a food, and much more is likely to be produced by students of conditions in our country. The entire race depends for the first few months of its existence wholly upon milk, and the majority are fed with the milk of the cow. For some reason which this Bulletin will not undertake to explain, the nursing bottle has come into great prominence, and is almost universally in evidence where the household has a baby. It has always been important that the family milk supply should be pure, but present conditions render it doubly so. That is the reason dairy and food officers and boards of health lay special stress upon the enforcement of rules and regulations governing the preservation and the sale of milk. Better than ever before has it been established by careful scientific investigation that impure milk is the copious fountain of disease and death. Many a lingering spell of sickness would have been prevented if the milk supply had been carefully guarded. Within the last two years more than two score and ten cases of malignant typhoid fever have existed in a certain city, involving probably a dozen deaths and two or three heart-breaking tragedies, simply because a milkman was permitted to sell milk infected with typhoid fever germs. Similar cases could be mentioned. In too many instances during the last decade has a bit of carelessness or ignorance concerning the sale of infected milk led to an epidemic of disease which has been followed by the death of several of its victims.

This is not news to the readers of the Bulletin. It is not mentioned here because it is unusual, but because its frequent occurrence in the past should warn the dairyman to the exercise of special vigilance, and should convince him that the precautions of health boards and dairy departments are not the result of crankiness, but absolutely necessary in the interests of the largest number of the people. This knowledge should make an end of impatience, while it amply justifies the servants of the State who insist upon leaving nothing undone that can be done to reduce infant mortality and preserve valuable lives for the future use of the State. It may be annoying, this insistence, but it is justified and rendered imperatively necessary by the figures which have been published from year to year by those who have taken the pains to gather them.

THE RULE CONCERNING SAUSAGE.

Every citizen of Pennsylvania and every manufacturer or vendor of food products is vitally interested in the meaning and scope of the new food law enacted at the last session of the Legislature and approved by Governor Stuart, May 13, 1909. The consumer should proceed to familiarize himself with the act in order that he may know what his rights are. The manufacturer, the wholesaler and the retailer should be posted in order to guard against unauthorized sales. What is true of the law is also true of the rules and regulations adopted by Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust for the enforcement of the provisions of the food act. These rules were prepared in accordance with the requirement of Section 8 of the Act, and have been officially promulgated.

Rule 1 pertains to sausage. It is as follows:

Sausage.—Sausage or sausage meat shall be held to be a comminuted meat from neat cattle or swine, or a mixture of such meats, either fresh, salted, pickled or smoked, with added salt and spices, and with or without the addition of edible animal fats, blood and sugar, or subsequent smoking. It shall contain no larger amount of water than the meats from which it is prepared contain when in their fresh condition, and if it bears a name descriptive of kind, composition, or origin, it must correspond to such descriptive name. All animal tissues used as containers, such as casings, stomachs, etc., must be clean and sound and impart to the contents no other substance than salt. All sausage found to contain any cereal, or added water, or other substance, except as herein stated, shall be deemed to be adulterated.

This rule, framed in harmony with the provisions of the act, is easily understood. Its purport is that sausage must be what the people from the beginning have understood it to be, healthy fresh meat, usually pork ground up and stuffed in casings before being exposed for sale. It means that hereafter the addition of cereals and water shall be unlawful. It means that the State proposes to protect the consumer to the extent of its ability and to provide for the manufacture and sale of a genuine article of sausage. That this rule was needed is proved by the composition of some of the sausage on the market in other years.

PRESERVES, JAMS AND JELLIES.

Rule 2 of the new rules and regulations framed in accordance with the present food act of the Commonwealth, contains the following provisions:

Fruit Preserves, Jams and Jellies.—All fruit preserves, jams and jellies shall be true to name and contain nothing but the fruit after which they are called, together with sugar; except, that fruit butters may contain spices and vinegar. Where glucose is used as a substitute for sugar, either in whole or in part, for the purpose of sweetening or cheapening an article of food, the substance should be marked to show the presence of glucose, such as glucose jelly, glucose jam, glucose fruit butter, together with the name of the fruit which gives it the flavor, in accordance with the provisions of the act relating to branding.

The regulation prescribing that all fruit preserves, jams and jellies shall be true to name and contain nothing but the fruit after which they are called, together with sugar; except that fruit butters may contain spices and vinegar, is a matter of vast import to many thousands of consumers in this State. The quantity of such products as those embraced under this regulation sold among our people is very large and continues to grow with great rapidity. The result of analysis in the past discloses the important fact that preserves, jellies and jams have been recklessly adulterated. The manufacturers have too often used substitutes intended to cheapen the product, and they have not hesitated to employ adulterants, the effect of which upon the human stomach has been decidedly doubtful.

Preserves, jams and jellies containing nothing but the natural fruit and sugar and properly put up seldom do any harm. They are healthful for the reason that nothing of a foreign nature has been incorporated with them. Pure fruit and pure sugar, used at proper times and in reasonable moderation harm no one. The provision requiring the presence of glucose to be indicated on the label when it is used as a substitute for sugar is an excellent one. Some persons may have no prejudice against glucose. Others may prefer sugar. The latter are entitled to know whether or not the article they are thinking of buying contains glucose or sugar. The presence of the proper markings on the labels will be a finger-board of correct information, and will prevent deception. The purpose of the pure food laws of this State is to fully inform the consumer so that if he should be deceived he will have nobody to blame but himself.

POWDERING AND COATING.

Rules 3 and 4 of the rules and regulations prepared in accordance with the provisions of the new food law relate to powdering and coating. Rule 3 reads as follows:

Powdering and Coating.—The term "powdered," as used in the fourth clause of section 3 of the act, shall be held to mean the application of any powdered substance to the exterior portion of articles of food.

And rule 4 thus makes specific application:

Coating of Rice.—No coating of any kind may be used for rice where the same is used to conceal damage or inferiority, or to make the rice appear of better or greater value than it is. In each case, whether or not such a result be secured, is a question of fact to be decided by the evidence.

Powdering or coating have long been looked upon with suspicion by men in other fields than that of food products. It is alleged by the foes of certain members of the fair sex, or by those who are moved simply by mischief, that paint and powder are used to conceal the ravages of time; to make an inferior article look better than it really is. It is a common trick in many departments of business life to use powder or some other article to freshen up a withered and aged article for the purpose of deceiving the public. It is not to be wondered at that some enterprising manufacturers have applied the method of powdering or coating to certain articles with intent to make them look far better than they really are.

Having defined the word "powdering" in Rule 3, the commissioner goes on in Rule 4 to frame a rule, under the law, which prohibits the coating of rice for the purpose of concealing inferiority. It is not absolutely unlawful to coat rice under this regulation; it is unlawful to coat it for the purpose of deceiving the consumer. If it can be shown to the satisfaction of the court that inferior rice has been coated so as to deceive the purchaser, making him believe that he is buying a much better grade than he is really getting, then the law has been violated.

The intent of the act and of the rule made in accordance with its definitions, is to discourage powdering or coating of articles of food. It is the thought of the statute that superior food products need neither coating nor powdering to bring their virtues to the attention of the purchaser; that, on the contrary, either powdering or coating is to be regarded with suspicion.

THE COLORING OF FOOD PRODUCTS.

Sometimes food products have been colored for the purpose of concealing radical defects. Under the provisions of the act approved May 13, 1909, all such coloring is unlawful. The rule framed by Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust follows:

Colors.—The use of any dye, harmless or otherwise, to color or stain a food in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed, or whereby the food is made to appear of better or greater value than it is, is specifically prohibited by law. The use in food for any purpose of any mineral dye, or any coal tar dyes not hereinafter listed, will be grounds for prosecution. Until further notice the coal tar dyes hereinafter named, made specifically for use in foods, and which bear a guaranty from the manufacturer that they are free from subsidiary products and represent the actual substance the name of which they bear, may be used in foods. The following coal tar dyes which may be used in this manner are given numbers, the numbers preceding the names referring to the number of the dye in question as listed in A. G. Green's edition of the Schultz-Julius Systematic Survey of the Organic Coloring Matters, published in 1904:

The list is as follows:

Red Shades.—107, Amaranth, 56, Ponceau 3 R. 517, Erythresin.
Orange Shade.—85, Orange I.
Yellow Shade.—4, Naphthol Yellow S.
Green Shade.—435, Light Green S. F. yellowish.
Blue Shade.—692, Indigo disulfoacid.

Each of these colors shall be free from any coloring matter other than the one specified, and shall not contain any contamination due to imperfect or incomplete manufacture.

That is a pretty comprehensive rule, but there is abundant evidence that the law which permits its framing was not enacted before it was needed. One of the most widespread and potent methods of poisoning men, women and children in vogue for many years was that of coloring the food of the people. The coloring matter, in many instances was highly poisonous, and if children were not killed outright by its too liberal use, they were poisoned so severely that it required weeks of care to restore them to their original condition. Under the new law and the new rule, which will be rigidly enforced, a step toward better conditions has been taken. No objection is made to colors guaranteed non-poisonous, but the State only does its imperative duty when it bars others.

SODIUM BENZOATE AND SULPHUR DIOXIDE.

Rule No. 6, under the provisions of the new food law, reads as follows:

Under the fourth proviso of the fifth clause of section 3, the following articles of food are designated as those articles of food in which benzoate of soda or benzoic acid have heretofore been generally used, to wit: Catsup, mince-meats, sweet chow-chow, sweet pickles, preserves, jams, jellies, fruit-butters, shredded and dried codfish, and cider, when used as a food ingredient. For the purpose of this act one-tenth of one per cent. of benzoate of soda, or benzoic acid, equivalent thereto, may be used in the foods above enumerated, provided the fact that sodium benzoate has been used in the preparation of such foods shall be plainly stated on each package thereof. The use of sodium benzoate is not permissible in any other articles of food, except those hereinabove designated. The word "package" as used in the fourth proviso of the fifth clause of section 3 of the act shall include all containers, whether supplied by the dealer or by the consumer.

It is not the province of the Bulletin to criticize the acts of the Legislature. It presents the words of the act of Assembly and commends them to the serious attention of all manufacturers, dealers and consumers. So far as possible the provisions of the act and the requirements of the rules will be rigorously carried into effect. The law plainly prohibits the use of benzoate of soda except as hereinbefore stated, and it seeks to give housekeepers ample protection and sufficient information by the following additional precautions which are thus embodied in rule 7, as formulated by Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust:

Rule 7—Sodium Benzoate and Sulphur Dioxide, Continued.—When any quantity of sodium benzoate or sulphur dioxide has been used in the preparation of a food that fact shall be plainly stated on each package, and the act also provides, under the fourth clause of section 4, relating to misbranding, that the labeling of packages required by this act shall be on the main label of each package, and in type not less than 8-point brevier caps in size, unless the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type, in which case the size of the type may be reduced proportionately and in such position and terms as may be plainly seen and read by the purchaser. Under these separate clauses the presence of sodium benzoate or sulphur dioxide will be held to be plainly stated on each package of such food when stated in such a way as that it may be plainly seen and read by the purchaser, in colors contrasting with the ground on which it is placed and in character of type and position upon the container in conformity with the provisions of the act.

Thus it will be perceived that while the law authorizes the use of these preservatives in limited quantities in food products in which their use has heretofore been allowed, it takes every precaution to prevent deception. The eminent scientific gentlemen who told President Roosevelt that large quantities of benzoate of soda mixed with food have no appreciable injurious effect upon the organs of the human body would certainly be pleased to partake freely of food thus preserved. But there may be others who prefer to accept the opinion of Dr. Wiley and who are, therefore, anxious to avoid food products which contain this preservative. The Legislature took the matter into consideration, and while it acceded to the desires of certain manufacturers it also took steps to fully enlighten the householder, or whoever does the buying for the family dinner table. For that reason the requirement was adopted providing that the presence of sodium benzoate or of sulphur dioxide in any article of food shall be plainly indicated.

This precaution weakens the criticism of the law. For if the labels do not properly indicate the presence of the adulterant the law is violated and the manufacturer or the dealer is liable to prosecution and punishment. And if the label is properly prepared than those who disagree with the eminent chemists who assure us that there is nothing harmful in benzoate of soda will be warned and can avoid all food preparations containing it. And should this be the fact, the persistence of the much discussed preservative will depend upon the number of friends it has. Should a decided majority of the consuming public simply decline to purchase foods containing it there will be a rapid change of front by those manufacturers still using it. For manufacturers make goods to sell.

If they find that a certain way of preparing their goods is not popular with the public and markedly diminishes their market value, they will soon effect a change of base. Thus the final disposition of the matter is entirely in the hands of the housekeepers of the State.

CONTAMINATION BY FLIES AND DUST.

One of the most important of the new food rules is that forbidding the exposure of certain food substances to flies or other noxious insects, or to danger of contamination by the dust of the street. It is as follows:

Rule No. 8.—Meats, preserves and similar food substances that are likely to be contaminated by exposure to flies and other insects, or exposed to the dust of the street or the store. Under the provisions of the sixth clause of section 3 of the act an article of food is adulterated when the same is an animal or vegetable substance produced, stored, transported, or kept in a way or manner that would render the animal diseased, contaminated or unwholesome. Under this clause of the act meats, preserves and similar food substances that are likely to be contaminated by exposure to flies and other insects, or exposed to the dust of the street or the store, will be required to be kept screened so as to prevent all contamination.

This is a very important ruling. It applies with special force to the meat markets of the State. Retail venders should give it their immediate attention, and if they have not already taken steps to comply with its requirements they should do so at once. More is now known about the fly, its habits and the danger of infection caused by its intrusive presence, than was the fact in the days of our fathers. More is known about disease and the agencies by which it is communicated. We are told by eminent scientific authority that the little fly that haunts the kitchen of the average household, or that has been in the habit of buzzing about articles of food in many groceries or meat markets, or settling upon them in shoals, is more deadly than the royal tiger of the Indian jungle. Thus warned, merchants and housekeepers should be on their guard.

The Legislature enacted the new food law in the interest of the public health. The rule prohibiting the exposure of meats, preserves or similar foods to flies or other insects or dust was formulated because of the new knowledge concerning the fly the scientific world has imparted to the people. It will be the duty of the Dairy and Food Division to see that this rule is rigidly enforced. Dealers are required to keep the articles designated under a screen. Many are already doing so. The others must do likewise if they wish to secure immunity from the operations of law and retain the confidence and the good will of their patrons. We believe they will do so gladly and promptly.

THE GUARANTY AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

The new food law proposes to protect the innocent retailer from the consequences of selling adulterated or misbranded food products if he will take the precaution to secure a guarantee from the manufacturer or wholesaler from whom he makes the purchase. If he neglect that precaution the consequences will fall upon his own head. The rule covering this very important matter is as follows:

Rule No. 9, Guaranty.—The guaranty referred to in the food act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, shall in all cases be a written or printed invoice guaranty, bearing the date of said invoice upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor, and substantially in the following language, to wit: I (or we), the vendor of the articles mentioned in the following invoice, hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania known as the "New Food Law," approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, in that the said articles are not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the aforesaid act.

(Signature).....

One of the ends sought to be accomplished by the Tustin act of 1907 was the protection of the retail dealer from prosecution and punishment for the sins of others. The framer of the act of May 13, 1909, sought to accomplish the same purpose by the incorporation of a guaranty clause. The foregoing rule, in obedience to the requirements of the act, provides a form of guaranty which the retailer must be very sure to secure before he puts any article of goods upon his shelves or counters and offers it for sale to the consuming public. In case retailers disregard the provisions of the act and venture to retail food products for which they have no guaranty they render themselves directly liable to the full penalties prescribed for the vending of adulterated or misbranded goods.

Under the circumstances and in view of the simplicity of the proceedings, he would be a very foolish grocer who forgot the requirements of the act or, who, through sheer carelessness or indifference, failed to live up to those requirements. No retailer who familiarizes himself with the provisions of the new law and endeavors faithfully to obey them will ever get into conflict with the Commonwealth. The State will protect him as it does all law obeying citizens.

AMERICAN GROCERS AT PORTLAND, OREGON.

At the recent meeting of the National Association of Retail Grocers in Portland, Oregon, the various sessions were largely attended and much interest was manifested in the daily proceedings. Thomas P. Sullivan, of Chicago, was elected president for the ensuing year by a unanimous vote. John W. Lux, of Minnesota, is the new vice president. Secretary John A. Green, of Cleveland, Ohio, succeeds himself, as a matter of course. Henry W. Schwab, of Milwaukee, is the treasurer, and A. H. Barth, of Colorado, was elected a member of the executive committee.

Among the resolutions adopted by the association we note the following: Opposing tariff taxation of any food product. Opposing the use of premiums in the sale of cereals. Favoring the enactment of laws to prevent the circulation of misleading advertisements. Opposing the issuance by manufacturers of cards redeemable by themselves, as tending to encourage overstocking. Opposing the use of premiums in any form. Endorsing Senator Gore's defense of retailers against the charge of being jobbers. Favoring the establishment of minimum prices to be charged by manufacturer, jobber and retailer and opposing the publication of the selling price upon labels. Favoring the repeal of the national bankruptcy act. Protesting against the proposed tariff tax upon tea.

The resolution opposing the use of premiums in connection with the sale of cereals, and the later one opposing such use in any form, were probably born of the sad experience of some dealers. The practice of boosting trade by extra inducements is of questionable utility. Once the people get the premium habit they are hard to break of it, looking for an inducement of some sort with almost every purchase they make. As to the prevention of the circulation of misleading advertisements, however desirable the inauguration of such a vital reform may be, he is going to be a wise man who will be able to draw the dividing line between an advertisement that is misleading and one that is not. The advertisement writers are all honorable men, but the majority of them would object very strenuously to the passage of a law which would clip the wings of their ardent imagination. The repeal of the national bankruptcy law is a matter for serious consideration. As for the tariff on tea, it is quite certain that those who use the article would be glad to see it admitted free of duty, while those who regard it as a luxury would take the other side of the argument.

CALIFORNIA'S ADVERTISING LAW.

The members of the National Association of Retail Grocers who voted for the resolution adopted by the Portland convention against fraudulent advertisements or who are in sympathy with the spirit of the resolution, will be interested in the announcement that California already has in operation an act similar to the one contemplated by the resolution. The most important section of the law reads as follows:

"Any person, firm, corporation, or association or persons, or any employe of such or any of such, who in the newspapers or other periodicals of this State, or in public advertisements, or in communications intended for a large number of persons, knowingly makes or disseminates any statements or assertions of facts with respect to his, its or their business affairs concerning the quantity, the quality, the value, the price, the method of production or manufacture, or the fixing of the price of his, its or their merchandise or professional work; or the manner or source of purchase of such merchandise, or the possession of awards, prizes, or distinctions; or the motive or purpose of a sale, intended to have the appearance of an advantageous offer, which is or are untrue or calculated to mislead, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

Perhaps it will be worth while to watch the operations of the California statute for a year or two before making any very strenuous effort to extend its provisions to other States. Deception is a very great evil. It is being almost constantly employed by unscrupulous dealers, and a very large number of persons fall into the trap annually. He who has the ability to convey to the minds of the people the impression that tremendous bargains are within their reach is likely to draw them to his place of business. Nor do they take warning from bitter experience. Bitten again and again by the art of the slick advertiser, they return to the next bargain sale as certainly as the singed moth again seeks the fatal flame.

The retail merchants are on the right track when they pronounce again this species of swindling. Nevertheless, they must bear in mind that the people themselves are largely to blame. They are like the Irishman who entered a store, meaning to buy a knife. Pointing to a desirable one, he asked the price. "Fifteen cents," replied the young lady clerk. Misunderstanding her, the would-be customer replied: "I'll give yez thirty-siven and a half." "I did not say fifty; I said fifteen cents," retorted the clerk. Quick as a flash came the response from the son of Erin: "Well, thin, bedad I'll give yez tin!" He was looking for a bargain, and he wasn't going to buy unless he got it. It is this spirit among buyers which has promoted the growth of the deceptive advertisement.

THE FOOD OF THE HOUSEHOLD.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley has not lost any of his vitality or sense of humor. Some weeks ago he delivered an address before the woman of the Associated Clubs of Domestic Science, at their meeting in New York. He told them to give their husbands real foods, no near-foods or foodoids; if given the right sort of table treatment they will stay at home. This is not original with the doctor, as he frankly admitted. He heard a woman discuss the subject at a club meeting one day. She read a beautiful paper on how to manage a husband, which must be with clean napkins always on the table and a beautiful smile always on the wife's face. "No, feed the brute," called a practical woman from another part of the room, and that is Dr. Wiley's idea, and with no near-foods. He told the women also to "get busy" with the Legislatures and persuade them to pass better laws.

The doctor made his speech before he had heard the last word from Pennsylvania, or he would have modified his jocular remarks about our Legislators. He was quite right, however, when he advised his feminine auditors to insist upon seeing the label. It is his conviction that after the women of the country have been properly educated so that they will demand a view of the labels on every article of food they purchase or eat, the greatest obstacle in the way of the enforcement of pure food laws will have been removed. As for him, he would be glad to see the day come when labels would be found scattered everywhere over the hotel or restaurant or boarding house table, and when everyone of them would bluntly tell the truth. Samples might read like this: "This chicken has been in cold storage for three years and six months." Or, "This butter is called Elgin, but it is made in Connecticut, and there is four pounds of salt for every one needed, because salt costs less than butter."

Among other things said by Dr. Wiley with which this Bulletin has always agreed we quote: "The consumer has a right not to be defrauded. It is more than a question of the pocketbook—and I will be glad when the money standard is not always brought up in this country—it is a great moral question. Fraud and deception are not necessary to business. On the contrary, they are the cankerworm of destruction, and three-fourths of the business men agree to that. There should be protection against fraud and to get food that is fit to eat. We have been twenty-five years discussing this question and two years in action, and the manufacturers and dealers continue to misbrand articles with an ingenious distortion of fact with intent to deceive.

"They will say, 'This is a brain food.' So it is a brain food, because it nourishes, and anything that nourishes the brain is food for it. But you might just as well call it a 'great toe food,' because it equally nourishes the great toe. They will say that 'Dr. Wiley says this olive oil is superior to any in the country.' They won't put it on the labels where we can get at them, but advertise in the papers. They print in Italian on their bottles, 'This is a very fine salad oil.' The defense will be that it is a good oil. It will be a good cottonseed oil, and the Italian label gives an idea that it was imported."

Dr. Wiley told the women that although there has never been but one instance, so far as he knows, in which a consumer was given a hearing before a Congressional committee, the Senators and Representatives are not ignorant of the growing public interest in this question of pure food. He added that Congressmen receive more letters from women concerning food questions than from anybody else about any other subject, except from the whiskey dealers, who are interested in adulterated liquors. He saw one Senator throw a great pile of letters on the subject of pure food in the waste basket, but while he destroyed the letters he kept in his head what the women had said to him. Unwearied and interested devotion to this important question will produce an abundant reward. It is especially important to continue writing to Senators and Representatives that they may understand that the housekeepers of the nation are back of the demand for a more rigid enforcement of the existing Federal food and drugs act, and for such amendment as will clothe the law with greater efficiency and strengthen the hands of those who are charged with the law's enforcement.

This Bulletin has said many times during the last two years that if the women of the country can be prevailed upon to take this matter of pure food in hand in the proper way it will not be long until adulterated or chemically preserved food has practically vanished from the country. The housekeeper may be a greater power in the direction indicated than the most drastic act of Congress or of a State Legislature. For when she will no longer buy foods unless their labels look right to her the manufacturers, who are still holding out for the right to use doubtful preservatives and foreign substances in food products and who justify their conduct upon various grounds, will experience a change of heart.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The intelligent housekeeper will eventually solve the food problem.

Form the practice of examining the labels whenever you make a purchase.

Familiarize yourself with the laws dealing with food and drink and you are likely to obey them.

An increasing number of the States is annually counted upon the side of food law efficiency.

No human being can be too particular concerning the quality or quantity of the daily food consumption.

The average grocer is just as anxious to sell first-class articles as his patrons are to buy them.

The scientific experts tell us the common house fly is a great conveyer of the germs of disease.

The State of Pennsylvania is under many obligations to the vigilance of the Federal officials.

No human regulation is perfect; still we're slowly approaching to the ideal in pure food legislation in Pennsylvania.

Whatever may be the truth about preservatives, it is wise for the consumer to err on the side of caution.

Springfield, Illinois, will entertain the National Association of Retail Grocers in 1910.

A little good food is of much greater service to the human body than a liberal allowance of adulterated food.

The grocer who looks well to appearances is the popular vender among particular people.

He who disregards law in his haste to get rich is likely to land in the vale of poverty.

It is well to remember that no brand of goods will long remain on the market if the consumer will have none of it.

The mother who really supervises the purchase and preparation of the daily food of the household saves many a doctor's bill.

The intrusive fly may have some useful purpose in the economy of nature, but the wise grocer will not tolerate its presence.

Too much food and too little care about the quality of food, these bits of carelessness have done much to shorten human life.

Screens are not specially costly. And yet during the summer and fall they may make all the difference between wholesome and poisoned food.

An Ohio firm has received an order from distant Australia for forty-six carloads of saur craut. Each car will carry 100 forty-gallon casks.

The violator of law may seem to enjoy immunity from punishment for a little while, but in the end he pays the full penalty.

Disobedience to the requirements of the acts regulating the manufacture of food and drinks is pretty certain to be decidedly expensive.

No cases which the courts are still considering are dealt with in the statistical department of this division. Only those which have been terminated find a place there.

The time approaches when special care must be taken concerning the food and clothing of the babes of the family. Care in these respects will save many a child's life.

The citizen who sets his neighbors the example of cheerful obedience to law deserves well of his State. He is a worthy citizen of a free nation.

Whatever other complaints are registered against the ice man, nobody has accused them of adulterating their products.

Many of the enterprising grocers of the State have established a Wednesday half-holiday, to last through July and August. It is a wise plan and is greatly appreciated by their employes.

It is just as true now as it ever was that "the way of the transgressor is hard." No matter how inviting it may appear at the start, it is a rough, a rugged and a desolate path at the end.

What does it profit a man if he violate law for the sake of a paltry bit of gain which is more than swallowed up by the large fines paid after detection and conviction?

Many of the newspapers have begun the pleasant and instructive habit of printing each day a health hint. These are generally well-prepared and very suggestive in the right direction.

Commissioner Dunlap, of Ohio, expects to receive the aid of the Federal officials in the prosecution of violators of the vinegar law of that State.

The National Association of Retail Grocers had a larger attendance at its recent convention in Portland, Oregon, than at any previous meeting. It was an interesting and important gathering.

Clean hands and neat personal appearance by proprietor and clerks will soon lead to a more attractive appearance of the goods in the retail grocery store and to an increase of pleased patrons.

Pennsylvanians have a very serviceable set of laws now on the statute books. They can do much to increase the efficiency of those laws and create sentiment in their favor by agitation in the right direction.

The meat inspection system of the Commonwealth, under the admirably efficient administration of Dr. Leonard Pearson, is rendering excellent service to the consuming public by way of better and purer meat products.

It is always possible for this Bulletin to be mistaken in its estimates of food products and of the motives of a few of those engaged in their manufacture, but it is always sincere, seeking only the public good.

While the legislation enacted this year may not be all that some citizens ardently desired, it is a vast improvement upon the past and should be accepted with thankfulness as the prophecy of better things to come.

Cleanliness is one of the requisites to success in the business of selling food products. Most customers judge of the quality of the goods they are inspecting from the condition of the room in which they are sold.

Nearly all the States are moving vigorously in the way of enforcing pure food regulations. With a few discouraging features, the general outlook is highly encouraging to the enemies of adulterated food and drink.

The more carefully fruits and vegetables and other articles are protected from flies, insects and other nuisances the more pleased will be the customers of the dealer who goes to so much pains.

The progress of information among the people concerning their own bodies and the effect of the foods they eat insures the continued advance of the pure food movement.

The officer is the servant of the law. It is not his duty to interpret the law from the standpoint of sympathy for the offender or consideration for his friends. He has nothing to do but obey the orders of his superior officer.

Here and there you run against a violator of the food laws who has acquired the habit; he seems no more able to keep from violating law than the confirmed drunkard is to master his depraved appetite.

The dairy interests of our Commonwealth are entitled to vigorous protection from the unfair competition of the makers of imitation butter. The consumer is likewise to be considered and protected from deception.

Concerning cold storage goods, as most other matters, there is a radical difference of opinion among thoroughly honest and honorable persons. There are few things known to man about which there are no differences of opinion.

The National Wholesale Grocers' Association held its 1909 meeting in Detroit, Michigan, and will honor Louisville, Kentucky, with its presence in 1910. The Kentuckians will give the delegates a generous welcome.

"The Clerk and Store Assistant," in the Inland Grocer and the American Grocer, contains some very excellent advice for grocers and their employes. It is quite certain that the man himself and his aides have a great deal to do in attracting or repelling patronage.

At the recent session of the Legislature of Illinois an act was passed authorizing the councils of the several cities of the State to compel the sale of vegetables or dry groceries by weight instead of by measure.

It has been discovered by students of the new food law of Pennsylvania that it prohibits the sale of French colored vegetables, especially French peas, which are colored by a preparation that is specifically forbidden by the act.

As a rule, manufacturers of food stuffs and dealers in the same are anxious to do the square thing by the State and the consumer. It is the exceptional vendor or manufacturer who intentionally violates law and deceives his customers.

We are now in the midst of what is usually called "the heated term." It is at this season that mothers or nurses of small children need to exercise the utmost care when it comes to preparing the food of quite small children.

The State Dairy Commissioner of Iowa has just unearthed a lot of cider in that State which never saw the apple after which it was falsely named. Commissioner Wright truly says this is all wrong and means to bring the offenders to justice.

The Dairy and Food Division has on numerous occasions received valued assistance in the matter of tracking violations of the Oleomargarine Law from Federal officials. It is glad to acknowledge its obligations to these vigilant servants of Uncle Sam.

There is absolutely no excuse for the sale of impure or fictitious cider vinegar in this State. We have an admirable vinegar law, under the provisions of which our farmers are encouraged to make genuine and wholesome cider vinegar from the products of their orchards.

This State certainly does need a law regulating the manufacture and sale of intoxicating beverages. Such an act would be an admirable supplement to the Federal provisions on this subject and would increase the probabilities that consumers would obtain a pure article.

The Legislature of 1909 deserves the thanks of the people for the active interest it manifested in the preservation of their lives and health. In the matter of the enactment of pure food laws its record has been surpassed by none of its predecessors.

The administration of the Dairy and Food office is always open to the inspection of the people or their representatives. We have reason to believe that the more frequent and the more rigid that inspection the better Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust would be pleased.

The secretaries of grocers' and meat dealers' associations in Ohio held a profitable meeting in Columbus this month, extending over two days. They consulted for the purpose of rendering their work more effective, and it is hoped through co-operation to abolish some glaring trade abuses.

The Bulletin is always pleased to hear from its readers. It likewise hopes to profit by the sharp criticisms which sometimes appear in some of the trade journals. If no formal reference is made to these articles it is through no lack of courtesy, but for quite other reasons.

The dairyman who remembers the uses to which the milk he sells is put will be patient under rules and regulations which to him seem oppressive and vexatious. He is engaged in a very responsible business and the community exacts more of him than of the common laborer.

Retail grocers and jobbers over in the Dominion of Canada are likely to ponder long and well before they enter into mutual agreements hereafter. The Dominion parliament has enacted a law making it a criminal offense to violate a contract to maintain prices fixed by previous agreement.

The label-reading habit is an excellent one to cultivate during the coming few months. When it becomes universal it will work out a great reform among certain manufacturers and supplement the efforts of officers to enforce the laws regulating the manufacture and sale of food stuffs.

Whereas in former years the question of the purity of the food supply was seldom considered by the daily newspapers, now it is a matter of increasing interest, and not a week passes without extended reference to some phase of the matter by the more influential journals.

Some criticism has been earned by the officials of the Federal government for the lax manner in which they have executed portions of the food and drugs act of June 30, 1906; nevertheless, the act had done much good and it has been fairly well carried into effect.

The dairy and food officials in the several States are gradually moving in the direction of uniformity of action. The passing years will find State and Federal officers administering their offices along a common line. This harmony of action will produce excellent results.

A few inveterate offenders continue to try to evade Federal and State laws in their eagerness to displace pure yellow butter with the imitation article, made out of colored oleomargarine, but they are always caught eventually, and the expense to which they are put more than eats up their profits.

Whatever may be the outward semblance of things at times, there is to be no backward step in the enactment or the administration of pure food laws and regulations in this and other States, or in the nation at large. This is one thing in which voters will suffer no retrograde movement. Wise students of the popular will know this well.

The mothers of the State, especially those who have the care of very small children, should exercise special care during the next few months over the quality of the milk supplied to their households. Thousands of infants have been cut off in their first or second year because of the poisoned milk they drank.

Progress is made by controversy. Men who approach the discussion of a mooted question with open minds are true ministers to the public welfare. It is by free discussion between honest citizens who recognize the sincerity of each other that real progress is made in the settlement of the numerous problems involved in the food question.

The mercantile associations of this and other States are rendering effective service not only to the business interests of their members, but also to the community at large. In some towns the Merchants' Association has taken the place and is doing the work of a Board of Trade or a Chamber of Commerce. The result is a decided advance in public spirit.

The board of health of Nashville, Tennessee, has just completed some interesting experiments to determine whether drawn or undrawn poultry packed in ice would last longest. Their experiments showed that undrawn poultry packed in ice kept much better than the drawn article packed under precisely similar conditions.

In some Indiana and Kentucky towns the local authorities are having considerable trouble with retail grocers who persist in keeping their places of business open on Sunday, contrary to law. On the other hand, the grocers of Enid, Oklahoma, are urging the city councils to enact an ordinance making Sunday closing compulsory.

The national convention of the Fraternity of Operative Millers of America held its annual meeting in Milwaukee this year. Among the notable proceedings was an attack upon the national food officials, charging them with pursuing the millers too energetically while totally ignoring or overlooking the doubtful operations of the grain dealer.

Knowledge and common sense are admirable qualities for the child's mother or nurse to possess during the present and the succeeding month. A great many valuable lives may be saved by the exercise of care and prudence at this critical period. So many mothers do not know what is good for the baby.

In addition to the proper screening of meats and jellies and similar products from flies and insects and from the noxious dust of the street, the prudent vender will likewise protect berries and fruits in the same manner. It is surely not too much trouble to do this when the health of the public is concerned.

The recent action of the American Medical Association in protesting against the use of benzoate of soda in the manufacture of food products, and its appeal to President Taft along the line of the total abolition or permission to use chemical preservatives, is a very significant sign of the times. It registers a tremendous advance in public sentiment.

Opinions may differ and will differ so long as the world stands, concerning the actual effects of certain beverages and drugs upon the human system. Nevertheless, the prudent man will always give himself the benefit of the doubt and where one of two possible courses may be dangerous he invariably chooses the other one.

Notwithstanding the criticisms which have been freely made of the new food law of this state it will be found to be a pretty drastic act by the time all its provisions are tested. Some foodstuffs which have been extensively sold will disappear from the market unless the manufacturers change their processes.

The eighteenth annual convention of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association was held at Hot Springs, Arkansas, this year. The convention selected an entire new board of officers and did so with the utmost harmony, but not until quite a storm of controversy had blown over. The 1911 convention will be held in Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Imitation buttermilk is not only made and freely sold, but some scientific gentlemen have the assurance to insist that the artificial product is healthier than the genuine article. And yet, even if this were so, those of us who have been in the lifelong habit of drinking the real thing prefer to cling to it.

Out in Los Angeles a too enterprising grocer who used flour to adulterate white pepper has just paid a fine of $25 for his action. Another grocer was fined the same amount for selling peach syrup colored with coal tar, but sentence was suspended in his case because it was not shown that he had guilty knowledge of the presence of the tar dye.

The Eli Grocer and General Merchant is entirely right and eminently seasonable when it rises to remark: "The presence of flies in the store is sure to draw criticism even from those who have millions of them at home. People like cleanliness in others and the absence of flies in a store is a part of cleanliness." It advises all wide-awake grocers to begin an early warfare on them.

Suggestions from the people will be gladly received at the office of which the Bulletin is the representative. In a multitude of counsellors there is safety, declares an old book whose wisdom has never yet been equalled much less surpassed by the sayings of any other. Many minds engaged upon the same study may produce some gratifying results.

The farmers of the state will make a mistake during the coming autumn if they fail to take advantage of the admirable vinegar act upon the statute books. The manufacture of their surplus cider into vinegar will promote their own welfare and give their neighbors of the towns genuine vinegar instead of the artificial substitute too much in evidence last year.

Men are constantly tempted to violate the oleomargarine laws. The records of this division show that many prosecutions have been brought and that a very earnest effort has been made to break up the practice of selling artificial butter. And yet some adventurers continue to believe they can circumvent the law somehow, even if all their predecessors did fail.

The first page of the American Grocer is one of the most interesting and instructive things in trade journalism. The editor has the happy faculty of choosing interesting themes and then illustrating and illuminating them by apposite stories, usually very amusing and directly to the point. It is a great gift, the art of fastening a truth by aid of a timely illustration.

Mothers who wish to give their babes the best possible protection during the heated term will be very particular concerning the quality and the quantity of food given the little ones, as well as about the hours when they are permitted to breathe the air or are carefully kept indoors. There is a great deal in knowing how to guard the frail infant life when the dog star rages.

There is no substitute for genuine butter, made in the good old-fashioned way of our grandmothers, guiltless of coloring matter, save in the spring, when it takes on a natural golden hue, and containing no foreign substance but a little salt. Do you recall how it tasted in the days of your boyhood? Do you believe there is a bit of imitation butter in the land that could deceive you into mistaking it for a sample of the old-fashioned butter?

The federal authorities may not be moving as rapidly or as energetically in the enforcement of the national food and drugs act as some desire; still they are doing good work in certain directions. In illustration of this statement it is here recorded that forty-one cases of an alleged cure-all were recently seized and destroyed. It is no longer safe for any man to advertise a preparation as a universal remedy for disease. It is regarded as a fraudulent attempt to deceive the people.

The American Grocer tells of a woman who declined to use a certain brand of flour because she didn't like the color of the ink with which the name was stenciled on the head of the barrel; of another who complained bitterly about the toughness of a certain brand of tongue she had purchased and tried to eat without previous cooking, and of another who didn't know a fine sample of coffee when she tasted it because she had always used an inferior quality. These things amuse the reader but they irritate the harried dealer.

The National Food Magazine declares that renewed efforts to cause the annulment of the national food law are being made. It also hears the rumor that the referee board which has reported benzoate of soda to be harmless in food products, "may be placed in charge of a government health bureau to safeguard the people from disease infection." The National Food Magazine is disposed to be sarcastic. Incidentally it professes small faith in the desire of Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the treasury, to do anything on behalf of rigorous enforcement of pure food laws. The future will reveal the truth.

Manufacturers, wholesalers and retail dealers are all vitally interested in the result of the tariff discussions that have been going on in congress for some weeks. By the time this number of the Bulletin goes out to its readers the completed action of the two houses of congress will be in the hands of the President in the shape of the tariff bill. Some are sure to be displeased, some greatly pleased and a few neither exactly unhappy nor exactly content. The country would be worthless if its people were not certain to differ about great public matters. Uniformity of opinion is the hallmark of death or slavery.

The popular demand for pure articles of food and drink is appreciated by prudent caterers to the public taste. Thus a certain vender of soda water in his advertisement makes the following announcement: "Appreciating the confidence the soda water and confectionery consumers of this city have in the quality of my products, I have recently arranged (at a greater cost than ever before, without increasing my prices) to use crushed fruits and syrups without preservatives at my soda fountain. My increased patronage for soda water and sundaes will determine if I have taken the right step." Dealers of that sort deserve the liberal patronage of consumers.

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.
DAIRY AND FOOD BUREAU.

Rules Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10.

Rules and regulations for the enforcement of the provisions of the Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909.

As required by Section 8 of the Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, the Dairy and Food Commissioner, charged with the enforcement of the provisions of said act, has made the following rules and regulations for the enforcement thereof.

These rules, where possible, conform to and are the same as the rules and regulations adopted for the enforcement of the act of Congress, approved June 30, 1906, commonly known as the "Food and Drugs Act."

RULE NO. 1, SAUSAGE. Sausage or sausage meat shall be held to be a comminuted meat from neat cattle or swine, or a mixture of such meats, either fresh, salted, pickled or smoked, with added salt and spices and with or without the addition of edible animal fats, blood and sugar, or subsequent smoking. It shall contain no larger amount of water than the meats from which it is prepared, contain when in their fresh condition, and if it bears a name descriptive of kind, composition, or origin, it must correspond to such descriptive name. All animal tissues used as containers, such as casings, stomachs, etc., must be clean and sound and impart to the contents no other substance than salt. All sausage found to contain any cereal, or added water, or other substance, except as herein stated, shall be deemed to be adulterated.

RULE NO. 2, FRUIT PRESERVES, JAMS AND JELLIES. All fruit preserves, jams and jellies shall be true to name and contain nothing but the fruit after which they are called, together with sugar; except, that fruit butters may contain spices and vinegar. Where glucose is used as a substitute for sugar, either in whole or in part, for the purpose of sweetening or cheapening an article of food, the substance should be marked to show the presence of glucose, such as glucose jelly, glucose jam, glucose fruit butter, together with the name of the fruit which gives it the flavor, in accordance with the provisions of the act relating to branding.

RULE NO. 3, POWDERING AND COATING. The term "powdered," as used in the fourth clause of section 3 of the act, shall be held to mean the application of any powdered substance to the exterior portion of articles of food.

The term "coated," as used in the same clause, shall mean the application of any substance to the exterior portion of a food product.

RULE NO. 4, COATING OF RICE. No coating of any kind may be used for rice where the same is used to conceal damage or inferiority, or to make the rice appear of better or greater value than it is. In each case, whether or not such a result be secured, is a question of fact to be decided by the evidence.

RULE NO. 5, COLORS. The use of any dye, harmless or otherwise, to color or stain a food in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed, or whereby the food is made to appear of better or greater value than it is, is specifically prohibited by law. The use in food for any purposes of any mineral dye, or any coal tar dyes not hereinafter listed, will be grounds for prosecution. Until further notice the coal tar dyes hereinafter named, made specifically for use in foods, and which bear a guaranty from the manufacturer that they are free from subsidiary products and represent the actual substance the name of which they bear, may be used in foods. The following coal tar dyes which may be used in this manner are given numbers, the numbers preceding the names referring to the number of the dye in question as listed in A. G. Green's edition of the Schultz-Julius Systematic Survey of the Organic Coloring Matters, published in 1904.

The list is as follows:

RED SHADES:

- 107. Amaranth.
- 56. Ponceau 3 R.
- 517. Erythrosin.

ORANGE SHADE:

- 85. Orange I.

YELLOW SHADE:

- 4. Naphthol yellow S.

GREEN SHADE:

- 435. Light green S. F. yellowish.

BLUE SHADE:

- 692. Indigo disulfoacid.

Each of these colors shall be free from any coloring matter other than the one specified and shall not contain any contamination due to imperfect or incomplete manufacture. (F. I. D. 76.)

RULE NO. 6, SODIUM BENZOATE AND SULPHUR-DIOXIDE. Under the fourth proviso of the fifth clause of section 3, the following articles of food are designated as those articles of food in which benzoate of soda, or benzoic acid, have heretofore been generally used, to wit:

Catsup, mince-meats, sweet chow-chow, sweet pickles, preserves, jams, jellies, fruit-butters, shredded and dried codfish and eider, when used as a food ingredient.

For the purposes of this act, one-tenth of one per centum of benzoate of soda, or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, may be used in the foods above enumerated, provided, the fact that sodium benzoate has been used in the preparation of such foods shall be plainly stated on each package thereof.

The use of sodium benzoate is not permissible in any other articles of food, except those hereinabove designated.

The word "package," as used in the fourth proviso of the fifth clause of section 3 of the act, shall include all containers, whether supplied by the dealer or by the consumer.

RULE NO. 7, SODIUM BENZOATE AND SULPHUR-DIOXIDE. continued. When any quantity of sodium benzoate or sulphur-dioxide has been used in the preparation of a food that fact shall be plainly stated on each package, and the act also provides, under the fourth clause of section 4, relating to misbranding, that the labeling of packages required by this act shall be on the main label of each package, and in type not less than 8-point brevier caps in size, unless the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type, in which case the size of the type may be reduced proportionately and in such position and terms as may be plainly seen and read by the purchasers.

Under these separate clauses the presence of sodium benzoate or sulphur-dioxide will be held to be plainly stated on each package of food when the fact of such presence is stated in such a way as that it may be plainly seen and read by the purchaser, in colors contrasting with the ground on which it is placed and in character of type and position upon the container in conformity with the provisions of the act.

RULE NO. 8, MEATS, PRESERVES AND SIMILAR FOOD SUBSTANCES THAT ARE LIKELY TO BE CONTAMINATED BY EXPOSURE TO FLIES AND OTHER INSECTS, OR EXPOSED TO THE DUST OF THE STREET OR THE STORE. Under the provisions of the sixth clause of section 3 of the act, an article of food is adulterated where the same is an animal or vegetable substance produced, stored, transported, or kept in a way or manner that would render the article diseased, contaminated or unwholesome. Under this clause of the act, meats, preserves and similar food substances that are likely to be contaminated by ex-posure to flies and other insects, or exposed to the dust of the street or the store will be required to be kept screened so as to prevent all contamination.

RULE NO. 9, GUARANTY. The guaranty referred to in the Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, shall in all cases be a written or printed invoice guaranty, bearing the date of said invoice, upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor, and substantially in the following language, to wit:

I (or we) the vendor of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, known as the "NEW FOOD LAW," approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, in that the said articles are not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the aforesaid act.

(Signature)

RULE NO. 10, LABELS. Numerous requests are referred to this Bureau for the approval of labels to be used in connection with food products under the Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909. This act does not authorize the Dairy and Food Commissioner, nor any agent of the Bureau, to approve labels. The Bureau, therefore, will not give its approval to any label. Any printed matter upon the label implying that this Bureau has approved it will be without warrant. It is believed that with the law and regulations before the manufacturers they will have no difficulty in arranging labels in conformity with the requirements set forth.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAIL DEALERS.

The new Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, protects innocent retail dealers when its provisions are complied with. In order to avail themselves of this protection, it is important that every retail dealer secure from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes purchases, a signed guarantee of each invoice of goods. In order that the goods may be subsequently identified, it is important that the date of purchase be marked upon the goods secured under each invoice. Where the goods are contained in separate packages, this identification can readily be secured by the use of a rubber stamp giving the date of purchase. Unless the retail dealer is able to identify with certainty the vendor from whom his goods were procured the act will not profect him. This will require the greatest care, not only in marking the date of purchase, but in keeping the articles purchased from different manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers bearing the same brand, entirely apart from each other, so that at any time the identification of the vendor of each article can be clearly established. It is equally important that the retail dealer shall keep the articles purchased in precisely the same condition as when they are received. A failure to distinctly identify the vendor, or to clearly prove that articles purchased have been kept in the exact condition as to quality as when purchased, will deprive the retail dealer of any protection.

When an agent of the Dairy and Food Bureau calls upon a retail dealer, it is requested and confidently expected that courtesy will be exercised both by the dealer and the agent.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Issued May 14, 1909.

Harrisburg, Pa., October 1, 1907.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE GUIDANCE AND GOVERNMENT OF PERSONS PROPOSING TO ENGAGE IN THE MANUFACTURE, SALE OR USE OF OLEOMARGARINE OR RENOVATED BUTTER, AS AUTHORIZED UNDER THE ACTS OF ASSEMBLY APPROVED THE 29TH OF MAY, 1901, AND JULY 10TH, 1901, AS PRESCRIBED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE THROUGH ITS AGENT, THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER.

1. No license will be granted to a non-resident of the State of Pennsylvania.

2. No license will be transferred from any person, firm or corporation convicted of any violation of the Acts of Assembly under which such license is issued, nor while proceedings are pending for violation of said acts against such person, firm or corporation.

3. Remittance (either bank draft, cashier's cheque or certificate of deposit, preferred) for license fees must accompany the application for license. Individual cheques must be certified by the bank on which same are issued or drawn. Checks and drafts must be made payable to the order of the State Treasurer, and upon receipt thereof by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, if the application is approved, a license certificate will be promptly issued.

4. The attention of intending applicants for license and of all licensees, is especially directed to that portion of Section 7 of the Act of 29th May, 1901, which provides: "That upon conviction of any subsequent offense, the person so offending shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than twelve months."

The express direction of said act is imprisonment in addition to the minimum fine therein specified.

In addition to the fine and imprisonment imposed for second offenses, injunction proceedings will be instituted, and no license will be transferred from any person against whom such proceedings are pending.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

THE HOUSEKEEPER IS PUZZLED.

The housekeeper shook her head doubtfully as she laid down the newspaper she had been studying. There was a perplexed expression on her still handsome face. She looked like one who is face to face with a problem that refuses to be solved, or like one who is surrounded by deep waters.

"Well, sir" said she giving the paper a sudden flip, "I have never seen the like of this pure food mystery. Just as soon as one gets comfortably settled down to the conviction that something has been fixed finally the scene shifts and a totally different aspect presents itself. I am not yet established in my mind about that benzoate of soda decision. It is a mighty difficult thing for an unlearned woman to decide when the most eminent doctors differ. At first I agreed with Dr. Wiley. He presented the results of his investigation so emphatically and so plainly that I was quite convinced of the accuracy of his experiments and investigations and the good sense of his decisions. But just as I was established in the faith along came Dr. Remsen and his fellow experts affirming that they also had experimented with benzoate of soda and were satisfied that the drug could be used in large or small quantities without detriment to health. Well, Mr. Roosevelt accepted that decision as law and I subsided, although I did secretly determine to give myself the benefit of the doubt. I don't have to eat benzoate of soda, said I, and I just will not. And at this very moment along comes another stirrer up of strife who suggests that may be Dr. Remsen and his fellows experimented with the wrong sort of benzoate of soda, with the benevolent kind, which is only used under certain conditions in medical preparations, but never in food products. Then we had the declaration that bleached flour was injurious to health and the resolve of the government to drive the bleached article out of the market. And this paper tells me that the western expert who said so many things against bleached flour, all backed up by the result of his investigations, has been blandly turned down by an English judge who declined to believe his sworn testimony and had the audacity to declare, in the face of this expert evidence that he didn't believe there was any harm in bleached flour. I swan I am clean beat out and I don't wonder that some of the people of this country don't know where we're at. And then there's the awful uproar over the question, "What is whiskey?" Well, I could answer that question, but the editor of the Bulletin would not allow me to express myself. But I do wish the pure food weather man would signal us clearing skies and fairer weather due;" And the Housekeeper sighed and ceased to talk.

THE ICE CREAM TRADE IN MAINE.

The Ice Cream Trade Journal is convinced that the Food Commissioner of Maine has exceeded his authority in the matter of imposing restrictions upon the ice cream industry. According to this authority the only law on the statute books of Maine referring to ice cream is one permitting the director of the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station to fix a standard. This he has done, affirming that "ice cream is made from cream and sugar, with or without a natural flavoring, and contains not less than 14 per cent. of milk fat; fruit ice cream is made from cream, sugar and fruit, and contains not less than 12 per cent. of milk fat; nut ice cream is made from cream, sugar and nuts, and contains not less than 12 per cent. of milk fat."

Acting in accordance with the standard adopted by the director of the experiment station, the Food Commissioner lays down certain rules and regulations. He says that until further notice a limited amount of gelatin, starch, eggs and other healthful constituents may be added to ice cream, without statement of the fact, and such goods may be called ice cream provided the required per cent. of milk fat is maintained. But if imitation flavoring extracts are used or if the product contains less milk fat than the standard requires the label must state the fact concerning the flavoring extracts, and the inferior product cannot be lawfully sold as ice cream. Nothing can be lawfully sold under the name of ice cream except those products which fully comply with the decision of the Commissioner.

The Ice Cream Trade Journal sniffs at this regulation which it pronounces "one of the most drastic in the country." It indulges the hope that "some ice cream manufacturer in Maine will have nerve enough to carry his rights to court and get an opinion." It doesn't think any Commissioner should be permitted to make law. It calls attention to the fact that Pennsylvania is satisfied with a standard of 8 per cent butter fat while the Maine official insists upon 14 and 12.

This instance, as well as some others in the present issue, is presented that ice cream manufacturers in Pennsylvania may note what interesting things are occurring in other states of the union. There seems to be no more vital topic up just now than the regulation of the manufacture of ice cream in the several states.

A VOICE FROM STATE COLLEGE.

In a recent communication to the Creamery Journal, Professor H. E. Van Norman, of the Pennsylvania State College, says "The most prominent step, I think, in the dairy development of this State during the past year has been the increasing use of combined churns, starters, acid tests and moisture tests. Some of our creamery men who have been skeptical have discovered that 17 and 18 per cent. of overrun is practicable under Pennsylvania conditions. There is a growing demand for more good cows. I believe this does offer an opportunity to the dairymen who keeps a high class registered bull, of any of the dairy breeds, and raises good grade heifers. I have many inquiries as to where to find grades of this or that breed. People will and must pay good prices to get them.

"At the dairy school we have had the most satisfactory year since Mr. Larson and I have been here. Our instruction has included short courses in creamery buttermaking, cheesemaking and farm dairying, including the productive side.

"About 30 per cent. of our graduating class in agriculture specialized in dairy husbandry. One of them, A. A. Borland, won a fellowship and will do a year's advanced work in dairying at some other dairy school to broaden his view of dairy instruction and investigation. Each of the others will have a good place. Their work has included systematic instruction in cheddar and fancy cheesemaking; ice cream making; farm dairying with the special study of feeding, including ten weeks actual charge of the feeding work at the barn. Prospects for the coming year are gratifying."

The Bulletin copies the foregoing communication to a distant publication for the purpose of calling attention to the special work of the Pennsylvania State College. It has very greatly strengthened its course of instruction during the last few years and under the efficient presidency of Dr. E. E. Sparks has taken a new lease of life. This institution exists for the purpose of helping the sons of Pennsylvania farmers to learn how to pursue the calling of their fathers in the most effective way. Its merits cannot be too widely recognized. Farming and dairying in the future must be largely a matter of expert knowledge. The successful farmers and dairymen of the future are going to have scientific knowledge concerning their business.

THE CHILD AND THE HOT WEATHER.

Referring to the "annual slaughter" of the babes of Richmond, the Monthly Bulletin of the Health Department of the city of Richmond declares that practically all the deaths which occurred during the month of May from infantile diarrhea were "due to ignorance or carelessness of the mother." And it adds that until these mothers learn the fundamental principles of caring for their babies (chiefly in the matter of food, but also in other directions), this annual slaughter will go on.

What is true of Richmond is likewise true of other sections of the country and has been from time immemorial. Once the terrible increase in the infantile death rate during the hot months was believed to be due to the dispensations of Providence, but it has been determined by scientific investigation that improper care has had a great deal to do with it. While knowledge has increased to a very considerable extent there is still much ignorance among mothers and this, coupled with the carelessness which seems to be natural to some, retards the efforts of health officials to reduce infant mortality to a rate but little in excess of that among adults.

By the time this number of the Bulletin reaches the hands of its readers, the greater part of the summer will have passed. The last half of August, however, is usually one of the most dangerous periods to infants and if a seasonable word here could prevail with any mother to the exercise of greater carefulness in the care of her little one and therefore to the saving of a single life the space devoted to this article would not only be well occupied but would also be in direct line with the mission of this publication which is to help to prolong human life by teaching correct things concerning human food.

The infant needs special care during the hot months. The milk it consumes should be procured from a reliable dealer and should be kept in a cool place in the home. The child should be lightly clad. It should have plenty of fresh air. It should not be fed too often nor to much at a time. It should not be exposed to the heat of the day.

It should be bathed frequently. Attentions like those suggested will go far towards insuring the safety of any normal child during the heated term. They will be gladly undertaken by any mother who has a proper apprehension of the responsibilities of motherhood.

IMPORTANCE OF PURE FOOD PRODUCTS.

The Bulletin has frequently called the attention of its readers to the fact that the vitality and the health of the people are often imperiled and sometimes impaired by the impure or adulterated food which is sold them. Sometimes the grocers who sell the goods are as innocent of harm as the consumer, having purchased the goods for what they purported to be—pure food products. There has been a very sensible abatement of this evil within the borders of the State of Pennsylvania during recent years so that the operations of the last year showed a decided improvement over the figures of the past. One may hope for a continuation of the movement in the right direction until there will be no such thing as adulterated food on the market.

In the work of driving inferior or adulterated products out of the market the officers of the State have been greatly aided by the intelligent assistance of the consuming public. Sentiment, expressed in the hearing of Senators and Representatives has helped to impress those servants of the people with the necessity of enacting measures for the protection of the health of the consumers. That explains why there has been a continual improvement in the laws, so that those enacted by the Legislature of 1909 go farther in the direction of forbidding the adulteration or preservation of food products than any of their predecessors. The growth of public sentiment is further indicated by the nature and extent of the remonstrance against that section of the Murphy pure food law which permits the use of a limited quantity of benzoate of soda in the few articles in which its use had been permitted hitherto. A few years ago no objection was raised to the indiscriminate and unlimited use of this and other preservatives.

While it is necessary for many citizens to exercise the utmost economy in the purchase of articles of food, it should never be forgotten that the best food is usually the cheapest in the end. Articles that are commended to the attention of the consumer because they are very cheap frequently have no other recommendation and cost more in the end than articles which are not sold at such a low figure. It was the rage for cheapness which led to the extensive adulteration of food in other years. There is always a more or less successful effort to supply any demand. The trouble is that a demand for cheap food often does great harm by tempting manufacturers to use adulterants.

CONCERNING FLIES AND MOSQUITOES.

As the Monthly Bulletin of the Health Department of Richmond well suggests, flies are now recognized as one of the greatest of all carriers of disease, especially all typhoid fever and all intestinal troubles. Flies are born in filth, chiefly in stable manure, in which the adult female fly lays her eggs, but garbage and moist filth of almost any kind will serve her purpose. These eggs become maggots within a few hours and these in turn become flies. All this occurs in about ten days, and the new crop of flies proceeds at once to lay more eggs, and so on until cold weather puts an end, temporarily, to their activity.

Care in the prompt removal of manure from the stables and in promptly burning all garbage, or otherwise safely disposing of it, will do away with the presence of flies. If they are already about much can be accomplished by screening the house and by the free use of fly paper.

Concerning mosquitoes it is pretty widely known now that these insect pests are the means of conveying malarial fever. Besides this, both mosquitoes and flies are inimical to health, aside from the direct carrying of disease. The disturbance to rest and comfort for which they are responsible is a serious matter even in health, while to an already ill infant, struggling with all its feeble power against great odds, the loss of rest and the annoyance caused by these pests may easily turn the balance and be a prominent factor in its death. As mosquitoes breed in standing water one good way of making a permanent end of them is to fill up the low places and provide good drainage for lowlands. Where there are no standing pools, no stagnant ponds there will be few if any mosquitoes. If it is difficult or impossible to prevent the existence of stagnant water the proper remedy for the mosquito nuisance is to cover the surface of the water with oil. That has proved an effective remedy in regions where this malignant insect in former times was able to accomplish a very great amount of evil every year.

In this as in other matters, eternal vigilance is the price, not of liberty but of health. A few preliminary precautions along the line suggested above may protect valuable lives and will certainly abate two of the most persistent nuisances of the summer time in Pennsylvania. In the end the extermination of the fly and the mosquito will add perceptibly to the lifetime of a generation.

WISCONSIN'S NEW DAIRY LAW.

At the recent session of the legislature of Wisconsin a new dairy act was passed. It has been signed by the Governor and is now in effect. Dairy and Food Commissioner J. Q. Emery, speaking of this bill, says: "The bill was carefully prepared with the purpose of correcting the most glaring evils now existing in dairy practice." Writing to the Creamery Journal, published at Waterloo, Iowa, he adds: "To our way of thinking it is a highly important word to Creamery Journal readers from Wisconsin and will prove to be a long step forward in the way of dairy progress."

The bill describes the meaning of the term "unsanitary" or "unwholesome" and invests inspectors with authority to condemn milk or cream they may deem unwholesome or unclean. It goes back of the "offering for sale" clause and begins at the stable where the milk is produced. It covers every operation from the cow to the creamery, and it will require an expert of the experts to discover a technical loophole whereby offenders may escape punishment. The act is the work of the dairymen of Wisconsin and the Creamery Journal, from which the foregoing information has been gleaned, congratulates them upon their success, telling them that they have placed a law among their statutes which should go a great ways towards materially raising the quality of Wisconsin butter.

The penalty for violating any of the provisions of the act is a fine of not less than $25 or more than $100 for each offense or imprisonment for not less than thirty nor more than sixty days.

THE FARMER AND HIS READING MATTER.

The Bulletin does not know of any recent action of the federal government which is more likely to be fraught with important results to the entire country than the extension of the postal delivery service into the isolated country districts by means of the rural free delivery routes. It has had a decided influence upon people and publishers already and is only in its infancy. The farmer is usually a very busy man, but he is able to snatch a moment here and there for reading, even in the busiest season and there are periods of the year when he has a good deal of leisure on his hands. Besides that, he recognizes, now more vividly than ever before, the beneficial influence exerted by books, magazines and newspapers upon the younger members of his family. And now that Uncle Sam, through the agency of the rural free delivery carrier, has brought the great rushing, busy world to the front door of every farmer, or of every country resident, opportunity is being embraced. The immediate result has been a decided increase in the circulation of the daily newspaper. Families that seldom saw one before our paternal government began to carry his mail to every man's door are now regular subscribers and readers. Already they have become so accustomed to the daily and its bright and vivid presentation of the news of the great world that they would not know what to do without it. The standard weeklies have also increased their circulation and the agricultural papers and those devoted to dairying or special interests have also entered many homes to which they were strangers in other and more isolated days.

This increased circulation of literature benefits both publishers and readers. It enables the former to demand better advertising rates and to increase the value of the publication by expending the increased revenue upon contributions and mechanical improvements. It gives the latter much valuable information concerning their daily work that they might not obtain under other circumstances. The farmer who takes a good farm journal is always in the way of getting pointers that will increase the quantity, the quality or the value of his crops. The dairyman who subscribes to a journal which devotes its attention to dairy problems will save many times the price of the publication in the course of a year. He gets information which he is able to turn to practical account at the very moment it will be most serviceable. Presently he moves to the front. He acquires a reputation which grows as he gets older and all because the dairy news he obtains in his trade publication teaches him what to do at the right moment.

LET US THINK ABOUT A PURE LIQUOR LAW.

The fact that the bill regulating the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in this Commonwealth which passed both houses of the General Assembly last winter failed to receive Executive approval, owing to grave defects in its construction, leaves the people of the State without protection from drugged liquors, except such as the federal food and drugs act may incidentally give. Although the federal law is over three years old no formal and final answer has yet been made to the question, "What is whiskey?" Elsewhere in this number of the Bulletin we give two opinions concerning the recent effort of Solicitor General Bowers to solve the problem. But it would seem that his opinion has only deepened the mystery and aggravated the controversy between the rectifiers and the manufacturers. The opinion is practically a reversion of the position taken by former Attorney General Bonaparte, for whereas the latter sided with the distillers the former agrees with the contention of the rectifiers. Thus the officials charged with the enforcement of the federal act are embarrassed by a multitude of opinions and decisions, hardly any two alike, and all calculated to render violations of law more difficult to detect. When nobody knows precisely what the law means those who desire to profit by adulteration are not slow to take advantage of the situation.

The people and their servants, the men who make the laws for this Commonwealth, will have considerably over a year to consider the situation and to come to a conclusion concerning the sort of legislation necessary to protect the consumer of alcoholic liquors from injury by means of adulterated liquors. Nothing can be done by way of restriction or protection before the winter of 1911. But a beginning can be made now. In the manufacture of fermented liquors alone Pennsylvania ranks second of the states of the union, being surpassed by New York alone. In the matter of consumption, too, she is near the head of the procession. Much liquor is used annually for medicinal purposes. When it is prescribed for the sick it ought to be as pure as possible. The rights of the consumer for pleasure should also be regarded. Hence the importance of having an act on the statute books which will severely punish the manufacturer or the vender of adulterated or poisoned liquors. The best minds of the State should devote the ensuing months to framing such an act. It should be ready for presentation at the next session of the legislature and public sentiment should urgently demand its prompt passage. The good that would result from the enactment and enforcement of such an act cannot be estimated.

THE TAX ON COLORED OLEOMARGARINE.

The oleomargarine trust has no intention of abandoning its desperate and persistent efforts to place its goods in the market as a successful substitute for pure butter. There could be no reasonable objection to this policy if it were carried on openly and if no effort were made to deceive the consuming public into accepting the sham as the genuine article. Pennsylvania does not object to the sale of oleomargarine when it presents itself upon its own merits and does not enter the market masquerading under the disguise of pure yellow butter. When the rivals confront each other, each clothed in its natural color, without cunning disguise of the one to resemble the other, there is no doubt in the mind of the average observer concerning the result. Butter will win out every time.

But oleomargarine is quite well aware of its own weakness. Its owners strive to trick it out in such guise that the average consumer who wants cheap butter and is destitute of the appliances needed to test the genuineness of the "butter" purchased by him may be easily deceived. Hence the persistent and widespread efforts to have the tax on colored oleomargarine either removed entirely or reduced to a low figure. This effort has been going on for a long time and seems finally to have secured a friend in the cabinet of President Taft. At all events the word comes out of Washington that Secretary MacVeagh, of the Treasury Department, is very favorably impressed with the proposition to impose a uniform tax of three cents a pound upon both colored and uncolored oleomargarine. It is said he has been persuaded to recommend the modification of the Grout law to that effect.

Pennsylvania farmers and butter makers are very much interested in the outcome of this proposition. There are 200,000 farmers and dairymen who are vitally concerned and who will bitterly oppose any scheme having for its end the breaking down of the wall of partition between butter and oleomargarine. Even under present circumstances they are frequently handicapped by the competition of bogus butter; were all restrictions removed the situation would be truly deplorable. We know that special provisions are to be adopted, according to the friends of oleomargarine, but the butter makers of Pennsylvania and other states do not care to try the more than doubtful experiment. The Bulletin is gratified to be able to state that this scheme to reduce the tax on colored oleomargarine from 10 cents a pound to 3 is not likely to receive the favorable consideration of Congress, no matter how high the authority behind it.

COMMISSIONER CANNON AND DENVER.

Food Commissioner W. F. Cannon, of Colorado, is making great preparations to entertain the Association of National and State Dairy and Food Departments, which will convene in the progressive and interesting city of Denver the latter part of this month. Brother Cannon is a good fellow; a successful mixer, possesses social qualities of the first order and will undoubtedly so arrange matters as to prevent the delegates having a dull moment while in his custody, and he will send them out of Denver with their minds filled to overflowing with pleasant memories of the convention city and the Food Commissioner of Colorado. The Bulletin congratulates Commissioner Cannon upon his appointment. We feel sure that after he has learned all the conditions of the situation he will be found constantly occupying a front seat on the band wagon. That's the proper place for so genial a chap.

AGENT NUTT AND THE OLEOMARGARINE CRIMINALS.

Internal Revenue Agent L. G. Nutt, who was recently sent to Pittsburg by the Internal Revenue Department charged with the intricate and important duty of breaking up the illegal manufacture and sale of oleomargarine in Allegheny and adjoining counties, is certainly making good and has conclusively demonstrated that he is the right man in the right place. Already a number of violators of the law have been arrested, tried, convicted and sent to prison for long terms, while heavy fines have been imposed through his skillful efforts. The men who have been persisting in the violation of this particular law are now on the run and the indications all point to the breaking up of a gigantic conspiracy that has for many months defied the federal and state authorities as well as the courts. We congratulate the government and the people upon their fortune in having in their service such capable officers as Agent Nutt.

THE RIGHT TO A SQUARE DEAL.

The food laws of this Commonwealth were framed and enacted and approved by the Governor upon the assumption that the consumer is entitled to a square deal. The majority of the people must trust to the integrity of the dealer who supplies them, and the dealer, in turn, depends upon the business fairness and honor of the manufacturer. So it comes down to the maker, as a finality, and the food laws insist that he shall use good materials and obey the laws of health in the preparation of his wares. It is a very simple matter, after all. One would think every reputable citizen would be glad to obey such reasonable requirements.

WHAT IS WHISKEY, ANYHOW?

For many months the federal authorities have been in a state of confusion over the question, "What is whiskey?" Attorney General Bonaparte tried to settle the matter under the Roosevelt administration, but it declined to stay settled. Now comes along Solicitor General Bowers with another definition which has stirred up as much contention as former official deliverances. While the "straight" whiskey men were victors under the Bonaparte decision the advocates of the blended interests seem to have won out if Solicitor Bower's opinion is to have sway under the present administration. Discussing the matter the New York Journal of Commerce indulges in some remarks which are substantially as follows:

While the opinion of Solicitor General Bowers on what is entitled to be called whiskey under the pure food law is not conclusive, it seems likely to be accepted as settling the long controversy. The solicitor general depends somewhat upon what may be called "the custom of the trade in determining what may be rightly called whiskey. He discusses clearly what has always been treated as whiskey by manufacturers and dealers, including therein neutral spirits distilled from grain, lacking the distinctive by-products of distillation that gave character to whiskey, when colored and flavored and sold to retailers, who did not necessarily know about the coloring and flavoring. This latter was not known as whiskey to consumers of the article.

It has been the contention of Dr. Wiley that only "straight whiskey" distilled from grain, with the distinctive by-products and without any doctoring or blending with neutral spirits, was entitled to be labeled as whiskey under the law. The law allows a blend of "like substances," but he construed neutral spirits not to be a like substance with whiskey, and insisted that a mixture of that with straight whiskey and with coloring and flavoring substances, however harmless, or even desirable, to consumers, should be labeled as a "compound" or "imitation." Mr. Bowers, in answering the question, what the term whiskey "includes," admits this mixture, if the alcohol or neutral spirits is derived by distillation from grain, and if the mixture conforms to his general definition of what constitutes whiskey.

The decision of the solicitor general practically sustains the claims of the makers of "blended whiskies" and if accepted will over-rule the position of Dr. Wiley. This seems to be mainly a dispute over words and names, and if the components and character of the beverage are clearly made known in the labeling and nobody is defrauded or deceived, it would appear to be a matter of small consequence whether it is called blended whiskey or compound or imitation whiskey, but to the industry and trade it was considered a matter of great moment on account of the force of custom and habit, even of prejudice, upon buyers or consumers. It would be reasonable to require the label to disclose the real truth about composition of any brand of whiskey, even though it is still allowed to go by that name without disparaging qualification.

Thus far the Journal of Commerce which does not appear to be exactly sure concerning the course it ought to pursue. On the other hand, Miss Alice Lakey, of Cranford, N. J., the head of the Consumers' League, is very positive about what she wants and what she believes every friend of the national food and drugs act should insist upon having. She desires every enemy of a backward step to communicate with the president at once, urging him not to approve or promulgate the opinion delivered by Solicitor General Bowers. She declares that such a signature would "utterly destroy the efficiency of the pure food law." In the course of her article she says:

The signing of the Bowers decision means that all food products entering into interstate commerce can have adulterations added to them; if whiskey that is adulterated by the addition of an unlike substance is not required to state the fact on the label that it is compound, imitation, or blend, then food products that are adulterated by the addition of an unlike substance need carry no warning to the consumer.

The greatest menace to the public health lies in the fact that milk entering into interstate commerce may be adulterated by the addition of water or any other unlike substance. Glucose may be added to molasses, to maple and cane syrups and to honey; nut shells of all kinds to spices and peppers; flour to mustard; starch to cocoa and chocolate; alum, starch and calcium sulphate to cream of tartar; vanilla extract may be made of tonka bean or any other cheaper substitute; calves one day old may be canned and labeled chicken; jellies and jams may be made of anything to which gelatine can give consistency and labeled in any way pleasing and profitable to the dishonest manufacturer. Such goods will need no labels stating that they are compound, or imitation, if the Bowers decision is signed.

The reign of the food adulterator will return to the detriment of both consumer and honest manufacturer, if President Taft signs the decision.

The pure food law was designed to protect the consumer. The Bowers decision protects the rectifier. Section 8 of the pure food law states: Second: In the case of articles labelled, branded or tagged, so as to plainly indicate that they are compounds, imitations or blends, and the word compound, imitation or blend, as the case may be, is plainly stated on the package in which it is offered for sale; provided that the term blend as used herein shall be construed to mean a mixture of like substances, not excluding harmless coloring or flavoring ingredients used for coloring or flavoring only.

According to the Bowers decision no such word or warning need be placed on adulterated whiskey. If not on adulterated whiskey, then it need not go on any package of adulterated food entering into interstate commerce. What then becomes of the pure food law? It is rendered null and void. The pure food law does not regulate what the consumer shall eat, but by its provisions the consumer can know what the manufacturer is given him to eat. If President Taft signs the Bowers decision the consumer has no such protection.

The Bulletin has presented the views of the conservative Journal of Commerce and of the very deeply concerned head of the Consumers' League. When the question involved is so intricate that the efforts of two administrations to solve it to the satisfaction of all the interests concerned have only served to increase the mystery, the Bulletin will not hazard its sagacity as a student of passing events by endeavoring to decide between them. It may be pointed out, however, that the outgiving of the solicitor general is an opinion, rather than a decision. The latter comes from a court or from some one vested with legal authority and has all the force of law. An opinion is a legal utterance by a legal officer and is meant to instruct and guide the action of the party advised. It may be overturned by judicial action or utterly disregarded by the person or body to whom it is addressed.

DAIRY LAWS AND DAIRY PROGRESS.

By Professor E. K. Slater, Former Dairy and Food Commissioner of Minnesota.

From the Creamery Journal. Inasmuch as the writer is no longer engaged in the work of enforcing dairy and food laws, he feels free to express his convictions relative to that work. We have waited until this time to voice opinions that perhaps would not have carried much weight while engaged in the work. In other words, they might have been accepted by some as a plea for less work for the dairy and food commissioner.

The paramount object of dairy legislation is the protection of the health of the consumer of dairy products. When a dairy law has a further purpose it is getting away from the main principle underlying food legislation, such principle being constantly in view by the courts. We do not wish to be understood as opposed to legislation which has for its purpose the elimination of the many abuses which enter into the production and manufacture of dairy products, but we do wish to emphasize the fact that when we endeavor to enforce laws which are not based upon the great principle of protection for the consumer we have a difficult task on our hands.

The laws which have for their purpose the protection of the consumer must of course include the sanitary production of dairy products in addition to prohibiting the introduction of deleterious substances in the manufacture of those products. It should be held in mind, however, that the question of proof is always up to the officer enforcing the law, and when a law is too drastic it is impossible to enforce that law because the courts must not only keep in mind the interests of the consumer, but must also give the party brought into court the benefit of the doubt.

It has been our observation that the great majority of buttermakers, cheesemakers and patrons do not realize how little can actually be accomplished by the enforcement of dairy laws other than the prosecution of the flagrant violators of the plainest and most specific of dairy laws. They continually call for dairy legislation aimed at the suppression of various practices which are incapable of suppression by legislation. They apparently entertain the opinion that all of the troubles of the dairy and creamery business might be eliminated by law. In fact, if all of the measures which have been proposed as a panacea for each particular ill were to be enforced as law, the business of operating a creamery or cheese factory would be made a very entertaining business.

Of course it is not fair to accuse all creamery men of entertaining such ideas and we do not wish to be so understood. We are also of the opinion that the number who entertain such ideas is rapidly decreasing. We have called attention to the foregoing for the purpose of leading up to the claim that the buttermaker and the manager of the creamery are in a better position to settle the detail matters of the creamery business in the locality than anyone else, and that the good buttermaker working in harmony with a good manager does not require very much assistance from the state official who is charged with the enforcement of the dairy laws. This is particularly true in the case of co-operative creameries.

Co-operation is based upon the harmonious activities of those entering into the business of the creamery and the police power invested in the State Dairy Commissioner is a mighty poor weapon to use to bring about harmony in a community. The good buttermaker particularly is in a position to settle the many difficulties which come up in the average creamery. He has the tact to cement the different interests and to keep the wheels of the organization well oiled. He and he alone, is responsible for the degree of confidence which the patrons of the creamery have in the business of the institution, and we might add that it is always difficult to inspire confidence with a club.

It is not necessary for us to call attention to the many ways in which the buttermaker working in harmony with the manager can bring about conditions in a creamery community which are essential to the success of the creamery. We do, however, wish to emphasize the statement that the buttermaker is the man to do the work.

We believe it is also true that a large number of our creamery operators do not make use of the powers within them. They depend too much upon the enforcement of dairy laws to bring about conditions which they so much desire, and of course as long as they look to some one else to do this they will not take steps to do the work themselves. We believe great good might be accomplished if it were possible to impress this fact upon the minds of our buttermakers. We have confidence that the great majority of them are capable of doing the work which they expect the creamery inspector to do, and we are so thoroughly convinced that we are correct that we feel almost like voicing the opinion that it would be a good thing for the creamery business if the creamery inspector were to be eliminated long enough to get the boys fairly started in settling their own troubles.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

If you haven't already put the flies under restraint proceed to do so at once. They are dangerous visitors.

Obedience to law is the rule of action among conscientious business men, without reference to their occupation.

Manufacturers of food products should always remember that the health of the people is in their keeping. They should be faithful to the trust reposed in them.

As in the days of Paul, the great Apostle, so now the law is a protection to the innocent and an offense to evil doers alone.

The enactment of pure food laws was rendered necessary by the gross abuses which had crept into the manufacture of food products. The rational and prudent enforcement of those laws will do no harm to any honest manufacturer.

It is not the province of this Division either to make laws or to interpret them. Its sole work is to execute the laws as they are upon the statute books or as they are interpreted by the courts. It will never undertake to exceed its function.

The medical men at their recent convention at Atlantic City certainly manifested no disposition to agree with the views of Mr. Roosevelt's referee board concerning the effects of benzoate of soda upon the human system. They approve, endorse and applaud the course taken by Dr. Wiley, without once referring to him.

The wise man fights for perfect laws so long as there is any hope; then he accepts the best he can get for the time being, cherishing the hope of better things to come in the not distant future.

The baleful power of the fly to introduce disease into the family circle is now sufficiently well known to justify the inauguration of a general crusade for the obliteration of this little pest. One of the ways to accomplish this is by cleanliness of one's surroundings. The fly is the creature of filth. If there were no filth there would be no flies. So the first great effort should be to remove filth. Then there would be no breeding places for flies.

The street sale of ice cream in cones or sandwiches has been prohibited by the board of health of Dayton, Ohio. There is reason to believe that this excellent example will be widely imitated ere many years elapse.

Among the other legislation enacted by the legislature of New York at its recent session was a bill fixing the standard of raw cream at 18 per cent.

The American Medical Association is an organization the combined wisdom of which should command as respectful attention from a president and his underlings as the special referee board chosen by former President Roosevelt.

This from the National Food Magazine: "Leslie's Weekly, the defamer of Dr. Wiley, seems to think it necessary to defend Secretary MacVeagh. This is especially unfortunate for the Secretary, in that none of his public acts as yet need defending." The foregoing sentences were written before the Secretary undertook to secure the reduction of the tax on colored oleomargarine from ten cents to three.

Efforts to palm off Arkansas apples and berries as the products of Michigan have caused one rather too enterprising firm to be convicted of misbranding in proceedings in the United States District Court at Kansas City.

Here is a remark thrown out by one E. M. Eckard which may interest the consuming public: "Bacteria normally inhabiting the intestinal tract are not destroyed by cold storage, neither are the eggs of the blow fly. These bacteria and maggots develop during the rise of temperature that takes place after removal from cold storage before they are destroyed by heat."

The executive committee of the National Association of Master Bakers has passed resolutions which have been sent to the president.

recognizing the honesty and integrity of Dr. Wiley, head of the federal bureau of chemistry, and endorsing "his efforts to keep pure and unadulterated the food of the American people." The committee also specially commend the doctor's efforts to prevent the artificial bleaching of flour.

It is announced that the National Dairy Show will pretty certainly be held in Milwaukee the coming fall, probably from October 5th to the 19th. It is to be a great show of every branch of the dairy industry—buttermakers and creamery managers; the farmers who milk the cows and the cows the farmers milk; the city milk dealers and the makers of ice cream.

It is said by the Galveston News that at no period in the history of Texas, particularly of the southern portion of the State, has interest in the creamery industry been more marked than at present. New plants are under course of construction practically all of the time and seldom, during the past year, has a week passed without the opening of a general discussion of the industry in some new location.

Nels R. Lund, of Mankota, Minn., has been appointed State Creamery Inspector of Minnesota by Commissioner French, succeeding Edwin Hed, who has resigned to accept another position.

The Fourth International Dairy Congress, which was held at Budapest, Hungary, the first half of June, was an event of unusual interest and importance, not only in Europe, but also in the United States. The government of this republic was represented by Professor T. L. Haecker, of the College of Agriculture, University of Minnesota.

It is said that June butter prices in the New York market were higher than ever before. Nor did the subsequent month show much abatement.

The statement is made that the inhabitants of South Africa always regarded cornmeal as unfit for food until a recent agricultural show, where some American women prepared so many tempting dishes out of cornmeal that the eyes of the South Africans were opened. This Bulletin knows an Englishman, a good representative of his people, who was in this country for years before he could be per-sualed to even taste the luscious roasting ear, let alone any other corn product. He said corn was not a food for human beings. But he is wiser since he set his teeth in his first roasting ear.

The more effective public sentiment on behalf of pure foods and pure drinks the sooner will all manufacturers fall into line and send out no food product containing any doubtful ingredient.

The retail grocers of America resent the imputation that they exact excessive profits upon tea and other merchandise. Their national convention endorse the declaration of Senator Gore to that effect.

At the recent National Convention of Retail Grocers in Portland, Oregon, President Charles Kramer estimated the number of retail grocers and meat dealers in the United States at 500,000. The Inland Grocer thinks this estimate much too high, believing 350,000 a much likelier figure.

Cincinnati health officers announce that they will hereafter insist upon compliance with a recent ordinance which requires that milk shall be sold only in sealed bottles, sales in bulk being forbidden.

Someone who claims to know writes to George W. Ritter, who conducts the interesting department in the Inland Grocer, "The Clerk and Store Assistant," that some grocers will not hire any but inefficient clerks. Good clerks command good salaries but these frugal-minded grocers will not pay good salaries. For that reason their clerks are seldom efficient.

Less than one-tenth of the manufactures of the United States are exported, while those imported equal in stated value about one-twentieth of the home product. This gives one an idea of what an enormous market this great and teeming republic has become.

The retail merchants of Iowa are opposed to that feature of the national bankruptcy act which permits the discharge of a debt incurred for the necessities of life.

The New Hampshire legislature has passed an act which the Governor has approved prohibiting the sale of any ice cream which "shall contain any substance other than milk, cream, eggs, sugar, some natural flavoring and not more than one-fifth of one per cent. of filler, or which shall contain less than 14 per cent. of butter fat."

In accordance with an act just passed by the legislature of Florida, the food commissioner and state chemist of that State have promulgated a ruling under which ice cream must contain not less than 14 per cent. of milk fat and fruit or nut ice cream not less than 12 per cent. of milk fat. Ice cream is to contain nothing but cream and sugar, with or without a natural flavoring; fruit ice cream is to contain cream, sugar and sound, clear watered fruits; nut ice cream, cream sugar and sound, miracid nuts.

The owners of several boxes of butter made in Elba, Wisconsin, but labeled, "Made in the only and original Elgin (Illinois) creameries, established in 1870," were compelled to pay the costs of a suit brought by the federal authorities and give bond not to sell the goods without relabeling.

The essence of the offense against the consuming public consists in deception of the purchaser, according to the federal food and drugs act. An article containing nothing offensive or injurious to health will be confiscated if it be misbranded. The law seeks to compel the manufacturer to deal openly and frankly with the consumer.

The Dairy and Food Commissioner is extremely anxious to bring to justice every violator of the oleomargarine act. So far as he has the opportunity and the power, he will invoke the most drastic penalties of the law for the punishment of those who seek to deceive the public by selling colored oleomargarine as pure yellow butter. He will be greatly pleased to receive the active aid and assistance of any citizen of the Commonwealth.

Rumor says that a special effort will be made to secure the modification of that section of the federal act which places a tax of 10 cents per pound upon colored oleomargarine. Some high officials are reported to be very actively engaged in lobbying for the suggested amendment. But the interests opposed to the change are believed to be too strong to overcome.

There is a conviction among the people that cold storage goods may not always be as palatable as those that have never experienced such decided variations of heat and cold. Yet others hold that this is a mistake and that cold storage is the thing.

The Retail Grocers Association of Kentucky has been duly incorporated according to law. Other associations have likewise had their legal existence recognized by the State.

Much is to be gained by the consistent habit of telling every patron the exact truth concerning any article of food on sale, so far as the grocer understands it. Even those who wish the cheaper grades of goods are entitled to a statement which will make them acquainted with the facts it is important that they should know. Liberty of choice remains with the purchaser and can be intelligently exercised after the facts have been learned. Grocers of this sort, blunt though they may be, are never unpopular with the consumer. Quite the contrary is true.

The farmers and dairymen of Pennsylvania are very decidedly opposed to any such changes in the Grout oleomargarine law as Secretary MacVeagh is said to advocate. The lovers of genuine butter will heartily join in the effort to keep the tax on oleomargarine where it now is.

The people of Pennsylvania are rapidly securing a splendid list of laws in relation to the food they eat and the beverages they drink. Some gaps remain to fill, but in due time the harmonious whole will be evolved.

There is much reason to believe that the summer drinks which the people young and old are consuming this year are much superior in quality to those sold in this Commonwealth in former years. Here and there, however, a vender will learn only by bitter experience the folly of disregarding law.

The traffic in rotten eggs which was quite a factor in the business of some bakers a year ago seems to have come to a summary end. The act of Assembly covering that infamous business is pretty drastic and is having the desired effect.

The farmers of Pennsylvania are encouraged to manufacture pure cider vinegar by the act of Assembly relating thereto. They should be liberally patronized by the grocers of the State who will thereby encourage a worthy class of their neighbors and insure a first class article of genuine cider vinegar for their patrons.

In past investigations by the agents of the Dairy and Food Division the fact has been brought to light that much of the vinegar imported from other states and sometimes falsely called "cider" vinegar, never saw a drop of cider.

The meat inspection bureau has done excellent service during recent months. The people of the State have benefited greatly by the observations and recommendations of the agents of this new branch of the State's activities on behalf of the people.

The fact that the oleomargarine smugglers will persist in selling it under the name of butter is the best evidence in the world that a great many persons do not want to use it and will not buy it unless under the delusion that they are purchasing butter.

The housekeeper who carefully and intelligently reads the labels and acts intelligently upon the information thus obtained, is likely to have less than the usual amount of sickness among the members of her family.

Select your milkman with care. See that he delivers you a good quality of milk. And then be extremely careful in your method of preservation, so that the pure milk obtained from the dealer does not become tainted before it is used by the members of your family.

The consumer of soft drinks is now under the protection of law. This fact will inure to the benefit of his stomach.

The sweepings of the store or of the sidewalk should not be permitted to mingle with the food products on sale in the grocery. The modern grocer who comprehends the force of public sentiment and the growing distaste of the consuming public for foreign ingredients in his food never forgets this vital fact.

The violations of the oleomargarine law which are reported from time to time indicate that some men are willing to run considerable risk in the hope of winning an illegal profit. They also show that sooner or later the transgressor is gathered in and made to pay the penalty.

The fact of the matter is that the majority of us are pleased to get the yellow-tinted clover butter in the spring, but in the fall and winter we prefer the natural colored butter. The world contains nothing sweeter or more delicious than pure country butter, colored by nature or uncolored.

The legislature cannot always be persuaded to make the food laws of the State precisely what we have hoped for. But after it has given us the best it could be induced to give, wisdom advises us to refrain from sulking, to accept with content what we have received and to strive to obey or enforce it so well that we'll get something still better at a later date.

The federal officers stationed in Pennsylvania in connection with the enforcement of the oleomargarine law are all earnest and vigilant in the discharge of their duties and have done well during recent weeks.

Both the farmer and the grocer must find time for reading if they would stand at the head of their class. It is the man who knows and who has the wisdom to apply his knowledge who brings things to pass.

The committee on food standards of the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists has prepared a report on tentative standards for meat products which the Secretary of Agriculture has refused to print, according to Dr. William Frear, chairman of the committee. The Secretary of Agriculture has had no use for the food standards committee for a long time past.

The work of the Dairy Commissioner in South Dakota was separated by the last legislature. The pure food and drug work was transferred to the State University at Vermillion and the dairy inspection and enforcement of dairy laws is now connected with the dairy school at Brookings. The legislature provided for a traveling dairy expert whose office will be at the State College.

The citizen who is in possession of any information concerning violations of law which the Dairy and Food Commissioner ought to know should send it to the office at Harrisburg as soon as possible. It is far better to help than to criticize. This office will strive to do its duty impartially and fearlessly.

The housekeeper not only oversees the affairs of her home but also has in charge the health of its members. Her scrupulous attention to the nature of the food her grocer sells her and her determined refusal to buy any article containing adulterants or preservatives will be more effective in producing a change of heart among recalcitrant manufacturers than laws, legislators, pure food officials or courts.

There is nothing likely to be done at the coming regular session of Congress to injure the business of the butter makers of the country. It is a proposition some would like to tackle, but the majority of Senators and Representatives have a wholesome regard for the farmers and the dairymen of the republic.

While some dairymen complain of the rigid restrictions by which their business is surrounded by city rules, board of health restrictions, or State laws, the majority realize that their own interests suggest a cheerful and ready compliance with every requirement. Milk is such an important article of food that it cannot be left to the tender mercies of any dealer. All must be brought under the same regulations.

The bugs, the flies, the dust, the hundred other nuisances that lie in wait to bother the grocer and annoy the housekeeper, all have their uses in this world; among those uses, however, we do not think unrestricted access to food products should be included.

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
DAIRY AND FOOD BUREAU.

Rules Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10. Issued May 14, 1909.

Rules and regulations for the enforcement of the provisions of the Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909.

As required by Section 8 of the Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, the Dairy and Food Commissioner, charged with the enforcement of the provisions of said act, has made the following rules and regulations for the enforcement thereof.

These rules, where possible, conform to and are the same as the rules and regulations adopted for the enforcement of the act of Congress, approved June 30, 1906, commonly known as the "Food and Drugs Act."

RULE NO. 1, SAUSAGE. Sausage or sausage meat shall be held to be a comminuted meat from neat cattle or swine, or a mixture of such meats, either fresh, salted, pickled or smoked, with added salt and spices and with or without the addition of edible animal fats, blood and sugar, or subsequent smoking. It shall contain no larger amount of water than the meats from which it is prepared, contain when in their fresh condition, and if it bears a name descriptive of kind, composition, or origin, it must correspond to such descriptive name. All animal tissues used as containers, such as casings, stomachs, etc., must be clean and sound and impart to the contents no other substance than salt. All sausage found to contain any cereal, or added water, or other substance, except as herein stated, shall be deemed to be adulterated.

RULE NO. 2, FRUIT PRESERVES, JAMS AND JELLIES. All fruit preserves, jams and jellies shall be true to name and contain nothing but the fruit after which they are called, together with sugar; except, that fruit butters may contain spices and vinegar. Where glucose is used as a substitute for sugar, either in whole or in part, for the purpose of sweetening or cheapening an article of food, the substance should be marked to show the presence of glucose, such as glucose jelly, glucose jam, glucose fruit butter, together with the name of the fruit which gives it the flavor, in accordance with the provisions of the act relating to branding.

RULE NO. 3, POWDERING AND COATING. The term "powdered," as used in the fourth clause of section 3 of the act, shall be held to mean the application of any powdered substance to the exterior portion of articles of food.

The term "coated," as used in the same clause, shall mean the application of any substance to the exterior portion of a food product.

RULE NO. 4, COATING OF RICE. No coating of any kind may be used for rice where the same is used to conceal damage or inferiority, or to make the rice appear of better or greater value than it is. In each case, whether or not such a result be secured, is a question of fact to be decided by the evidence.

RULE NO. 5, COLORS. The use of any dye, harmless or otherwise, to color or stain a food in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed, or whereby the food is made to appear of better or greater value than it is, is specifically prohibited by law. The use in food for any purposes of any mineral dye, or any coal tar dyes not hereinafter listed, will be grounds for prosecution. Until further notice the coal tar dyes hereinafter named, made specifically for use in foods, and which bear a guaranty from the manufacturer that they are free from subsidiary products and represent the actual substance the name of which they bear, may be used in foods. The following coal tar dyes which may be used in this manner are given numbers, the numbers preceding the names referring to the number of the dye in question as listed in A. G. Green's edition of the Schultz-Julius Systematic Survey of the Organic Coloring Matters, published in 1904.

The list is as follows:

RED SHADES:

- 107. Amaranth.
- 56. Ponceau 3 R.
- 517. Erythrosin.

ORANGE SHADE:

- 85. Orange I.

YELLOW SHADE:

- 4. Naphthol yellow S.

GREEN SHADE:

- 435. Light green S. F. yellowish.

BLUE SHADE:

- 692. Indigo disulfoacid.

Each of these colors shall be free from any coloring matter other than the one specified and shall not contain any contamination due to imperfect or incomplete manufacture. (F. I. D. 76.)

RULE NO. 6. SODIUM BENZOATE AND SULPHUR-DIOXIDE. Under the fourth proviso of the fifth clause of section 3, the following articles of food are designated as those articles of food in which benzoate of soda, or benzoic acid, have heretofore been generally used, to wit:

Catsup, mince-meats, sweet chow-chow, sweet pickles, preserves, jams, jellies, fruit-butters, shredded and dried codfish and eider, when used as a food ingredient.

For the purposes of this act, one-tenth of one per centum of benzoate of soda, or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, may be used in the foods above enumerated, provided, the fact that sodium benzoate has been used in the preparation of such foods shall be plainly stated on each package thereof.

The use of sodium benzoate is not permissible in any other articles of food, except those hereinabove designated.

The word "package," as used in the fourth proviso of the fifth clause of section 3 of the act, shall include all containers, whether supplied by the dealer or by the consumer.

RULE NO. 7. SODIUM BENZOATE AND SULPHUR-DIOXIDE. Continued. When any quantity of sodium benzoate or sulphur-dioxide has been used in the preparation of a food that fact shall be plainly stated on each package, and the act also provides, under the fourth clause of section 4, relating to misbranding, that the labeling of packages required by this act shall be on the main label of each package, and in type not less than 8-point brevier caps in size, unless the size of the package will not permit the use of 8-point cap type, in which case the size of the type may be reduced proportionately and in such position and terms as may be plainly seen and read by the purchasers.

Under these separate clauses the presence of sodium benzoate or sulphur-dioxide will be held to be plainly stated on each package of food when the fact of such presence is stated in such a way as that it may be plainly seen and read by the purchaser, in colors contrasting with the ground on which it is placed and in character of type and position upon the container in conformity with the provisions of the act.

RULE NO. 8. MEATS, PRESERVES AND SIMILAR FOOD SUBSTANCES THAT ARE LIKELY TO BE CONTAMINATED BY EXPOSURE TO FLIES AND OTHER INSECTS, OR EXPOSED TO THE DUST OF THE STREET OR THE STORE. Under the provisions of the sixth clause of section 3 of the act, an article of food is adulterated where the same is an animal or vegetable substance produced, stored, transported, or kept in a way or manner that would render the article diseased, contaminated or unwholesome. Under this clause of the act, meats, preserves and similar food substances that are likely to be contaminated by exposure to flies and other insects, or exposed to the dust of the street or the store will be required to be kept screened so as to prevent all contamination.

Rule NO. 9. GUARANTY. The guaranty referred to in the Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, shall in all cases be a written or printed invoice guaranty, bearing the date of said invoice, upon each bill of goods purchased, signed by the vendor, and substantially in the following language, to wit:

I (or we) the vendor of the articles mentioned in the foregoing invoice hereby guarantee and warrant the same to be in full conformity with the act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, known as the "NEW FOOD LAW," approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, in that the said articles are not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the aforesaid act.

(Signature).....

RULE NO. 10. LABELS. Numerous requests are referred to this Bureau for the approval of labels to be used in connection with food products under the Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909. This act does not authorize the Dairy and Food Commissioner, nor any agent of the Bureau, to approve labels.

The Bureau, therefore, will not give its approval to any label. Any printed matter upon the label implying that this Bureau has approved it will be without warrant. It is believed that with the law and regulations before the manufacturers they will have no difficulty in arranging labels in conformity with the requirements set forth.

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.
DAIRY AND FOOD BUREAU.

Issued, July 8, 1909.

Rules Nos. 11, 12, 13 and 14.

Rule 11, PREPARED MUSTARD. The names prepared mustard, German mustard, French mustard, mustard paste, shall be used only to designate pastes composed of a mixture of ground mustard seed, or mustard flour, with salt, spices and vinegar, and, calculated free from water, fat and salt, shall contain not more than twenty-four (24) per centum of carbohydrates, calculated as starch, determined according to the official methods, not more than twelve (12) per centum of crude fibre, nor less than thirty-five (35) per centum of protein, derived solely from the materials named.

RULE 12, FLAVORING EXTRACTS. The name flavoring extract, flavor, flavoring, essence and tinctures, as applied to articles intended for use in the preparation of foods, shall be used only to designate solutions in ethyl alcohol or proper strength of the sapid and odorous principles derived from an aromatic plant, or parts of the plant, with or without its coloring matter, and shall conform in specific name to the plant used in its preparation.

Flavoring solutions, in the preparation of which flavoring substances not derived from the plants specifically named have been added, shall not be designated as if prepared solely from the aromatic plant named.

An imitation flavoring extract shall not be given a name nor bear upon its label any statement, design or device that shall in any way, indicate that it is the flavoring extract which it imitates.

RULE 13, MARASCHINO CHERRIES. Maraschino cherries must not contain sulphurous acid, sulphur dioxide, sulphites, salicylic acid, or other preservatives prohibited by law, nor any other ingredient deleterious to health, and if artificially colored, such coloring must be effected solely by the use of harmless animal, or vegetable colors, or of the coal tar dyes named in Rule 5, and when so colored the fact shall be plainly declared on the label.

RULE 14, CONFECTIONERY. Mineral substances of all kinds whether poisonous or not, are forbidden in confectionery. The addition of any alcoholic liquor to confectionery is prohibited, and no alcohol may be added to it except as the alcohol occurs in the customary alcoholic tinctures or extracts used for flavoring purposes, or as a solvent for glazes.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAIL DEALERS.

The new Food Act of Pennsylvania, approved the 13th day of May, A. D. 1909, protect innocent retail dealers when its provisions are complied with. In order to avail themselves of this protection, it is important that every retail dealer secure from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes purchases, a signed guarantee of each invoice of goods. In order that the goods may be subsequently identified, it is important that the date of purchase be marked upon the goods secured under each invoice. Where the goods are contained in separate packages, this identification can readily be secured by the use of a rubber stamp giving the date of purchase. Unless the retail dealer is able to identify with certainty the vendor from whom his goods were procured the act will not protect him. This will require the greatest care, not only in marking the date of purchase, but in keeping the articles purchased from different manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers bearing the same brand, entirely apart from each other, so that at any time the identification of the vendor of each article can be clearly established. It is equally important that the retail dealer shall keep the articles purchased in precisely the same condition as when they are received. A failure to distinctly identify the vendor, or to clearly prove that articles purchased have been kept in the exact condition as to quality as when purchased, will deprive the retail dealer of any protection.

When an agent of the Dairy and Food Bureau calls upon a retail dealer, it is requested and confidently expected that courtesy will be exercised both by the dealer and the agent.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Issued May 14, 1909.

Harrisburg, Pa., October 1, 1907.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE GUIDANCE AND GOVERNMENT OF PERSONS PROPOSING TO ENGAGE IN THE MANUFACTURE, SALE OR USE OF OLEOMARGARINE OR RENOVATED BUTTER, AS AUTHORIZED UNDER THE ACTS OF ASSEMBLY APPROVED THE 29TH OF MAY, 1901, AND JULY 10TH, 1901, AS PRESCRIBED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE THROUGH ITS AGENT, THE DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER.

1. No license will be granted to a non-resident of the State of Pennsylvania.

2. No license will be transferred from any person, firm or corporation convicted of any violation of the Acts of Assembly under which such license is issued, nor while proceedings are pending for violation of said acts against such person, firm or corporation.

3. Remittance (either bank draft, cashier's check or certificate of deposit, preferred) for license fees must accompany the application for license. Individual checks must be certified by the bank on which same are issued or drawn. Checks and drafts must be made payable to the order of the State Treasurer, and upon receipt thereof by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, if the application is approved, a license certificate will be promptly issued.

4. The attention of intending applicants for license and of all licensees, is especially directed to that portion of Section 7 of the Act of 29th May, 1901, which provides: "That upon conviction of any subsequent offense, the person so offending shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than twelve months."

The express direction of said act is imprisonment in addition to the minimum fine therein specified.

In addition to the fine and imprisonment imposed for second offenses, injunction proceedings will be instituted, and no license will be transferred from any person against whom such proceedings are pending.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

DEFECTS IN THE FEDERAL OLEOMARGARINE LAW.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust issued the following statement in reference to the defects in the Federal Oleomargarine Law and in the regulations for its enforcement.

"The present Federal Law, governing the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, is, in form, an Internal Revenue Law, yet, it is important to remember, that while Congress deemed it wise, for various reasons, to use the Bureau of Internal Revenue for the regulation of the oleomargarine manufacture and traffic, the primary purpose of the act was to protect the consumer, the butter producer and dealer from the fraudulent manufacture and sale of this substitute.

"There seems to be a growing tendency to overlook this purpose and to view the act chiefly as a revenue producing act. The result is that there is great danger of the act being enforced as a revenue measure only, without giving to the consumer and butter producer the full measure of protection which the act was intended to secure. It is, for example, the practice in cases where the dealer has evaded the payment of the prescribed tax, upon his detection, to relieve him from a trial before the courts upon the payment of the back taxes due from him. This practice may be sufficient to protect the United States Treasury against the loss of revenue, but it is clearly not such as to punish the offense against the consumers and the honest producers whose interests have been injured by the dealer's lawbreaking.

"There is another point in the terms of the act itself at which amendment is greatly needed. The Federal Act distinguishes in its treatment colored from uncolored oleomargarine, but its definition of the colored oleomargarine is so narrow that by the use of improved processes a very large quantity of oleomargarine resembling yellow butter in color escapes classification as colored oleomargarine and is treated as an uncolored product. That is to say, the Federal Act does not class oleomargarine as colored unless the coloration be effected by the addition of a distinct dye stuff, yet, by the use of high colored fats, or of special processes of the treatment of the fats, a yellow oleomargarine may be produced, and, because of the narrow terms of the act at the point mentioned, is classed and taxed as uncolored oleomargarine. The result of this condition is that the consumer is commonly deceived into the belief that the article is butter, and affords the vendor grounds for a claim that he has been misled. The act should be amended by so defining colored oleomargarine that it shall include all butter substitutes that shall have been caused to resemble yellow butter, no matter how; whether it be by the addition of butter itself, the use of other fats of yellow color, by the addition of dye stuffs, or by such treatment of ingredients as affect the yellow coloration of the product.

"At another point also the act requires amending in order that it may be effectively enforced.

"The act contemplated, as its provisions plainly show, the devising of a system of marked packages and of factory and dealers' accounts such as would, on the one hand, give to the buyer distinct notice of the nature of the product offered for sale, and, on the other hand, enable the revenue officers to trace each lot of oleomargarine manufactured from the factory to the several consumers to whom it is finally delivered. In practice it is found that the provisions intended to secure these results have not satisfactorily accomplished their purpose. With reference to the form of package, the provisions of the act should be altered so that the oleomargarine shall be put up in the factory in the small packages of one, three and five pounds sizes in which it is to be delivered to the consumer, and that at the factory each of these packages shall be separately wrapped and stamped with a revenue stamp in such manner that the contents cannot be removed or changed without the fact coming distinctly to the attention of the consumer; and further, to make more perfect the supervision over the factory output and to make it more difficult for unlicensed dealers in oleomargarine to escape the attention of the officers of the law, each of these small packages should bear a serial number and should be delivered from the factory in cases of prescribed size that should also bear a registered serial number."

THE LAWS AND THEIR ENFORCEMENT.

The imperfections of the human family are responsible for the existence of policemen, prisons and penitentiaries. The inability of certain men and women to refrain from the desire to violate law makes law a necessity. The duty which devolves upon the state of protecting the peaceably disposed and law-abiding citizen in the enjoyment of his privileges as a citizen compels it to enact certain laws and to appoint certain officers whose duty it is to see that the laws are enforced. The officers do not make the laws. Some of those laws they may not like. But so long as they are in the service of the state it is their bounden duty to protect the innocent and to endeavor to stop the career of the violator of law. The community has a perfect right to complain about any officer who deliberately shuts his eyes to infractions of the statutes. But its criticisms should be made with judgment and based upon knowledge.

The Legislature of Pennsylvania has from time to time enacted various measures for the protection of the consumer of food stuffs. It has endeavored to prevent the sale of impure milk. It declares that the sale of counterfeit butter is unlawful. It forbids the sale of poisonous acids under the name of vinegar. It seeks to prevent the adulteration of the non-alcoholic beverages consumed by the people in great quantities, especially during the summer months. It wishes to protect the consumer from impure lard or meats which do not come up to the proper standard of purity. At the recent session a new pure food act was passed by both houses and approved by the Governor. Its aim is the protection of the families of the state from adulterated or fraudulent goods.

Copies of the food laws of this State are easily procured. They should be in the hands of the manufacturers, the distributors and the retailers who in any way desire to serve the people of Pennsylvania. It is made the duty of the Dairy and Food Bureau to enforce all these laws. It will aim to do so. For months a special and uninterrupted effort has been made to inform all with whom the law has to do of its provisions and their duty. This has not been necessary, for ignorance is never regarded as an excuse for violating law. But the Dairy and Food office is anxious to see the law obeyed voluntarily by the largest number of persons and has sent out line upon line by the way of information. For that reason it feels that all who are caught in the meshes of the law hereafter will have themselves to blame. Those who will not heed must be brought to terms in some other and harsher way.

Some manufacturers or dealers are simply careless. They have no desire to disregard the laws. They are good citizens in most of the relations of life. It would be wrong to class them among criminals. We all know how many and great are their virtues. Yet even such excellent persons cannot be permitted to go on blindly disregarding the acts of Assembly. Technically they have no advantage over the person who is an intentional violator of the acts relating to the preparation and distribution of food products. If they were to be arrested and placed on trial the essential facts toward proving the State's contention would be established; that would be an end of the matter. This Bulletin wishes to say very earnestly to such persons that they have no right to treat the laws of the Commonwealth carelessly or with indifference. The purity of their intentions will not count for much in a court of justice. It is a shame that good men, men of established reputation, should permit themselves to be put in the attitude of lawbreakers. But when they decline to heed warning after warning, who must they blame if the law lays its heavy hand on them?

Regretfully we admit that the State contains some manufacturers and dealers who cannot be placed in the class of the carelessly good. They are avaricious. They are fond of large profits. They know that adulterated goods bring more profit than the pure article. And so they deliberately take the chances. They go into the business of making adulterated foodstuffs or of buying them because they expect to be able to cheat both the State and the consumer. Some of them have been engaged in this nefarious and dangerous business for years. They have been arrested more than once and found guilty. But they seem to be the victims of a mania for law-breaking. They never learn wisdom. Like the professional burglar or the chronic forger, they are obsessed. For such as these there is no remedy except continual arrest and punishment. And even this is no permanent cure. They are quite as bad as the foolish moth which persists in flying directly into the flame.

Because of the chronic criminal and because he cannot be locked up for life there will be violations of law every year. There will be arrests and convictions. But the great mass of manufacturers and venders will obey the laws, as other good citizens do and there will be continued progress in the right direction.

POINTS OF THE MURPHY FOOD LAW.

The Retail Grocers' Association of Philadelphia, which has rendered no little assistance to the Dairy and Food Bureau during the past year or two, has issued a special notice to its members which we reproduce here for two reasons: First, it is a forcible illustration of the spirit which animates this large and flourishing association. Second, it contains suggestions which should be carried all over the State and placed in the hands of the retailer. Here is the statement:

"The Murphy Pure Food Law is now in full force and effect, and you are urged to study its provisions and strictly conform to it. Under this act goods containing alum cannot be sold. If you have goods in your stock containing alum, our suggestion is that you request the manufacturer to exchange them for you for goods that will comply with the law, or secure from him such a guaranty as, in your judgment, will protect you in the event of prosecution.

"The use of borates is prohibited. Articles that contain this preservative cannot be sold legally.

"Sulphur dioxide can be used in molasses and dried fruits, and each package that goes to the consumer must be properly stamped as containing sulphur dioxide. Sulphur dioxide is usually contained in evaporated peaches, apricots, apples and California bleached sultana raisins.

"Molasses.—If you fill a jug or can with molasses you must paste a sticker on the same, advising the consumer that it contains sulphur dioxide. Every can of molasses that goes out from your store must always be properly stamped as containing sulphur dioxide, and if the goods that you have on hand are not properly labeled, it is your duty to at once procure a sticker or other stamp and so mark them.

"Benzoate of Soda.—Benzoate of soda can only be lawfully used, according to the ruling of the Department, in catsup, mincemeat, chow chow, sweet pickles, preserves, jams, jellies, fruit butters, shredded and dried codfish and cider, when used as a food ingredient. If you sell any of the above named articles in bulk it is your duty to so label them as containing one-tenth of one per cent. of benzoate of soda, and this applies to every package, no matter how small, that goes over your counter to your customer.

"The sale of compound lard is permitted, providing it is properly marked "compound lard," and contains not less than 50 per cent. pure lard. Every package that goes over your counter must be properly stamped as "compound lard." If it is a lard substitute it must be properly marked, "lard substitute," in letters not less than one-half inch in length. Failure to label each and every package, as outlined above, will subject you to all the penalties provided in the law. Misbranding is a serious offense under the act, and you should be careful that all goods in your store are true to label.

"The sale of canned vegetables colored with salts of copper is prohibited under the act; this applies more particularly to imported vegetables, and it is now unlawful to sell them if colored as stated above.

"A guaranty will afford you protection only for the first offense; in other words, if you are notified by the Food Department that an article does not comply with the law, your guarantee would save you in that instance, but if you continued the sale of the article after notification, you would be subject to the penalties as provided.

"Clean Food.—The act provides that food kept in a manner to render it diseased, contaminated or unwholesome is a violation of the law; it is, therefore, absolutely necessary that food be kept free from flies, dust and street dirt.

"Soft Drinks.—The new soft drink law provides that all soft drinks shall be free from added preservatives, and we urge you to be sure that you have proper guarantees from the persons from whom you purchase these goods, that they will comply with the law."

The notice concludes with the statement that proper stickers have been provided with which to mark the goods in accordance with the requirements of the act. Retailers are advised to procure a stock at once and to be very diligent in obeying the act and the rules made in pursuance thereof. It is added that the matter will be discussed at each meeting of the association and the hope is expressed that "every member of the organization will cheerfully comply with the rules laid down by the Department and by observing the law save themselves much annoyance and possible expense." It is duly signed by the officers of the association, Alber Kaiser, President, and William Smedley, Secretary.

The Bulletin hopes every retail dealer in Pennsylvania to whom this article may come, will study it carefully and keep it within reach. It is packed full of good advice. If it is generally heeded there will be the most thorough accord between retailers and the Dairy and Food Bureau.

CONCERNING THE IMPORTATION OF COFFEE.

The Board of Food and Drug Inspection recently rendered a decision concerning the importation of coffee, which was approved by the Secretary of Agriculture, to this effect: The product ordinarily known as "Black Jack," consisting of rotten or decomposed berries, is regarded by the Department as injurious to health and the Food and Drugs Act forbids its shipment or sale within the jurisdiction of the said act. Coffee which is damaged by water during shipment, or which has acquired a permanently offensive odor because of its proximity to hides or other material of objectionable odor is considered by the Department to come within the phrase "filthy, decomposed or putrid," as used in the Food and Drugs Act, and its shipment and sale is forbidden. Immature berries, ordinarily known as "Quakers," are dead beans without pronounced taste or smell. They have not the characteristics of coffee, and, in the opinion of the Department, their shipment or sale as coffee within the jurisdiction of the act is in violation thereof. It is added that if small amounts of these prohibited substances are found in the recognized graded coffees of commerce, as is pretty certain to be the case, no action will be taken. Screenings must be sold as "coffee screenings," not as coffee.

A SEASONABLE WARNING TO RETAILERS.

In discussing the provisions of the new food act of Pennsylvania The Grocers' Review, the well edited organ of the Retail Grocers' Association of Philadelphia, gives the retail dealers among its readers a bit of important and seasonable advice when it urges each one to go carefully over his stock and know that all the goods comply with the law; to sell no goods unless they have been accompanied by a proper guarantee. It is to be feared that this judicious suggestion has not always fallen upon fruitful soil. Some retailers are believed to be as careless and indifferent as their neighbors in other branches of business. But when carelessness is likely to involve one in a controversy with the State, the result of which is not going to be doubtful, the instinct of self-preservation should lead the most indifferent to the exercise of ordinary circumspection. Goods that were on the shelves at the time the Murphy Act became a law should not be offered for sale unless the retailer has a sufficient guarantee from the person from whom he made the purchase. To do otherwise is to invite trouble.

CHEAP FOOD AND GOOD FOOD.

This Bulletin has told its readers more than once that the very cheapest foods are likely to be the most expensive in the end. Many consumers have never taken the time or trouble to reflect upon this matter or to make experiments with food. The average housekeeper hasn't time to bother about such matters; many housekeepers are not posted concerning methods of comparison. Their practical education has been neglected. They are ignorant concerning the properties of food products and would not know how to make the interesting experiments which are possible and which have again and again shown how very much more the poor man who buys the very cheapest articles pays for his food than his neighbor who has more and who has some ideas about foods and their preparation. And so the world goes on, a very considerable market existing for adulterated food because it is cheap, as the average man understands cheapness. And that is why violations of the pure food laws occur; why dealers are tempted to sell inferior and adulterated brands and run the risk of encountering the just hostility of the Commonwealth.

Take the adulterated sausage that some dealers have been palming off upon their customers as the genuine article. This sausage is composed of some ground pork, some cereals and as much water as can be persuaded to take up quarters with the other articles. The man who buys this sausage pays probably as much or almost as much as he would for the genuine article. But he doesn't get near the same quantity of nourishment. The water vanishes and so does a large part of the cereal. It takes a great deal more of such sausage to satisfy the hunger of a strong man than it does of the unadulterated article. Take the catsup which is made of an inferior article of tomato, of the refuse of the canneries, of the parts rejected in the making of superior goods. The preservatives used in the manufacture of this inferior catsup may disguise the quality of its contents, but the consumer will pay far more for this sort of goods than he does for a number one article. Some day knowledge will have spread so widely as to make the sale of unfit goods practically impossible. Some day the consumer will be too wise to permit himself to be deceived. That will be a very good day for our country, for it will mean a healthier and a stronger race. Because the Bulletin is interested in the coming of that good time it insists upon discriminating against inferior or adulterated goods. The best is not too good for Americans. Some day they will all be of that opinion and will act accordingly. It cannot come too soon.

WATER, CEREALS OR ALUM.

In addition to the numerous prosecutions of dealers in bogus butter in Pittsburg and Allegheny county other prosecutions have been instituted against sundry dealers who have been selling goods which do not come up to the standard prescribed by the new food law which went into effect soon after the adjournment of the legislative session of 1909. For reasons which have been partially outlined elsewhere many retailers in Pittsburg have been very careless concerning the provisions of the act, while some have been wantonly criminal rather than careless. A determined effort is being made to break up this condition of affairs in Allegheny county, as well as in other sections of the State.

Recently a number of prosecutions was entered against dealers in adulterated sausage. In the city of Pittsburg these violations of law occurred. There was nothing in the sausage injurious to health, but it was prepared in violation of law. Cereals had been introduced, as well as an undue quantity of water. This was done to reduce the cost of manufacture and thus increase the profits of the vender. Persons purchasing sausage thus prepared pay for a large quantity of water, which evaporates in the process of cooking, and for cereals which are not meat and which do not cost as much as sausage meat, and which do not satisfy the demands of appetite. The law forbids the manufacture and sale of such sausage because it is a fraud and an imposition upon the consumer. The manufacturer makes him pay for water and for other cheaper ingredients which lower the food value of the product. It is hardly necessary to add that the law exists specifically to protect the public against such impositions.

At the same time and in the same city certain dealers were charged with selling pickles which had been hardened by the use of alum. Others were detected selling baking powder containing alum. The new law specifically excludes alum from the list of articles which may be used in the preparation of food products intended to be sold to the people of Pennsylvania. It is named and specifically forbidden. Nothing remains for the Dairy and Food Bureau but to see that the law is enforced. Ample warning has been sent out and if anybody falls into the hands of the State it will not be for lack of proper caution. That this will happen to some seems to be among the certainties of the future, but the wise dealer will not be among the number.

CLEAN STORES.

Under the above title the Eli Grocer and General Merchant, an enterprising and readable weekly trade journal published in St. Louis, indulges in some very timely remarks. It calls attention to the fact that the pure food conference held at Mackinac Island last summer, which was a meeting of food and dairy commissioners and met for the purpose of discussing pure food topics, duly emphasized the importance of cleanliness in retail stores and factories where food is manufactured. The committee appointed to draft a model food bill incorporated in it the same thing, while many of those high in authority concurred in the opinion that along these lines lies the work of pure food officers in the future. In pursuance of such a sentiment many commissioners have taken up this work and are pushing it with vigor. Several states have revised their laws and paid particular attention to the sanitary feature, while many inspectors working in conjunction with health departments have given the matter careful attention.

The Missouri commissioner, Dr. Cutler, has inaugurated a system of scoring stores as to sanitation, cleanliness, lighting, etc., and no doubt his example will be followed by others. It is a move in the right direction, for, as the old saying has it, cleanliness is next to godliness, and this is particularly true in a factory where food is prepared, or in a store where food is retailed. It is a subject that touches the life and health of the nation and is perhaps of more importance than some of the adulterations and of vastly more importance than some of the cases of mislabeled goods with which pure food officials have occupied their time.

It is a sorry fact, however, that this, of necessity, is a matter where law must be brought to bear. It would seem that where personal habits of cleanliness have not been acquired, a retailer would at least recognize this feature as a strong drawing card, and maintain a clean and sanitary store. But we are willing to excuse a part of this feature in many stores, as we wish others to be generous to our faults. It requires no little care on the part of the retailer and no little attention, but no one who understands the public to which he is supposed to cater, or who has any regard for the health of a city or country, will consider it as not being worth while. We believe that in many cases the importance of cleanliness has not been impressed strongly enough upon the minds of retailers.

AN IMPORTANT INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS.

The Second International Congress for the Repression of Adulteration in Food, will be held in Paris, October 17-24, inclusive. This meeting will deal not only with food, but also with chemical products, drugs, essential oils, aromatic substances, mineral waters, etc. The program, which is said to be by no means complete, is contained in a broad pamphlet of 48 pages. The first congress was held at Geneva in 1908, and is said to have been unexpectedly successful. That success encouraged the projectors of the movement to arrange for a second conference and Paris was chosen as the seat of its sessions. At Geneva there were 400 delegates, representing twenty-nine different countries. It is already established that the attendance this year will be much larger. The congress will be devoted to the consideration of the operations and manipulations permissible in connection with food and alimentary substances. Some time will also be devoted to the completion of definitions left over at Geneva.

Among the substances to be studied at Paris we mention the following: Wines, pastries and confectionery, vinegar, glucose, mustard, pepper and spices, chocolate, syrups, biscuits, edible fats, farinaceous products, honey, farina, sugar candy, sugar, eggs, spiced bread, pork purveying, bacon and ham curing, sausage making, preserved provisions, preserved food pastes, edible oils, cider and perry, cocoa, tea, coffee, preserved fruits, chicory, beer, milk, butter. These are regarded as purely domestic foods. There will also be studied other alimentary substances, included under the following titles: Drugs (crude and refined), essential oils, medicinal mineral waters, carbonated mineral waters, chemical products, ice. It may be added that this convention, like its predecessor, is under the direction of the Society of the White Cross of Geneva, organized a year ago with the primary object of grouping together, by means of an international organization, the efforts being put forth in various countries for the amelioration of social conditions. The intention of the founders, we are told, is to prevent the spread of disease, the adulteration of food and alimentary substance of all kinds, and the accentuation of the conditions which lead to pauperism. Since its inception, however, its principle mission has been to prevent adulteration, especially in connection with the food supply. It seeks to interest the various nations of the earth in this subject, to the end that a common agreement may be arrived at and a uniform system of pure food laws adopted.

It is provided in the regulations of this society for proper representation of nations, states, organizations or individuals interested in the prohibition of food adulteration. We regard this as a very important and useful movement, one that should be encouraged by all the civilized governments and also by states and private individuals. If the proper interest is taken in the matter by those who have influence in their respective countries great progress will be made within the next few years. It is quite possible that the advance will be comparatively slow at first and that those who have fixed for themselves the highest possible ideals concerning the preparation of food products will be compelled to accept more than one compromise at the start to which they object, but all real and lasting progress is made slowly. The advance of the race in any matter of genuine importance is not like the tidal wave which suddenly leaps out of the ocean and destroys all it touches, but rather like the gradual but irresistible advance of the tide. So that we gain something each year we can well afford to fall a bit short of our ideals at the beginning.

The adoption of the federal food and drugs act has been followed by a strong sentiment in favor of the modeling of state pure food laws upon the national statute. Some of us have been a bit impatient with the conservatism of the Secretary of Agriculture, and of some of the actions taken during the last few months. Still, in spite of all drawbacks and inconsistencies and contradictions, considerable progress has been made. Some of the states are still rather backward by way of legislation and some are a little ahead of the general government, but the tendency is decidedly in the direction of uniformity. Now, if through the influence of the White Cross of Geneva and similar organizations all the civilized nations of the earth can be induced to form a union for the purpose of protecting the people against the effects of impure food, a wonderful step will have been taken in the direction of banishing disease and prolonging the life of each generation. It cannot be done in a year or in a decade, we suppose, but constant agitation in the same direction will accomplish wonderful results.

It will be a fine day for the inhabitants of this planet when all its governments join hands for the purpose of running down the food adulterators and making an end of his nefarious and dangerous business. It will mean greatly improved health and a lengthening of the span of human existence, two points of the utmost importance.

CHRONIC VIOLATORS OF LAW.

Pittsburg and the surrounding towns seem to have become the centre of the illegal oleomargarine industry during recent months. This is due to a variety of reasons, one of which has been the very faint public sentiment heretofore existing in Allegheny county, against the dealers in bogus butter. What we mean is that the people of influence, those who make sentiment, have either been content, in great measure, to shut their eyes to what has been going on or have been in actual sympathy with the efforts of some dealers to make money by selling colored oleomargarine as pure yellow butter. Much of this oleomargarine has been colored in cellars and other unsanitary places. Coal tar dyes have been used and no regard whatever paid to the health or the comfort of the consuming public. It seems strange that the people of any locality should be comparatively indifferent to such a condition of affairs. It is to be hoped a permanent change for the better has been inaugurated.

During the last few weeks numerous arrests of violators of the law have been made and special efforts have been made to procure speedy trials. On one day towards the close of July no less than nineteen arrests were made of old offenders against the oleomargarine laws. Every one of these nineteen had been arrested and convicted of selling oleomargarine as pure yellow butter on previous occasions. It seems to be established that almost as soon as they got out of trouble on previous charges they straightway embarked in the same unlawful business again. They have sold oleomargarine colored with coal tar dye to thousands of innocent consumers, pretending that the article they sold was genuine yellow butter. They have violated the law—some of them the federal law as well as that of the State—they have endangered the health of the persons who ignorantly ate of their counterfeit butter, and they have done this persistently and defiantly, without regard to anything but the advantage of their own pockets.

These chronic offenders have been held for court. It will be the earnest efforts of the representatives of the Dairy and Food Bureau, to induce the court to impose upon them exemplary sentences. They have shown themselves utterly undeserving of kindness or consideration. They make capital out of the forbearance of their fellow citizens or the indulgence of the courts. The time has fully arrived when patience ceases to be a virtue. Protection of the consumer and regard for the law demands the punishment of such undesirable business people.

COUNTERFEIT BUTTER.

The announcement that Secretary McVeagh has been using his influence to induce Congress to so amend and change the oleomargarine law as to abolish the tax of ten cents per pound now levied upon colored oleomargarine, has stirred the butter makers of the country to vigorous protest. It is pretty well understood that Mr. McVeagh's proposition will encounter formidable opposition should it ever be brought forward in Congress. The general opinion of public men now is that the scheme died before it came to birth.

In some of the newspapers friendly to the oleomargarine interests we see considerable rant concerning "the poor man's butter," meaning oleomargarine. There is nothing standing in the way of the poor man or any other consumer buying all the oleomargarine he wants. The laws recognize the fact that oleomargarine is a marketable commodity. Oleomargarine, undisguised, by coloring material, pretending to be nothing but itself, may be legally sold and lawfully used. It is all right so long as it is not called butter. Men and women who prefer it are entitled to purchase it freely and to use it as a substitute for butter in their own families so long as they frankly describe it for what it is.

Why do the manufacturers wish to color oleomargarine? Is it not that they may put it on the market as butter? Is not the law flagrantly violated by unscrupulous dealers, even as it is? Would there be any protection for the average consumer if the law permitted the unrestricted coloring of oleomargarine? Everybody knows that pretty soon after the tax on colored oleomargarine had been reduced from ten to three cents the market would be flooded with "cheap yellow butter." The consumer, attracted by the price, would purchase the product, under the impression that he was buying genuine butter. As a matter of fact he would be grossly deceived for his "butter" would be oleomargarine.

Now, the Bulletin believes that the framers of our State and national pure food laws were right when they provided a penalty for deception. Under any proper construction of the pure food laws an article which is sold under a false label may be seized and the vender punished. The law holds that the buyer is entitled to get exactly what he asks for and what he believes he is getting. The poor man is entitled to the best butter in the market. He should be paid sufficient for his week's work to enable him to provide for his family all the necessities of life, including wholesome butter. To call oleomargarine the "poor man's butter" is to insult the mechanic and the laborer. It is not the poor man's butter. It is a humbug, a fraud and a cheat when sold under any other name than its own. Secretary MacVeagh ought to be ashamed to advocate so foolish a scheme.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The manufacturer who takes a just pride in the purity of his products is pretty certain to gain the confidence and patronage of a numerous constituency.

Public sentiment is a powerful and effective factor in the enforcement of law.

The grocer who takes his patrons into his confidence, frankly telling them about the virtues or the defects of the goods he sells, according to the sum of his knowledge, is a wise man and is pretty certain to be a successful one.

The fly and the mosquito may not relish the treatment to which our scientific experts would have them subjected by their victims, but the welfare of the human race is of paramount importance.

When Federal and State officials everywhere work zealously and harmoniously together for the public welfare it will not be long until adulterated and fictitious foods will become nothing more substantial than a memory.

What a pity it is that avaricious men will permit themselves to be led into unlawful conduct. Nine times out of ten they are detected and punished so that instead of profiting they lose money and frequently are driven into bankruptcy by their folly.

In various sections of the country thus far during the summer a notable decrease in the number of deaths of infants was observed. This was largely due to the greater purity of the milk supply and to the increasing care and knowledge of parents.

No public servant should permit his private interests or his personal feelings to overbalance his duty to the public by whom he is employed. In the enforcement of laws no partiality or favoritism is possible to the official who would keep a clear conscience and win the favor of the public.

Concerning the use of articles containing chemical preservatives each householder must be the judge. But when it is possible to choose between food products containing such products and those innocent of them, the voice of prudence suggests the selection of the latter.

The dealers in bogus butter are very persistent, but in the end they are discovered, tried, convicted and punished.

The argument against the removal of the tax on colored oleomargarine is found in the motive that prompts the desire to color it. If colored to resemble yellow butter it will be mistaken by many for the genuine article and thus accomplish the end sought by its venders.

In the grocery business as in every other calling in life the "boss" is always looking for assistants who are keen, alert, pleasant and interested in the expansion of his business.

The laws of this Commonwealth, supplemented as they are by the vigorous action of the boards of health of the chief cities, have done a great deal to promote the health of the people. This is particularly true of the law and the local rules regulating the sale of cream and milk. Good milk is a great boon to the babies of the State.

While it is necessary for most grocers to keep on hand a sufficient stock of cheap goods, it should be the aim of every dealer to keep on confidential terms with his patrons and to tell the truth, as he understands it. When the consumers understand that cheap goods are the costliest in the end they will soon begin to experiment on a better quality.

Pennsylvanians should not join hands with the libelers of the fair fame of their Commonwealth. In the matter of food laws, for instance, while much remains to be desired, no state has made greater progress in recent years toward the accumulation of a body of effective and sensible acts. Nor are any people served with purer articles of food.

There has been a remarkable improvement in the quality of the "soft" drinks sold in this State as compared with the situation a year ago. The improvement must be placed to the credit of the act passed by the general assembly at the recent session and to the knowledge that it will be rigorously and impartially enforced. This will prove a great benefit to the children of the poorer quarters of the larger cities. The stuff hitherto sold them was actually dangerous to the human stomach. No law was more urgently needed than that regulating the manufacture and sale of popular beverages.

After awhile the food laws of this Commonwealth will be obeyed as completely and as cheerfully in Western Pennsylvania as they are in other sections of the State.

Any citizen who prefers oleomargarine to genuine butter has a right to purchase and eat it. But the law wisely provides that he shall know what he is getting.

The question of beverages is quite as important as that of foods. So far as non-alcoholic beverages are concerned Pennsylvania now has a very satisfactory law. An effort is being made to enforce it in every section of the State.

The grocer who is frank enough to take his patrons into his confidence, telling the exact truth about his goods, so far as he understands it, is far more likely to prosper than his less ingenuous rival.

The spirit of inquiry among the people has grown greatly during the last few years. This is particularly true of the foods offered for sale by dealers everywhere. He is a foolish manufacturer who does not realize and act upon this truth.

The National Food and Drugs Act has done considerable good since its enactment, feeble as has been its enforcement. But it contains capabilities that have not been even tested yet.

It is against the law in Pennsylvania to sell baking powder containing alum. The prohibition is distinct and positive. The agents of the Pure Food Bureau have no alternative but to proceed against those who violate law.

Some wilful violators of the pure food laws in Allegheny county are now facing a judgment day which they have invited by their reckless and persistent violation of the laws of the Commonwealth. Under the circumstances they deserve neither sympathy nor pity.

The moderate use of pure food at regular intervals will preserve health and prolong life. This is a truth which too many people ignore, even if they are familiar with it.

We suppose the war so generally urged against flies was waged to some extent during the past summer, but the inquisitive insect has been pretty near as numerous and as intrusive as ever.

Obedience to law is the duty of every patriotic citizen and the police of every prudent one.

"Dealers should study the food law and apply the rules," is the wise advice tendered by the Grocers' Review. It is also good enough to say that "the rulings are clear and explicit."

One who is brought into court charged with violation of the laws cannot plead ignorance as an excuse. Every man is supposed to know the law. That is the reason manufacturers, distributors and retailers should keep the law of Pennsylvania and the rulings made in accordance therewith in some handy place where it will be easy to refer to them.

Many retail grocers in various sections of the State have adopted the Wednesday afternoon holiday idea. Wherever it has been tried it seems to win its way with dealers and patrons.

At the August meeting of the Retail Grocers' State Association at Pottsville, a specially good time was had and many excellent ideas were presented for consideration. Among the other novelties of the occasion was an exhibition of store fixtures, appliances and merchandise, with other novelties calculated to interest the merchant, perhaps to aid him in his business.

Bradford grocers have adopted a rule which went into effect June 1, limiting all monthly credits to thirty days. According to the new rule all accounts must be paid in full at the end of each month and no balances will be carried over.

Retailers who provide themselves with a proper guaranty of the goods they sell are immune from prosecution for the first offense in case the goods are not right. But if they sell after having been notified by the Dairy and Food Bureau that the goods do not comply with the law their guaranty does not protect them. This should be remembered by every dealer.

It is the duty of dealers to see that articles of food sold by them are properly labeled. It is the right of each consumer to know, from the label on the package purchased of the grocer, just what it is he has bought. It is also important to remember this.

In preparing and issuing a special notice to its members, defining the scope of the new food law and specifically instructing them concerning its provisions, the Retail Grocers' Association does a fine thing and its action is worthy of the warmest commendation and the widest imitation.

The American Grocer suggests, anent the bother over whiskey definitions, that "most consumers desire to elect which sort of whiskey they want to use and therefore instead of allowing mixtures and imitations to masquerade as straight whiskey, the regulations about labeling should be so explicit that every consumer should find on the label a designation of the exact nature of the article." That sounds like a reasonable proposition.

The United Retail Grocers' Association of Brooklyn, doesn't like the charge made by certain Senators during the tariff debate that the retail grocers are responsible for existing high prices. And it has passed resolutions to that effect.

The Kentucky Retail Grocers' Association has been incorporated. It exists for the purpose of uplifting and protecting honesty and justice in all business transactions, and to organize and charter sub-associations in the towns and cities of the State.

Some of the purchasers are complaining that not all packages of canned goods are as scrupulously honest as they ought to be. Here is one man, for instance, complaining bitterly of the undue quantity of water he has been finding in the canned tomatoes he has bought recently. The practice of turning out inferior goods hurts the entire trade.

The housewife owes it to the members of her family to be vigilant in the selection of food products for their use. Under existing laws, Federal and State, the label will give her much valuable information. For that reason the habit of constantly consulting the label is a good one to form. Nor will it do any harm, at times, to insist upon the opportunity of examining the original package.

John Burroughs, the celebrated American naturalist, says: Most persons think that giving down or holding up the milk by the cow is a voluntary act. In fact, they fancy that the udder is a vessel filled with milk and that the cow releases or withholds it just as she chooses. But the udder is a manufactory; it is filled with blood from which the milk is manufactured while you milk. This process is controlled by the cow's nervous system; when she is excited or in any way disturbed the process is arrested and the milk will not flow. The nervous energy goes elsewhere. The whole process is as involuntary as is digestion in man and is disturbed or arrested in about the same way.

The crusade against the fly is young yet. It has made but little impression in some quarters. But it is a reform which has much to commend it to the favor of prudent people and will grow in popularity with each passing year. Already it has made some progress.

In some towns during the season just ended the chief grocers were very careful to protect their berries and other products from direct contact with the inquisitive flies. This had a good effect upon their trade and there is no likelihood that they will forget it in the future.

The people are becoming more informed. They no longer believe the fly to be a harmless if troublesome insect. They are now learning that it is one of the chief promoters of disease and that in more than one instance during the present season it has brought fever and death into the household that tolerated it and extended hospitality toward it.

With increasing knowledge concerning the habits and potencies for evil of the common fly, the average householder has not only redoubled her efforts to rid her premises of this evil insect, but also begun to inspect with critical eye the condition of affairs about the place of business of her favorite grocer. And when she saw berries during the season carelessly exposed to continual visitations from hordes of flies she simply didn't buy her berries there.

Various boards of health joined in the effort to diminish the numbers and decrease the depredations of the festive fly during the present year. In some cities the chambers of commerce aided in the crusade, through the agency of its proper committee. Cards were printed and distributed among the people giving simple directions for getting rid of the insect in the most effective manner from house to house. Educational work of this sort may bring slow returns in the beginning, but it is like the scriptural bread cast upon the waters—it will return again after many days.

Carefulness about the quality of food used in the household will help to preserve health and lengthen life. And this ought to be worth while.

The law is still a terror to evil doers but a protection to the innocent.

Food laws get better and better with each passing year.

The individual who is sure that the law will never catch him, no matter what happens to the other fellow, is probably laying up for himself "wrath against the day of wrath."

The manufacturer who acquires a merited reputation for selling the best sort of goods gains a capital which is worth more to him than money. For when it is certain that he can be depended upon his patronage will increase, as our English brethren say, by leaps and bounds. And deservedly so. For the manufacturer who prides himself upon the quality of his goods and the downright honesty of his labels deserves all the success he wins.

Under the state and national laws it is an offense to put anything upon the label of a manufactured article which is calculated to deceive the consumer. An article is misbranded when the label does not precisely define it. Even though the foreign ingredients used by some manufacturers be perfectly harmless the law will punish the maker unless he causes his label to speak the exact truth. This is in the interest of the purchaser who has a right to know what he is buying.

It is very gratifying to notice the comparatively low death rate that prevailed during the month of July this year among infants and small children. In most of the cities and towns of the state the death rate among the little people was exceptionally low. Unquestionably, this was due to the purity of the milk supply and to the growing carefulness of mothers and nurses. Recent analysis of more than one hundred samples of milk revealed but six which fell below the standard fixed by law.

So far as the Bulletin has learned the only city of Pennsylvania in which the infant mortality was exceptionally heavy last July was Scranton. The Times of that city is responsible for the statement that during the first twenty-eight days of the month there were 60 deaths of infants and small children from cholera infantum. This indicates great carelessness among the mothers of the city of Scranton or a serious lack in the milk supply. While the rest of the State is showing such a wonderful improvement in the conditions surrounding infant life, it is to be regretted that Scranton has produced so ominous a record. Somebody there should get busy.

The security of the consumer is the first thing to be considered in the enactment and enforcement of food laws. Dealers are rapidly bringing themselves to that standpoint.

At its recent meeting in Detroit the American Institute of Homeopathy adopted resolutions condemning the use of benzoate of soda as a preservative in food products and endorsed the efforts of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, of the Government Food Department, to prevent the use of this drug in the preparation of food products.

At a hearing given by the Pure Food and Drug Board of the National Department of Agriculture to representatives of pickle and baking powder manufacturers, recently the Secretary of War in the Roosevelt cabinet, made an exhaustive legal argument in support of the proposition that baking powder was not subject to the provisions of the pure food and drug act. He contended that inasmuch as baking powder was not used as food the law would not apply.

Two individuals who persistently violated the federal laws concerning oleomargarine are now serving a term of imprisonment in the Leavenworth (Kansas) state prison. It will continue for two years.

Hearing that some enterprising descendant of the inventor of wooden nutmegs had put on sale a food product for animals known as bran, but made of corn cobs ground up, the federal government has begun an investigation of animal foods on the market. The animal is justly entitled to protection as well as his master.

Opinions vary concerning the effects of alum on the human stomach. Representatives of firms using this astringent declare that it does no harm in the form in which it is used by their clients. At a recent hearing before the Drug and Food Inspection Board, representatives of the Association for the Promotion of Purity in Food Products and of the American Health League declared that when taken into the system in the quantities used to preserve pickles it acted injuriously upon the stomach and bowels. It was added that those people with sensitive mucous membranes would be specially affected by alum in their food. This is evidently another case of jangling opinions. The wise consumer will adopt the course he knows to be safe—totally abstain from foods containing alum.

According to a report filed with the Food and Drug Department of the Indiana Board of Health, the canning factories of the state have, during the last year, remedied conditions in their plants until there is little ground for complaint against any of the establishments. The report was filed by an inspector who made an official tour of investigation.

The Eli Grocer and General Merchant synthesizes a large truth in the declaration that the store that is full of flies cannot be full of customers.

A new and modern dairy building is being erected on the Wisconsin State Fair grounds in Milwaukee. A refrigerator containing 1,680 square feet will be located in the building and so constructed and arranged that the entire butter and cheese display can be plainly viewed by visitors.

At the recent session of the legislature of North Dakota some admirable dairy legislation was enacted. State Dairy and Food Commissioner Flint has distributed circulars containing the laws and announces that it is his purpose to enforce them in every section. They make for cleanliness in the stable, carefulness in the dairy and method in the sale of milk, cream and other dairy products.

On the whole the country has been blessed with liberal crops and as evidences of returning prosperity are seen on every hand, the farmer and the grocer, the consumer and the manufacturer all ought to wear smiling faces before Christmas.

One of the large retail dealers of New York told the New York correspondent of the Grocery World that not 20 per cent. of the teas imported into this country get straight into the hands of the consumer. This statement also applies to coffee. The different brands are mixed by the importers, he says, so that the consumer is never likely to get a straight coffee or a straight tea.

The Grocery World is convinced that if governments were to prohibit the sale of any food that was injurious to any consumer it would not be many weeks until all food products were under ban. It says truly that "there is scarcely a food substance, in fact, which is not a poison to some constitutions. This includes even the very staples of life, white bread and water."

The amount of money invested in any "industry" should not be considered by governments if it be shown conclusively that the said business produces products that impair the health and shorten the lives of innocent consumers.

The statement is made by the Grocery World that uncoated rice does not seem to be a success during the hot weather months. In this connection it may be said that in response to a letter from a merchant in New Orleans, Commissioner Foust replied that the act of 1909 did not prohibit the sale of coated rice unless "the coating was for the purpose of concealing damage or inferiority, or of making it seem better or of greater value than it really was."

The American Food Journal did itself proud and rendered a great service to its readers by publishing an admirable summary of legislation pertaining to foods introduced in or passed by the various state legislatures during the present year.

An increasingly important article of commerce is dried milk. It is used to a large extent by bakers, manufacturers of cereal breakfast foods (as a binder), and particularly by the manufacturers of the milk chocolates extensively sold as confectionery.

The annual meeting of the Iowa State Dairy Association for the present year will be held at Cedar Rapids, November 16-19, inclusive. We are told that the program this year will be stronger and better than anything that has ever been offered at previous meetings.

Concerning the new "butter" which we are told is to be manufactured from petroleum by the Standard Oil Company, it will be time enough to consider its merits and its standing under the law after it has actually been put on sale.

A correspondent of the Creamery Journal is an enthusiastic friend of state inspection of creameries. He says the creameries of Michigan have improved from 50 to 75 per cent. since state inspection went into effect. He declares that the average farmer will do better, the average man will take more pains, will have his barn in better condition, will do better work and will produce a better article, if he knows that his work will be criticised by some one who has authority to do it.

The Dairy Division of the Minnesota Agricultural College, at St. Anthony Park, is planning to inaugurate a number of cow-testing associations in different parts of that state. Excellent results are expected to flow from the experiment.

This Bulletin is in hearty sympathy with the Creamery Journal when it asserts that "a product that cannot be sold except by deception and fraud should be legislated out of the market."

According to one oleomargarine manufacturer's recipe book, "fancy butter" is made from "thirty pounds of white oleomargarine, sixty pounds of poor quality butter and thirty pounds of water. Mix well and add coloring matter to suit." Four truck loads of this mixture were seized in Chicago, and the above recipe came to light in the United States District Court.

New York has a new law regulating the sale of oleomargarine and providing that that article must be sold on its merits. A good idea.

Commissioner Dunlap, of Ohio, advises druggists that lime water is unstable when dispensed from large containers, which may require months to empty. By frequent opening and exposure to the air it absorbs carbon dioxide. The United States Dispensary recommends the addition of an extra quantity of lime, but even if this is done and it is not carefully handled it will deteriorate. A good plan is to put it up in glass stoppered bottles of not over one-half gallon capacity keeping but one package on the dispensing shelf and the remainder in a cool place.

The Attorney General of Kansas has decided that it is contrary to the law of that state for dealers to sell decayed bananas or bunches containing spoiled fruit. The act holds that all vegetable substances that are in whole or in part decomposed, tainted, filthy or putrid are adulterated. Under this provision, he says, bananas on bunches cannot be sold when a part of the bananas are decomposed. If the owner of bananas in this condition desires to sell the bananas on the bunch that are good he must separate them from the spoiled ones; otherwise he commits an offense for which he may be prosecuted.

Out in Kansas a considerable quantity of adulterated and counterfeited vinegar is offered for sale. Not long ago a food inspector seized seventy-eight casks of highly adulterated vinegar which had been shipped to a Wichita house.

The American Food Journal is after some of the members of the American Medical Association with a pen dipped in vitriol.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Davies, of the State of Washington, is a native of Pennsylvania, and worked on a farm in this state in his boyhood days. There he gained a practical knowledge of the dairying part of his official duties.

It is reported that there is a possibility of an investigation being undertaken to discover the effects on alum upon the human stomach. The interests back of the alum industry are rather powerful and they may think their product ought to have as good a show as benzoate of soda.

It is now unlawful to sell bleached flour in Indiana and several other states. The federal government has issued an edict against it. Presently we will be back to the yellow flour of the olden time.

If Dr. Wiley really was "snubbed in England" that will only commend him all the more to the loving admiration of patriotic Americans.

At latest advices the Louisiana State Board of Health had not yet organized, being deadlocked over the selection of an executive officer.

At the recent session of the Tennessee legislature an act was passed requiring groceries, meat stores, restaurants and other places in which food is kept for sale to be protected from flies by screening. There is to be a fine of from $10 to $50 imposed upon violators of the law. A law requiring the goods sold to be specially protected from exposure to flies and other disease-producing agencies would have been more effective.

The experiment of the Retail Grocers Association of Pittsburg to do its buying by the co-operative method has not been successful and a receiver has been appointed. While co-operative movements have been highly successful in England they have generally turned out complete failures in the United States

Some business houses in the United States have pursued for many years an upright policy toward their patrons that their names are known and respected anywhere. Isn't it worth while for the grocer to strive to win a reputation of that sort in the community in which he does business?

Just as the failure of the Pittsburg experiment in co-operation is announced word comes from Minneapolis that that city is to be the centre of an extensive co-operative experiment. It is proposed to form the largest single flour buying concern in the world, a syndicate which will buy for all the large bakery concerns in America.

When the seller of an article is interrogated concerning its composition and quality the law requires him to tell the exact truth. It likewise requires that the various packages sold by him be properly and correctly labeled. This is done in the interest of the consumer and is just and right.

Purchasers who are in possession of information concerning the quality of any of the food products they purchase which should be known by the Dairy and Food Bureau are earnestly invited to communicate with this office.

The state of Pennsylvania has taken an advanced position concerning the food question. She now has a body of laws which give her people almost complete protection against adulterated or misbranded goods. If distributors and retailers will scrupulously comply with the provisions of the several acts and if the consumer will pay strict attention to the labels, as self-interest should lead him to do, there will be very little unfit food sold in the markets of this commonwealth. And it is to the interest of all to give loyal support and cheerful obedience to this collection of laws.

THE DENVER CONVENTION

AN IMPORTANT AND INTERESTING MEETING OF FOOD OFFICIALS

THE ANIMATED AND ILLUMINATING BATTLE OVER THE QUESTION OF CHEMICAL PRESERVATIVES—THE REMSEN REFEREE BOARD DEFENDS ITS FINDINGS ON THE FLOOR.
THE OFFICERS ELECTED.

The thirteenth annual convention of the State and National Food and Dairy Departments was held in the city of Denver during the last week in August, beginning on Tuesday morning, August 24. The attendance was good and the interest intense. The people of Denver were especially kind to the delegates and all who had the privilege of attending the meeting came away feeling that the proceedings were lively enough to prevent any of the members or spectators falling asleep. The address of welcome was delivered by Governor Shafroth, who cordially welcomed a convention which contained among its members the Secretary of Agriculture; but he instantly added: "I also cordially welcome another member of your convention, Dr. Wiley."

Governor Shafroth declared that without pure food laws the man who is dishonest, the man who wants to cheat, is given a great advantage over his honest competitors. He thinks great good has followed the enactment of the national food and drugs act, as well as the passage of numerous State laws along the same general lines. It is his conviction that Federal and State laws should conform in their main provisions to each other, so that the confusion yet existing in view of the dissimilarity of State laws to each other may be done away with. The Governor paid a compliment to the city of Denver, in which the convention met, and referred to the irrigation projects of the State and their intimate relation to the progress of agriculture.

Mayor Speer, who is a Pennsylvanian, was ill and sent his secretary, John T. Irby, to represent him and to welcome the members of the convention to the city of Denver. He regretted the absence of the Mayor, because that official embodies in his own person a living illustration of the value of the pure food sold to the people of Colorado. Several other addresses of welcome were delivered by representatives of the Colorado Pure Food Department and the Denver

Board of Health, after which Dairy and Food Commissioner A. C. Bird, of Michigan, responded most happily on behalf of the visitors. The cordiality of the reception and the generous spirit in which it was received by the visitors gave the first session the right sort of an impetus.

J. Q. Emery, Dairy and Food Commissioner of Wisconsin, and President of the Association of State and National Dairy and Food Commissioners, delivered his annual address after the welcoming speeches had all been made. He severely scored the Secretary of Agriculture and defended Dr. Wiley, putting himself unreservedly against benzoate of soda.

In order that the readers of the Bulletin may get the drift of Commissioner Emery's address we reproduce the following extracts:

"Of the long, able, persistent, courageous and honest efforts of the chief of the bureau of chemistry of the United States department of agriculture to secure a vigorous, honest and impartial enforcement of the national food and drug act of June 30, 1906, it is unnecessary for me here and now to speak. In the minds of the American people, the name of Dr Wiley is inseparably associated with purity and honesty of food products.

"A majority of your executive committee chanced to be in session at Washington at the time the newspapers announced the decision of the referee board on the subject of benzoic acid and sodium benzoate. We realized that if the decision were to be construed as holding benzoate of soda harmless and legal, it meant that a crisis had been reached. We recalled the resolution that was adopted at the Mackinac meeting of this association condemning chemical preservatives.

"We carefully reviewed the reasons that existed for the adoption of that resolution.

"The members of your executive committee there present were unanimous in the opinion that the battle for the elimination of chemical preservatives from foods had practically been won in many of the states when the report of the referee board was announced; that all but a small minority of those food products in which chemical preservatives had formerly been used were being furnished to consumers free from chemical preservatives. Formaldehyde had been eliminated from milk; boracic acid from meats, fish, dairy products, oysters and so on; the soda fountains, patronized largely by children, were almost purged of salicylic acid, benzoic acid and other chemicals. Your executive committee reasoned that if the report of the referee board was to be so construed by the national authorities as to legalize the use of benzoate of soda, then logically this preservative would go back into condiments, fountain syrups, wines, beers, ciders, fruit juices, jellies, jams, cordials, fish, canned products, pie fillings, mince meats, and syrups; would be introduced into milk, meats, butter, cheese, meat extracts, oysters and other foods, making easy and encouraging the use of refuse and waste material and unsanitary and unclean methods in food factories.

"Without any wish or any intent to trespass upon the prerogatives of either of these committees, I desire to make a few remarks on the report of the referee board relative to benzoic acid and sodium ben-zoate and the construction put upon that report by the three secretaries in F. I. D. No. 104. I lay no claim to being an expert chemist, pharmacologist or physician; but I do claim to have a knowledge of the principle of inductive reasoning and of scientific investigation.

"The three secretaries (Cortelyou, Wilson and Strauss), the officials at the time charged with making regulations for the enforcement of the national food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, in F. I. D. No. 104, made the following assumption with reference to the report of the referee board, 'it having been determined that benzoate of soda mixed with food is not deleterious or poisonous and is not injurious to health.' That assumption is unwarranted by the reported conclusions of the referee board in relation to benzoic acid and sodium benzoate. That referee board, according to its published reports, did not make that broad generalization or assumption.

"It is beyond my comprehension how any candid, intelligent person can claim that this second item in the answer of the referee board to the question submitted it warrants the broad assumption of the three secretaries to which I have referred. The referee board distinctly admits that feeding for one month a limited number of healthy young men, under proper sanitary regulations, food to which large doses (up to 4 grams per day) of benzoate of soda has been added, resulted in modifications in certain physiological processes, the exact significance of which they did not understand. Does that warrant the three secretaries in their broad assumption? Most certainly not."

Dr. Emery then took up the question of the model food law for states, which he indorsed highly and at great length, going into the matter with thoroughness and quoting the opinions of experts and of the courts in regard to the powers of states in this particular.

Delegate Wright, of Iowa, immediately upon the conclusion of President Emery's address, moved that the privilege of the floor be accorded Secretary Wilson. This was seconded by Delegate Jones, of Illinois. The motion was adopted with a shout. Secretary Wilson mounted the platform, and from a sheet of paper which he held in his hand read the assertions upon which he depended to prove his case.

"I came out here to listen," he said, "and I glean from the address of your president that the department of agriculture, which I thought had been doing much, has been doing nothing. Now let me tell you some of the things that it has done within the last year or so."

The secretary then enumerated some of the achievements of the department.

"Now in regard to the central point in the president's address," he declared with fiery manner, "in regard to the referee board, there is no difficulty in finding adulteration and misbranding of food products going on all the time, but with regard to a few preservatives, there is a difference of opinion among the chemists of the world. One of these questions is benzoate of soda.

"The manufacturers of the United States went to the president when the use of this was prohibited and asked for fair play. Finally he concluded to ask the presidents of the great universities to appoint some men to conduct an investigation who were competent to do the work. Under his authority I appointed five such gentlemen, who, I believe, are the best chemists in the United States, if not in the whole world.

"President Emery has attacked their report. Now, I have but one request. You have arranged a place upon your program to have the referee board here on Thursday to be heard. All I ask is that the hearing be a full and fair one."

Some of the delegates took advantage of the opportunity to eulogize Secretary Wilson and to let him know that they were his friends unto the end. Mr. Jones, of Illinois, was particularly enthusiastic, declaring that the Secretary knew no West, no East, no North, no South in the administration of the duties of his office. The same could be said by the manufacturers and the industries of the country. He asserted that the same message came from Maine to California, from the lakes to the gulf, and that it was through Secretary Wilson's influence that the country has to-day a national food law which is praised by every State in the Union.

At the afternoon session the question of the qualifications of members came up for consideration, but was satisfactorily settled by permitting all who were present in a representative character to enroll upon the payment of the customary fee. It was also decided that the meetings of the convention should be held in the open and that officers should be nominated from the floor.

On Wednesday the delegates took a recess and took a trip over the Georgetown loop to Mt. McClellan. The day was spent very enjoyably by the sight-seers.

At Thursday morning's session of the convention there came up the question of endorsing the Roosevelt referee board. Dr. Remsen, of the board, read a brief paper outlining its origin and work. He said he had directed the experiments and considered them correct and complete.

Dr. Russell Chittenden, of Yale University, told of the experiments with six young men, covering with a period of three months. He started with three-tenths grams a day and increased this to four grams a day. He said the subjects remained in perfect health and even gained weight.

Dr. John H. Long, of Chicago, next told of his experiments. He said that benzoate in small quantities has no effect. He then discussed it from the viewpoint of a concealing agency for poor material. His experiment with over-ripe fruit, divided into three quantities and treated with benzoate, vinegar and oils of spices and nothing whatever in the respective cases was detailed. He drew the conclusion that vinegar conceals impurity and that benzoate does not change the taste of the original material.

Dr. Christian L. Herter, of New York, endorsed the findings of his colleagues. He experimented upon four men in his laboratory.

Dr. Charles A. L. Reed, of Cincinnati, chairman of the American Medical Association, took the floor and attacked the commission vigorously. His principal charges were that the referees did not conduct the experiment themselves, but employed subordinates; that the experiments were conducted carelessly; that they failed to answer the questions propounded as to whether benzoate of soda could be used to conceal impurities; that they fed their subjects upon a diet designed to give the greatest resistance to benzoate of soda, and administered milk as an antidote.

Professor Floyd W. Robinson, of Lansing, Michigan, chairman of the committee appointed by President J. Q. Emery to go over the Remsen board's findings and the experiments of Dr. H. W. Wiley, made the report of the committee. It declared that the experiments of the Remsen board had dealt only with the physiological effect of benzoate of soda and recommended that the president appoint another commission to investigate the subject on a broader plane.

At this point a resolution was introduced by Commissioner Wright, of Iowa, to the following effect:

Resolved, That this Association hereby endorses the report of the Referee Board of Consulting Scientific Experts, appointed by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson at the direction of President Roosevelt, upon the use of Benzoate of Soda in food products.

Each State entitled to 3 votes, total, 42.

Those refusing to vote on resolution:

Arizona,
Michigan,
Ohio,
Pennsylvania.

Each State being entitled to 3 votes, total 12.

Resolution was declared adopted, without being referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

Previous to the adoption of the resolution Commissioner Bird, of Michigan, suggested that it ought to be submitted to the Committee on Resolutions, to whom all matters of that sort properly belonged. This protest was not heeded, however.

At the afternoon session Dr. Wiley delivered an interesting talk on "The Chemistry of Bleached Flour," and William Judson, past president of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, gave a strong appeal for the proper support and development of the national pure food law. Dr. Wiley has been conducting exhaustive experiments upon the question of flour bleaching, which he finds harmful when done quickly with the use of chemicals.

Mr. Judson said that the wholesale grocers of the country are trying to obey in every way the national pure food law and are ready and willing to do all in their power to further it. Reputable manufacturers desire to give the people the best food that can be produced in return for their money, and the association which he represented had pledged its support to the law.

The Committee on Resolutions presented the following report, which was adopted without debate and by a unanimous vote:

"Resolved, That this Association express its gratitude to, its confidence in and its indorsement of President Taft, ex-President Roosevelt and the secretaries of agriculture, commerce and labor and of the treasury for their efforts which have been and are being made to secure scientific, just, and legally conclusive settlements of the intricate problems of food law administration."

"Whereas, This association recognizes the vast benefits accruing to consumers, and the improved conditions resulting to manufacturers of food products, from the passage and enforcement of the national food and drugs act, approved June 30, 1906; and

"Whereas, Realizing that the interests of consumers, manufacturers and food officials are identical, and that the growth and development of our internal and interstate commerce depend upon amicable adjustment of conflicting State regulations; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That this Association hereby indorses the national food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, and the substantial results obtained under its workings in co-operation with the state food laws; and

"Be it further Resolved, That this Association earnestly commends full co-operation between the national and all state food laws to the end of greater efficiency in food control work."

"Whereas, The whiskey question is now in the hands of the President of the United States, and

"Whereas, It might be a mark of disrespect for this convention to discuss this question at the present time,

"Be it Resolved, That all discussion or papers on this topic be eliminated from the programme and that at this convention the association take no action on this matter.

Whereas, It is inimical to the interests of the people of the United States to decrease the tax on colored oleomargarine, as provided by the terms of the "Grout" law.

Therefore, be it Resolved, That we earnestly protest against such action at the next regular session of the Sixty-first Congress, and be it further

Resolved, That we respectfully petition President Taft that in his message to Congress on the occasion of its convening in December next, that he invite special attention of Congress to this important subject and suggest proper remedial legislation to safeguard the great interests and aid in protecting consumers from the illegal and fraudulent sale of oleomargarine as and for butter.

JAMES FOUST, Chairman,
W. M. ALLEN,
GEO. T. MacCOY,
E. W. MAGRUDER,
CHAS. D. WOODS,
Committee on Resolutions.

Whereas, We have information that an effort will be made at the next session of Congress to secure the passage of an act removing the provision now in force that a tax of ten cents per pound must be paid upon colored oleomargarine, thereby placing it upon the same footing with the uncolored product, and raising the tax upon uncolored oleomargarine from one-fourth of one cent to two cents per pound, to the detriment of the dairy interests of the country and the consuming public.

Whereas, The Federal laws now existing for the regulation of the sale of oleomargarine are in our judgment defective, and do not protect the public, as they should, against the sale of oleomargarine as butter.

Resolved, That in our judgment the following changes in the oleomargarine laws are needed:

1. The Federal act distinguishes in its treatment colored from uncolored oleomargarine, but its definition of the colored oleomargarine is so narrow that by the use of improved processes a very large quantity of oleomargarine resembling yellow butter in color escapes classification as colored oleomargarine and is treated as an uncolored product. That is to say, the Federal act does not class oleomargarine as colored unless the coloration be effected by the addition of a distinct dye stuff, yet, by the use of high colored fats, or of special processes of the treatment of the fats, a yellow oleomargarine may be produced, and because of the narrow terms of the act at the point mentioned, be classed and taxed as uncolored oleomargarine. The result of this condition is that the consumer is commonly deceived into the belief that the article is butter, and vendor is given opportunity grounds for a claim that he has been misled. The act should be amended by so defining colored oleomargarine that it shall include all butter substitutes that shall have been caused to resemble yellow butter, no matter how; whether it be by the addition of butter, itself, the use of other fats of yellow color, by the addition of dye stuffs, or by such treatment of ingredients as affect the yellow coloration of the product.

2. The provision that an offender must be proven to have "KNOWINGLY" violated the law in order to secure conviction, should be stricken out.

3. Revenue collectors should not be instructed nor permitted to compromise or settle cases growing out of violations of the law. When the offense is apparent and the proof is available, the case should be disposed of by the courts having jurisdiction.

4. The law should require that all stamps, brands, etc., placed upon packages of oleomargarine for their identification shall be so conspicuous and plain as to prevent their concealment.

5. Applicants for revenue license should be required to certify that the location given for their place of business is true and correct, and if oleomargarine is sold by the applicant at any other location than than designated in the revenue license, such sale should be made a misdemeanor.

6. Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent to the President of the United States and to the Committees on Agriculture of both Houses of Congress.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES FOUST, Chairman.

Resolved, That this Association expresses its heartfelt appreciation and gratitude to all those who have contributed so bountifully toward the making of its meeting in the city of Denver such a splendid success; and be it further Resolved, That to Honorable Wilbur F. Cannon, Food Commissioner, and Honorable R. L. Resolution unanimously adopted.

It was decided that the next convention shall be held in the city of New Orleans at a seasonable time of the year.

In spite of the excitement of the sessions and the apparent bitterness engendered upon the benzoate of soda question, the delegates parted upon the best of terms with each other and in excellent humor. The one side was pleased because it had won a victory, the other because it had made a gallant fight and almost won out on every question, succeeding in electing several of the officers. The convention listened to a large number of papers which have not even been referred to in this report, but we presumed a running account of the actual doings of the body would be more interesting to the general reader than long synopses of technical papers. It is very proper to add, however, that the papers read possessed a high order of merit as a rule and were valuable contributions to the literature of the pure food question.

NOTES FROM THE DENVER CONVENTION.

The "sowing" was done at Mackinac and the "reaping" at Denver.

And there was no session behind closed doors at Denver.

What became of the committee to nominate officers? They were not in evidence.

Slate-making received a jar at the convention.

Commissioner Bird, of Michigan, is one of the strongest men connected with the food control of the country.

In the future the sessions will likely be open to the public.

The convention was a spirited one, but nevertheless instructive.

Commissioner Wright, of Iowa, made a gallant fight for secretary, but fell by the wayside, but won his fight to sustain the Secretary of Agriculture.

The referee board faced considerable opposition, nevertheless they were endorsed by the vote of the convention.

Commissioner Cannon is a great entertainer, and is one of the most popular men in the association.

Dr. H. W. Wiley holds his convictions above his position. He would rather be right than Chief Chemist.

There is no uniformity in divorce laws, and there never will be in food laws.

There was a disposition at the convention for harmony, even if they had to fight for it.

Several times it looked as though there would be a "rough-house."

Commissioner Bird was the peacemaker at the Mackinac convention and filled the same position at Denver.

Brother Meyers was designated by many of the delegates as "Ring-master" at the Denver "Circus." One thing is sure—he used the "whip" and the boys got into line.

H. B. Meyers, editor and publisher of "The American Food Journal," was very much in evidence at the convention.

The Denver Convention League, of which W. F. R. Mills is secretary, went to a great deal of trouble and expense to entertain the delegates and their families during the session.

H. B. Meyers, of "The American Food Journal," makes a good first lieutenant in a battle such as was fought at Denver, but his necktie was somewhat disarranged after the engagement.

The trip to Mount McClellan was very much enjoyed by the delegates and their families.

There was no cold storage poultry served to the visitors at Denver.

Hon. Wilbur F. Cannon, Dairy and Food Commissioner of Colorado, deserves the appreciation and gratitude of all for the way he so bountifully arranged the entertainment of the visitors, but this was easy for the Commissioner, as it is his nature to be entertaining and he did the job well.

While the convention was a spirited one, yet the "Dove of Peace" appeared before it closed and all went away happy.

It is said that Editor Meyers injected some Chicago methods into the controversy. Nevertheless, he occupied the front seat in the "Band-Wagon," held the reins and delivered the goods.

The Committee on Resolutions made its report, and all the resolutions submitted by it were adopted, and they were pretty good fellows after all.

The officers elected for the ensuing years are as follows:

President—Hon. George F. Flanders, New York.
 First Vice-President, Hon. L. P. Brown, Tennessee.
 Second Vice-President—Hon. Dr. D. Harvey Dillon, Louisiana.
 Third Vice-President—Hon. Andrew French, Minnesota.
 Secretary—Hon. W. M. Allen, North Carolina.
 Treasurer—Hon. James Foust, Pennsylvania.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Dr. Charles D. Woods, Maine.
 Dr. S. H. Crumbine, Kansas.
 A. N. Cook, South Dakota.

New Orleans was named as the next place of meeting.

The program at Denver was entirely too large. There should be two papers on live subjects, not to consume over ten minutes in reading, at each session, and the remainder of the time should be devoted to the discussion of the same.

The election of officers and the reports of committees should be the first order of business on Thursday afternoon of each session and not left until Friday afternoon, or just before adjournment.

Denver is a great convention city, and this is largely due to the progressiveness of the Convention League of that beautiful western city.

Dr. H. E. Barnard, Food and Drug Commissioner of Indiana, read an excellent paper on "Sanitary Inspection of Food Production and Distribution." It was one of the best papers at the Denver convention and was ably handled by the distinguished scientist from Indianapolis.

Commissioner Cannon, in his speech at Mackinac, promised the convention that if they would go to Denver they would have no occasion to regret it. The Commissioner made good and "then some."

WHAT CAUSED THE DENVER CONVENTION OF FOOD COMMISSIONERS TO BE SO SPIRITED.

Early in 1906 the Bureau of Chemistry, of the Department of Agriculture of the United States conducted an investigation as to the effects of certain chemicals in food on the human system. Along about July, 1907, a ruling was issued by the department that benzoate of soda was injurious to the human body when used as a preservative in food and that its use must be discontinued after January 1st, 1908. The manufacturers who used benzoate of soda at once employed Dr. Chester Vaughn, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, and other scientists, to conduct a similar investigation, who, after several months, reported adversely to the position taken by the Federal Government and contended that benzoate of soda was not injurious to health. An interview was secured by representatives of the trade with President Roosevelt and the findings of Dr. Vaughn and his assistants were submitted to the President, and he was appealed to that the question of the injurious or non-injurious effects of benzoate of soda used as a preservative in food was one in dispute and that a referee board should be appointed to decide the question. After a little time President Roosevelt selected Dr. Remsen, of the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md., to conduct the investigation, with power to select his own associates. The referee board, after going into the subject, made its report, consisting of about 700 pages, the conclusions being that benzoate of soda was not injurious to health. The Federal Government adopted the report of the referee board and permitted the use of benzoate of soda. Since the report of the referee board a great deal of criticism has been indulged in by the press and public; some approving their findings and others disapproving of them. A resolution was offered in the Denver convention to endorse the appointment of, and the investigations made by, the referee board, which practically meant the endorsement of the use of benzoate of soda in food products. This is briefly the history of the benzoate question, which brought about the stormy session.

Hon. A. C. Bird, Dairy and Food Commissioner of Michigan, is a good loser, and President Flanders will not have a more loyal supporter during his term of office than Commissioner Bird. He showed the manly spirit because he is a "Big Man."

Hon. A. H. Jones, Dairy and Food Commissioner of Illinois, took quite a hand in the heated contest at Denver. The Commissioner is never happier than when there is a good fight on—he really enjoys it.

H. B. Meyers had three reporters to report the proceedings of the convention. "The American Food Journal" certainly ought to give a correct account of the proceedings of that memorable session.

Meyers was on the ground early and doubtless assisted in laying the plans long before the battle started.

Brother Meyers, if "to the victor belongs the spoils" you should certainly be taken care of. What is it to be?

The "Denver Republican" termed George P. McCabe, solicitor of the Department of Agriculture, as the "Field Marshal." Well! They knew Mr. McCabe was there and his presence was felt. He is a gallant fighter and rendered great assistance to his friends.

The following members of the referee board were present at the Denver convention and spoke briefly in defense of their findings:

Dr. Ira Rensen, chairman, Baltimore, Md.
 Dr. Russell H. Chittenden, New Haven, Conn.
 Dr. John H. Long, Evanston, Ills.
 Dr. Christian H. Herter, New York, N. Y.
 Dr. Alonza Taylor, Berkeley, California.

ON NATIONAL OLEOMARGARINE LEGISLATION.

Remarks by James Foust, Dairy and Food Commissioner of Pennsylvania, at the Denver Convention of Dairy and Food Departments, August 24, 1909:

Mr. President and Members of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments:

Gentlemen: An effort will be made, when Congress convenes December next, to reduce the tax on colored oleomargarine. This would be to the detriment of the great dairy industry and to the consumer of dairy products. It is said that some of the administration at Washington favor this movement. This proposal has already been challenged in Pennsylvania. The Pennsylvania Pure Butter Association, the Pennsylvania State Grange and other allied bodies have organized against this movement, and have opened headquarters in Philadelphia to extend the organization to all other states. This organization further proposes to agitate for the amendment to the present national oleo law, so as to safe-guard more perfectly the dairymen and the butter consumers. It is desired to eliminate from the act the word "KNOWINGLY," so as to obviate the present necessity of proof by the executive officers of guilty knowledge on the part of the oleo dealers; to class and tax uncolored oleo that has been, in any way, made to resemble yellow butter; to require that all cases supported by sufficient evidence brought to the courts for disposal, instead of being settled by executive officers on payment of the tax, whereby the act is made rather a measure principally for the collection of revenue, instead of police regulation for the protection of the public against fraud, which was the real object of its enactment; to require the oleo dealers, in application for a license, to state the true location of their proposed places of business; to limit their right of sale to the place so designated; and to fix penalties for the violation of this requirement and license; to fix the sizes of oleo packages to those of one, three and five pound weight; and to provide for the more perfect tracing of this product from the factory to the consumer.

SECRETARY WILSON AND THE GOOD OLD LAW.

In the heat of the strife for the presidency, the honorable Secretary of Agriculture, James Wilson, patriarch of the dairy interests, rose, and in seconding the nomination of Mr. Flanders, of New York, for the presidency of this association for the ensuing year, brought out in his characteristic manner that in the early days when dairy interests were the principal object of this association, that Mr. Flanders was one of the foremost supporters in the advancement of dairying and the protection of those in that business. The honorable secretary further called the convention's attention to the fact that this convention had been almost entirely given over to food, and that he was sorry to hear so little regarding the good old cow; that we must not forget that this was a dairy association as well as a food association, and that he is just as keenly interested today in the dairy part of this work as he has always been in the past or he now is in the food part of it. These remarks received great applause and certainly will have a stimulating effect, for in the efforts for more pure food legislation the dairy work must go along hand in hand and not follow.

Never before in the history of this association has the honorable secretary graced the convention during its entire session, and he further evidences by his attendance here his great interest in the furtherance of pure and better food for the consuming public.

THE NEWLY CHOSEN PRESIDENT.

George Lovell Flanders, the newly elected president of the association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments, was born in Parishville, St. Lawrence county, State of New York, on February 29th, 1856. He attended the Normal School at Potsdam, New York; and Union College, at Schenectady, New York; and afterwards, the Albany Law School which is a part of Union University. He was the class orator. He entered the employ of the State of New York in 1884 as Deputy Dairy Commissioner, in the interest of pure food products. In 1893, when the Dairy Commission was changed to the Department of Agriculture, Mr. Flanders was made first assistant commissioner, which position he has held ever since, with no changes, except in 1908, he was made counsel to the department, and is now known as the first assistant commissioner and counsel.

Mr. Flanders was a delegate to the first convention of the National Association of Dairy and Food Departments, held at Detroit, Michigan, in 1896, at which time he was elected first vice president, which office he held for three years, the last year of which he was acting president.

In 1901, he was elected president of the "Farmer's National Congress," at Sioux Falls, South Dakota, which office he held for two years, presiding at the meetings held at Macon, Georgia, in 1902, and at Niagara Falls, New York, in 1903. In 1904, he delivered an address before that Congress in St. Louis, Mo., on the question of "Equitable Distribution," the point of which was to encourage instruction along this line in the schools of the country. He was delegate from the State of New York to the several pure food congresses held in Washington, D. C., the object of which was to secure the passage of a national food law, and to promote uniformity in State action along these lines. He has been an active element in securing the passage and enforcement of the New York food law, and stands on the principle that no harmful food should be sold; all harmless food combinations should be so labeled as to give the purchaser information as to the constituents.

That the National and State Laws should, in so far as possible, be uniform in the interest of facilitation of distribution which is in the interest alike of producer, distributor, and consumer, is another of his convictions.

REPORT OF TREASURER FOUST.

Denver, Colorado, August 24, 1909.

To the officers and members of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments:

RETAIL MERCHANTS IN CONVENTION.

The thirteenth annual convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Pennsylvania was held this year in Pottsville, in the heart of the anthracite coal mining industry. The first session was called to order by Mr. Charles P. Hoffman, chairman of the convention committee, who, in a brief address introduced Judge Charles N. Brumm, who delivered a much appreciated address of welcome on behalf of Pottsville and her citizens. The bearer of the greetings of the Retail Merchants' Association of Pottsville was Mr. H. J. Rich. There were two responses to the addresses of welcome, one by George L. Dobie, secretary of the Bradford Business Men's Association, and the other by E. O. Patterson, first vice-president of the Retail Merchants' Association of Philadelphia. Both were appropriate to the occasion and were well received. State President Crow made a short address upon taking the chair, after having been presented with an historic gavel, made from wood taken from the famous field of Gettysburg. At the afternoon session the report of the committee on by-laws was received and the various State associations submitted very interesting reports of their present condition. The time of the morning session of the third day was taken up in the nomination of officers and the appointment of some committees.

At the afternoon session of the second day President Crow submitted his annual report, giving a concise sketch of the work of the year and especially of the results of the efforts to secure certain legislation desired by the association. The report of Secretary Howes was a comprehensive document. It showed an increase of seventeen associations and six individual members during the year. After the reports of the organizers had been heard the convention listened with much pleasure to an address by Elton J. Buckley, Esq., on "Selfishness in Business. This address was largely a plea for the association idea. No wise man "liveth unto himself alone." Wilmer Crow was re-elected president by a practically unanimous vote; Secretary Howes did receive every vote; Treasurer Nelson had all the votes but three. It was decided that the next convention shall be held in Butler, that city winning handily over Gettysburg, Bedford Springs and Lebanon.

Among the resolutions adopted we note: Favoring the adoption of the proposed constitutional amendment authorizing the levy of an income tax; requesting the railroads running into Pottsville to give that town better train service; denouncing Speaker Cannon for removing Congressman Fowler from the chairmanship of the committee on banking and currency; authorizing the appointment of a committee to investigate the practicability of organizing a State horse insurance company for the benefit of members of the association; favoring a large increase in postal rates on newspapers and other second-class matter and the reduction of letter postage to one cent; opposing the extension of the parcels post; urging the Legislature to enact a Sunday closing law similar to that now in force in the State of Ohio; affirming that the proper material for surfacing the public highways is vitrified brick properly laid; favoring the improvement of the waterways of the country by the national government.

The attendance at this meeting of the retail merchants of Pennsylvania was large and the reception given them by the merchants and people of Pottsville was highly appreciated. The representatives of Butler thanked the convention for awarding them next year's convention and promised to give all who visited that city a good time.

DARKNESS AND LIGHT.

The Bulletin's esteemed exchange the "Patagonian Partridge," is wading through deep waters at the present time. The government of Patagonia is not carrying out the provisions of the pure food law of that remote nation according to the convictions of the editor of the "Partridge." As reports go to the government does not know exactly "where it is at." It has issued many contradictory edicts from time to time, shifting its ground frequently and thus making law to-day what was rank heresy yesterday, while the orthodoxy of to-day is likely to become the heterodoxy of to-morrow. The editor has made a desperate effort to keep up with the shifting currents of governmental thought but has not always succeeded. He frankly tells his readers that the situation in which he frequently finds himself is little short of humiliating. Thus he praises the powers that are in this week's issue of his journal only to discover before the publication has been distributed to his subscribers that there has been a change of front at national headquarters and that the thing condemned in his editorial is now the thing allowed and approved. This has happened so often of late that the newspaper man is utterly bewildered and at sea. He is involved in a state of mental darkness as impenetrable as that which covered the land of Egypt in the days of the trouble between the Egyptians and their Hebrew slaves.

Those of us who live in a country where all things are stable and enduring and where the decisions of the food authorities, like the edicts of the Medes and Persians, change not, will naturally find it rather difficult to put ourselves in that newspaper man's place. Where there is no previous experience to guide it is almost impossible to realize the baffling emotions that run through the mind of the writer who wants to keep on friendly terms with a fickle government. A policy that resembles the tortuous windings of a serpent is something the American citizen cannot comprehend, for all things are fixed and established here. In Patagonia the reverse is the case. Hence the difficulty of at once retaining the confidence of the reading public there and at the same time maintaining friendly relations with the authorities.

As an indication of the state of mind of the editor of the "Patagonian Partridge," and of some of the difficulties under which he is obliged to labor, we transfer the following editorial from the columns of that journal to the Bulletin. It is a strange situation in which the editor finds himself:

DARKNESS FOR LIGHT.

Few of us possess expert scientific knowledge. Sometimes when we see how the experts contradict each other, one flatly denying what another warmly affirms, we are disposed to rejoice at the fact that we are only common men with merely ordinary knowledge. It really does cause the plain citizen much serious thought, this apparent inability of the world's learned men to get together concerning almost any topic that comes up. It sometimes makes the unlearned suspect that ignorance with contentment is better than knowledge which is the parent of continued contention about almost every subject of discussion under the sun, and above it, too. We are reasonably sure that two and two make four. Yet an expert mathematician, a follower of the new school, may arise at any day and proceed to utterly demolish the principles we have all along supposed to be as durable as the everlasting hills. In these days of clashing opinions and varying convictions and changing decisions, nobody can be sure of himself or his neighbors or of anything in this world or any other. Dr. Cook says there is no stable ground about the North Pole; it is all changing and fluctuating ice. That seems to be the exact situation concerning certain problems of food and drink. We occupy one viewpoint to-day; to-morrow it has shifted to quite another extreme.

We are greatly puzzled and bewildered, we common, ordinary, non-expert folk. We are sorry our scientific teachers can do little else than perplex us and befog our intellects. When the light of one teacher becomes the darkness of another then we are prone to grasp blindly at any straw that presents itself for we do not know where truth is. And one of the sad and ominous things is that the situation grows worse instead of better with the passing months. Where was once comparatively plain sailing are now crooked and shallow channels and sunken rocks and whirlpools and dangerous currents, which are forever shifting. No two pilots agree concerning the true channel. Each has a separate way and we begin to fear that not one knows the true way. What are we going to do about it? Perhaps the most sensible policy to adopt would be this: Go your own way with open eyes and sound judgment. If necessary expunge from your bill of fare all those manufactured products concerning which such a fierce controversy rages. Fortunately it will not be necessary to cut the bill of fare entirely out. And it may be that the elimination of several articles, such as catsups and jams and jellies, unless they are home-made, would improve the health of the average citizen instead of injuring it.

THE LABEL SHOULD TELL THE TRUTH.

The leading editorial of a recent number of the "American Grocer" deals with tomatoes. The text is furnished by a circular sent out by a packer of tomatoes in a Maryland village. Among the contents of that circular is the declaration that while standard tomatoes are sent from the packer to the retailer at the rate of 67½ cents a dozen and sold over the counter at 8 cents a can, second tomatoes are sold by the canner at 5 cents a dozen less and sold over the counter at 7 cents a can. The first lot contains pure tomatoes; the second lot is one-half water or more, one-half tomatoes or less. The consumer seems to save one cent per can. As a matter of fact the inferior goods cost him at the rate of 14 cents a can. Very frequently after the can has been opened the contents are thrown away. Nothing else can be done. This hurts the canning industry. It likewise injures the business of the retailer.

Commenting upon this condition of affairs the "American Grocer" remarks that what is true of canned tomatoes is equally true of many other articles, put up in packages, the deficiency in weight and quality being protected by the label and its failure to tell the truth. It doesn't read well if the label on a can of tomatoes says: "Contents 35 per cent. of water." Neither is it alluring to the consumer to buy a package of currants thinking it contains sixteen ounces when it has only twelve ounces and the quality poor. To buy a tea worth 20 cents a pound at 50 cents, because sold under some proprietary label is to be grossly cheated. Based on nutritive value and relative cost, there is no end of cheating the thoughtless consumer in many articles of food.

The United States Government examiner thus defines a standard tin of tomatoes: "A tin, filled with ripe tomatoes." It is to be feared, judging from the evidence gathered, that many tins are sold that fail to come half way up to that standard. Packers of tomatoes should be wise enough to realize that to encourage or protect or to practice such gross methods of deception as have been dimly outlined above is to do serious damage to their own trade. One of the largest and most successful manufacturers of pure food products in the world has written a letter to the "American Grocer," from which we quote the following sentences:

"If manufacturers of prepared foods could only see the point and instead of taking the negative position of saying nothing on their labels, come out on every label for canned vegetables and everything else down through the line and state boldly that the contents of the package is put up without the use of any artificial preservative, it would do more to boost sales in the grocery stores than all the publicity that can be put out by organized effort in five years' time."

In Pennsylvania the grocer who sells goods which are untrue to the statements of the label is in danger of prosecution and punishment unless he is in possession of a written guaranty from the manufacturer or wholesaler from whom he purchased the articles certifying that they comply with the requirements of the pure food act. For that reason every retailer should be very careful not only about the quality of his goods, but also to have the guaranty that will protect him in case it be found that anything on his shelves has been misbranded. If he fails in this respect and such a condition of affairs should be found to exist as the "American Grocer" describes, he cannot blame anyone but himself for whatever that may happen.

It should be the aim of the retailer to treat his customers with perfect frankness. Take the case instanced by the Maryland packer of tomatoes. What do you suppose would happen if a retailer were to say something like this to the average housekeeper who patronizes him: "Madam, here are two cans of tomatoes. They cannot be told apart by the outside appearance of the cans. One I can let you have for 7 cents; the other will cost you 8 cents. The cheaper one contains about one-half as many tomatoes as the other; the balance of the contents of the can is water. This 7-cent can will really cost you 14 cents, because there is only half a can of tomatoes and two cans will not go quite as far as the contents of this 8-cent can. I want you to know the exact truth. The cheap goods was put up for customers who want to pay the least possible sum. It is by no means as cheap as the other one."

If the grocer knows the truth about his products he should be willing to tell it to his customers. There is every reason to believe it will enlarge his trade in the end. You know just how you feel when you purchase an article you cannot use. While the dealer from whom you bought may not be to blame, you feel that he ought to have known better and you are likely to deal with him very cautiously in the future or to go elsewhere. But if he takes you into his confidence, telling you the exact truth as he understands it, if you buy the cheaper article you know very well you are to blame alone. If it should turn out that you cannot use your "bargain" you cannot accuse the honest dealer. He did his duty.

The food laws of the State of Pennsylvania positively forbid misbranding. These laws were constructed upon the theory that he who makes a purchase has a right to get the precise article for which he asks. Misbranding is a violation of law, punishable by fine and imprisonment. Retail dealers and manufacturers should aid the Dairy and Food Bureau in the effort to keep the food of the people pure.

GUARDING AGAINST THE FLY.

It is extremely doubtful whether the new Indiana law requiring that all stores and factories in that State shall be provided during the fly season with self-closing screen doors and wire window screens will accomplish the intention of its author. The idea was to protect food products from contamination by the intrusive and dangerous fly. Wherever the fly can be excluded the health of the community will be improved and serious peril from contagious disease will be averted.

Screen doors and windows might prove effective in factories where the employes go to their work at a comparatively early hour and remain in the factory all day. The number of visitors to such an establishment would probably be limited and it would be possible to keep the doors shut the greater part of the time. But we do not see of what use a screen door would be in a largely patronized grocery store. In such a place the doors are constantly being opened and shut and in the course of a day a large number of flies would gain entrance.

The movement against the fly is dictated by sound sanitary science. It is now recognized that this insect is more than a nuisance. It is a positive peril. Many cases of sickness and death have been the result of infection carried about by the fly. As the knowledge of the truth becomes widespread grocers will take greater precautions. That there is room for much improvement in Pennsylvania is evidenced by the careless manner in which many grocers continue to display fruits, berries and vegetables in front of their premises without the slightest protection. We have seen boxes of berries literally covered by flies. This is a violation of the spirit of the present food law.

We believe the only effective protection against the fly is to provide screened coverings for every article of food on sale toward which the fly has a partiality. When doors are continually opening and shutting the storeroom will soon contain hundreds of flies. When goods are exposed on the outside of the store, entirely unprotected, everybody knows what the result is going to be. But if screened receptacles are provided and if berries, vegetables, fruits are kept carefully covered the fly will be barred and the purchasing public will soon take notice to the action of the grocer and will patronize him. Many a sale was lost last summer because the berries on sale were exposed to the depredations of the fly.

CONCERNING THE MILK SUPPLY.

In Pennsylvania we have effective regulations concerning the care and sale of milk. The laws are supplemented in most cities by the edicts of the boards of health and the close supervision of health officers. The result has been very gratifying. While there is still an occasional arrest on the charge of adulterating milk, usually by the addition of water, the general average of the milk supply is high.

This very gratifying state of affairs has been brought about by the willingness of the average dairyman to comply with the provisions of the act of Assembly and the requirements of the local boards of health. In a few instances bitter complaints have been made against the rigidity of the law and the trouble and annoyance caused by the effort to comply, but, as a rule, the Dairy and Food bureau finds its efforts cordially supported by the willing co-operation of dairymen.

The result of the improved regulations and the greater care taken by dairymen has been very gratifying. There has been a considerable reduction in infant mortality. Perhaps in no other year has there been such a favorable showing throughout the State in this respect. The saving of the children alive is an important gain, for most of the lives preserved will be of great value to the State in coming years. It is also a lessening of expense to the working man when he is spared sickness and death among the little ones of his family.

In a few instances typhoid fever has been spread by the infection of milk. In these cases the farmer or dairyman has concealed the fact that typhoid existed in his family, with disastrous results to some of those securing their milk supply from his farm or dairy. It is now the duty of physicians attending typhoid fever patients to make prompt report of the same. This, however, is not always done, especially in the country districts, and as a result fever sometimes rages with great virulence in certain communities. The offending physician is largely responsible for what happens.

So dreadful a disease is typhoid fever that the State should provide a very severe punishment for any physician or other attendant upon the sick who would conceal its existence in a family. Indeed, some who have been the victims of sore bereavement because of such negligence in the past believe that concealment should be made a felony. For it is often the immediate cause of great calamities.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The Kentucky law permitting health officers to administer the tuberculin test to cattle and to destroy cows which do not successfully pass the test, is to have its validity tested, some dairymen of Louisville having brought suit for that purpose. They claim that the statute conflicts with the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States.

In his speech before the Denver convention Past President Judson, of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association, indulged in some incisive criticism of the Sherman anti-trust act. He holds that the law in its present form is a menace to business because it is "the guardian angel of unrestricted competition in its acutest form," and he declares that "unrestricted competition in its acutest form means among nations war and among individuals bankruptcy."

The farmers and gardeners who attend the street markets of Dayton, Ohio, held a mass meeting in the court house not long ago and adopted resolutions asking for the removal of the peddlers who frequent the market, or for the imposition of a license fee of $500 a wagon. They claim that the peddlers and the commission men have the market under their control so that the farmers can sell but a small portion of their produce at retail and are then forced to sell the balance to the peddlers at whatever the latter choose to give.

Should it prove true that the rigid enforcement of laws concerning dairy and food products should raise the price a little the extra security afforded the consumer would more than make up for the advance over former prices. Protection is worth something, after all.

The "Inland Grocer" rises to remark: "Vinegar and acetic acid, spices and oil of spices, were under fire in Denver, along with benzoate of soda and cranberries. If this thing continues long human folks will begin to envy the beasts of the field, who are permitted to judge of their food by sense of smell and taste."

The Retail Grocers' Protective Association of Wheeling, West Virginia, is about to hold its first annual food show and industrial exposition. Beginning October 11 it continues for two weeks.

Manufacturers of extracts held a meeting at Cincinnati recently and organized the Flavoring Extract Manufacturers' Association of the United States. The object is co-operation, the fostering of good will and the enactment and enforcement of just laws.

Even oleomargarine has its martyrs—self-constituted. Thus the "Inland Grocer" tells of a Cincinnati retailer who was some time ago sentenced to the workhouse for selling colored oleomargarine. He does not consider the punishment a disgrace. Quite the contrary. He prints upon his wrapping paper, paper bags and other stationery a cut of himself, in prison garb, from a photograph taken in the workhouse. He has it properly labeled and accompanied by an extract from the judge's sentence.

It is reported that the National Millers' Federation has undertaken to raise the sum of $50,000, to be used in financing a suit to be entered by an Omaha milling firm in the United States court at Des Moines, Iowa, against the Department of Agriculture. The court will be asked to issue an injunction to restrain the enforcement of the rules against bleached flour, on the ground that the Federal authorities have acted without authority.

This is the view of the Omaha Trade Exhibit concerning a much discussed preservative: "Benzoate of soda is probably not injurious to normal, healthy persons when taken in small enough quantities, but since its use is wholly unnecessary in preserving pure, wholesome foods, why employ this doubtful chemical?" That is a view which is shared by an increasingly large number of consumers; and they are acting accordingly.

Even the pestiferous fly has its devoted friends. Thus a correspondent of a country newspaper in Nebraska rises to declare: "More people have been killed by fly poison than were ever harmed in the least by any number of house flies. As a matter of fact it is a common scavenger and comes at the right time of the year to absorb the impurities of the atmosphere and thereby eliminate diseases that would otherwise be prevalent. They can be kept out of the house to a reasonable degree without the use of fly poison or fly killers." Whereupon an inquisitive critic inquires, "But why should flies be kept out of the house to a reasonable degree if they absorb the impurities of the atmosphere and thereby eliminate disease?" Sure enough, why should they?

National Secretary John A. Green has been traveling in England, France, Switzerland and Italy, and concludes, as the result of his observations, that "the grocers of the United States are in a great deal better condition than their European brothers."

We are told that the manufacture of bleached flour will be discontinued by the millers of Nebraska and Iowa, pending the decision of one of the test cases to be brought by the millers.

Following the example of New York, Chicago has ordained that all restaurants and other places in which oleomargarine is served must exhibit placards inscribed, "Oleomargarine used here." The same sentence must be inscribed on menus and on the butterine served the guests.

The Cincinnati Retail Grocers' Association favors the sale of produce and groceries by weight instead of by measure. A movement to that end is receiving its hearty endorsement and support.

The Master Bakers' Association held its annual meeting at Minneapolis this year. It declared its belief that white bread is better than that made from whole wheat. In his annual address the president spoke in favor of free sugar and the lowering of the duty on wheat.

State Food Commissioner Willard Hanson, of Utah, is going after the local adulterators of olive oil. He also warns the millers of the State that hereafter "all mill products must be stenciled with the net weight on the package in figures not less than three-fourths inches in size."

Here is a thought from the "Eli Grocer and General Merchant" which can not be repeated too often in the presence of high officials: "When eminent authorities cannot agree as to whether a drug is harmful to the human body and decisions are made and reversed, the reversal fought and finally endorsed; there is cause to question any decision that may be made."

There is undoubtedly considerable confusion in the public mind concerning the truth about certain articles that have been condemned by the Federal Government and then endorsed. The proper thing for each consumer to do is to run no risks of any sort when they can be avoided. It is a comparatively easy matter to take "the middle of the road" in these little controversies and keep it.

The other members of the family must depend very largely for the actual quality of the foodstuffs they consume upon the vigilance and intelligence of the housekeeper. If she understands her business and pays careful attention to the labels her family will be kept pretty free from the peril of poisoned food.

The twenty-third annual convention of the United Master Butchers' Association was held this year in St. Paul, Minnesota. Among the other resolutions adopted was one favoring the enactment of laws compelling the employers of labor to pay wages weekly. They also resolved in favor of the examination and licensing of all dealers in meat. Another resolution condemned the existing tax of 10 cents a pound on colored oleomargarine.

Advices from Maryland are to the effect that the commission recently appointed to prepare a pure food bill means to do its level best to provide a first-class bill. A sub-committee has been appointed to draw a measure and it will try to frame one which is in complete harmony with the national statutes.

Bad eggs have been receiving special attention from H. E. Barnard, food and drug commissioner of Indiana. He has warned produce dealers against the sale of such eggs and urges all buyers to insist upon having all the eggs they buy subjected to the candle test.

The city of Elmira has a regulation in force for the handling of fruits and vegetables during the heated term that ought to be adopted by every community in the union. It provides that no fruit, vegetables or other foodstuff intended for human food, shall be kept or maintained on the streets of Elmira from May 1 to September 30 of each year unless they are enclosed within a dust-proof glass case or otherwise adequately covered. Nor shall any meat intended for human food be kept or exposed anywhere in the city of Elmira except that it is kept within a cooler or other enclosure or is adequately covered to protect it from dust, dirt, flies and other insects. It costs $10 to violate the regulation.

The Eli Grocer and General Merchant, published in St. Louis and edited by Frank M. Boyd, entered upon its fifth year recently. It is one of the best trade journals in the country and deserves the very gratifying success it has achieved during the four years that have passed since its first number was issued.

The statement is made that a certain firm in Italy has found a process by which the Italian tomatoes are evaporated and put into tablet form. The preparation retains all the flavor and all the natural aroma of the fresh ripe tomato, which is put up without any preservatives or coloring matter whatever and put up in a very practical way.

The federal authorities during the summer seized a barrel of "crystal" eggs at Minneapolis. They say "crystal" eggs are different from anything they have hitherto dealt with. They are eggs denuded of shell, jumbled into a mass and containing—at least this particular barrel did—a boric acid product which renders the eggs poisonous and unfit for food. They had been shipped by a St. Louis firm.

Isn't it an astonishing thing that there are many grocers in Pennsylvania yet who have made no effort whatever to comply with that precautionary section of the new pure food law which admonishes them to secure guaranties from the jobbers or manufacturers from whom they purchase their supplies? They have been admonished again and again of the risks they run if they undertake to sell without the guarantee, but some of them seem unwilling to learn caution. The state does not wish to prosecute the retailer. It gives him every opportunity to protect himself. Why does he decline to avail himself of the protection offered?

When one refuses to heed the mandates of the law after having been repeatedly warned concerning its provisions, whom shall one blame if trouble come? He who is repeatedly told of the peril that confronts him deserves little sympathy if he recklessly ignores the warning and walks right into the heart of danger. The retailer who comes in collision with the act of 1909 must blame himself alone.

The crusade against the familiar little fly during the summer did not result in his extermination. Indeed, it may be questioned whether his numbers decreased greatly. Nevertheless the matter has been fairly started and what was omitted in 1909 will occur in some other year.

The enforcement of the laws relating to food and beverages is an imperative duty. It may not be a pleasant task, but nothing the officers can do will avail to save a careless or a wilful offender against the statutes.

Many citizens, disgusted by the varying decisions and the conflicting testimony given concerning chemical preservatives have solved the problem for themselves by cutting off their bill of fare catsup, jellies, jams and all other products in which the notorious benzoate of soda is used. They believe that is the course of wisdom and they follow it cheerfully.

MACVEAGH'S ATTACK ON THE PURE FOOD POLICY.

Under the foregoing title the St. Paul Pioneer Press indulges in some rather warm remarks concerning a subject in which the butter makers of Pennsylvania are very much interested. It declares that the oleomargarine men have found in Secretary MacVeagh, of the Treasury Department, a leader who, as they hope, is to go forth conquering and to conquer the makers of honest butter. He has already recommended to Congress a reduction of the tax to a pitiful two cents a pound on colored oleomargarine—a figure which would put no restraint whatever on the fraudulent manufacture or sale of this commodity as and for butter.

"It took long years of strenuous endeavor, organization and outlay for the butter makers to win from Congress the enactment of the law which compelled oleo men either to sell it honestly as oleo, or to pay a tax of ten cents a pound for the privilege of coloring it in imitation of yellow butter. A further long, anxious period intervened while the law was being tested in the courts. It stood the test; and the first victory was won for legislation favoring absolute honesty in the manufacture and vending of foods as opposed to the 'commercial honesty' which looked upon tricks as an admissible factor in all trades.

"The pure food and meat inspection laws of the Roosevelt era could never have been passed but for the 'campaign of education' carried on in behalf of pure butter. For the present administration to connive at the substantial restoration to oleo men of the privilege of selling their product as butter, will be to open the way to an utter abandonment of another of the Roosevelt policies and for the surrender of our markets again to the venders of all sorts of spurious and poisonous foods.

"Here is a consideration which outweighs even the loss and wrong which will be inflicted on the butter-making industry of Minnesota and other states by the readmission of a fraudulent article in competition with the golden product of our dairies. President Taft may well pause before he sanctions the advocacy, by a member of his cabinet, of a backward step in pure food legislation. Such a step would mark, not only the beginning of disaster to a great industrial interest, but of an early decay in the regenerative processes that, under Roosevelt's leadership, promised so much for the business world of America."

Our northwestern contemporary is quite right about the mischievous results that would flow from the adoption of the plan suggested by Secretary MacVeagh. It must also be conceded that the president is responsible for the actions of his constitutional advisors so long as he does not let the country understand that he is on the other side. It may be, however, that President Taft has had his mind occupied with other things since his induction into office and that when the matter is brought directly to his attention he will settle down on the side of the butter makers. At all events it is too soon to get excited and to apprehend such legislation as will overturn the dairy interests and place oleomargarine in the homes of the land as a substitute for butter, the consumer believing it to be butter.

In any event this Bulletin has not the slightest fear concerning the ultimate result. Even if the president were to join his Secretary of the Treasury in urging Congress to amend the Grout act so as to reduce the federal tax on colored oleomargarine from ten to two cents per pound—a most unlikely supposition—we do not believe a majority of the Congress could be persuaded to vote for the proposed reduction. There are too many farmers in this country, too many dairymen to make it probable that such obnoxious legislation could receive the assent of a majority in either house, let alone both.

The dairymen of Pennsylvania have already uttered their emphatic protest against the contemplated change. Senator Penrose, always the devoted champion of the interests of the state's dairies and farms, has already taken his stand against such radical changes in the law as would bring oleomargarine into keen competition with genuine butter and we are confident that his colleague, Senator Oliver occupies the same platform. The members of Congress from this state are champions of the farming and dairy interests and their attitude is symptomatic of the sentiments of their colleagues from a majority of the states. Such a proposition would receive no aid except in a few isolated sections where the oleomargarine industry is of more importance than the dairy industry.

Under the circumstances the Bulletin advises the friends of real butter to keep their eyes and ears open but to permit no rumors to disturb them. The men who are styling their product "the poor man's butter" lack the sympathy of the poor man, of the man who is moderately well off and of those who are very comfortably established. There is little public spirit manifested in favor of their proposition and the present Congress will certainly give it a frigid reception should Mr. MacVeagh conclude to persist in his very unwise and unpopular policy of aiding the oleo people at the expense of the producers of genuine butter.

OLEOMARGARINE AND BUTTER.

This Bulletin has repeatedly declared that oleomargarine may be lawfully sold in the state of Pennsylvania so long as it appears in its own proper shape and so long as it is sold under its own name. The law says it and the law is right. Whatever harsh things have been said about oleomargarine in this Bulletin have been said concerning it as a counterfeit butter. That is to say, the animadversions of the Bulletin have been provoked by the persistent efforts of unscrupulous dealers to defy the law of the state and deceive the consumer. Nothing has ever been said in condemnation of the sale of this product when it appears in its own proper form. But the Bulletin has felt, and continues to feel, that the active efforts of interested parties to secure the reduction of the tax on colored oleomargarine from ten cents a pound to two was due to the knowledge that a great majority of the people of this country prefer butter to oleomargarine. The whole trend of national and state food laws during the last few years has been against deception in any form. Even harmless deception is contrary to law. Any article that is misbranded cannot be lawfully sold even though the adulteration consist of entirely harmless substances. The law was framed upon the theory that the consumer has a right to be informed of the exact nature and contents of the goods he is buying. The opposition of the Bulletin is not to oleomargarine as such, as a study of its files will prove, but to oleomargarine colored as butter and put upon the market as butter. It is true we have said that the advantage is all with butter when the rival products face each other in their true colors, but that is a fact of everyday experience and not a bit of prejudice upon the part of the Bulletin. If it were not so there would be little effort upon the part of certain dealers in colored oleomargarine to convince buyers that they were getting genuine butter when they were really purchasing a substitute. We do not think the Bulletin has erred in speaking against the effort to deceive the public. But we would rather err on that side than on the other. Each product should stand upon its own merits. If butter makers were to flood the oleomargarine market with butter, claiming that it was genuine oleomargarine, we would speak against their effort to deceive. For we are firmly persuaded that the consumer who is partial to oleomargarine has an equal right to be served with exactly what he wants with the lover of country butter. Each to his own taste and no quarter for the deceiver, should be the universal motto.

STATE INSPECTION OF MEAT.

Among the interesting and valuable papers read before the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments, at its recent Denver meeting, none was more timely than the address prepared by Miss Alice Lakey, chairman of the Food Committee of the National Consumers' League, and read by Miss Florence Kelley, general secretary of that body. It dealt with the "Need of State Laws to Protect the Consumers' Meat Supply," and kept very close to the text all the way through. The address gives the history of legislation looking toward inspection, both in state and nation, and shows quite conclusively that the national inspectors are not strong enough to thoroughly inspect all the meat that is offered for interstate commerce, while they have no authority whatever over those butchers and other venders of meat who do not do an interstate business.

Miss Lakey is good enough to award Pennsylvania credit as being first in the field with an inspection act and she urges other states to imitate that excellent example. It is certainly a fact that the quality of the meat sold to the people of this commonwealth has greatly improved. There has likewise been a radical change for the better in the sanitary condition of butcher shops and meat stores. Most of the glaring evils that worked together to produce the sentiment which culminated in the enactment of the meat inspection act have disappeared and the people of the state are justly proud of the efficiency of the men who are charged with the enforcement of this act.

Miss Lakey urges the other states of the union to follow the worthy example set by Pennsylvania—that is, the other states that have not yet taken any action in this direction. Some of the facts she produces are of a character to create the impression that legislation is urgently needed. Some of the states have very singular provisions on their statute books concerning the slaughter of animals, especially those that are sick at the time. There are also grave defects in the acts which strive to protect the people from diseased meat. The paper prepared by Miss Lakey will make an admirable missionary tract in the hands of those who are thoroughly in earnest in this matter and citizens of the states yet in the background should procure copies of it and persuade their newspapers to make use of the pungent facts it contains for the purpose of creating an enlightened and resolute public sentiment. The evils that exist in some states are very serious. They have certainly done harm and should be made an end of at the earliest possible moment. The test of a state's civilization lies in the efficiency with which it cares for its people.

HONESTY AMONG MANUFACTURERS.

James Sorensen, of Maple Plain, Minnesota, who conducts the very interesting department on "Practical Butter-Making" in the Dairy Record, speaks some plain words concerning honesty in the business of making butter. Among other things he thinks that none of the virtues a good butter-maker should possess exceeds in importance the virtue of honesty. He goes on to declare that he doesn't believe it is possible for any man to be a strictly good butter-maker unless he is strictly honest. First of all, a butter-maker should be honest with himself; that is, he should strive to do that which is entirely right. And he goes on to give various examples of the mistakes made by men who are not honest with themselves, much less with their fellow citizens.

What Mr. Sorensen says concerning butter-making and butter-makers is quite as true about other occupations. It is the conviction of this Bulletin, and we suspect of most reflecting people, that those engaged in the manufacture of the food of the people should be scrupulously honest. There is nothing of more importance than the preparation of food products. The consumer is not able to examine, even in a superficial way, every article he purchases for his table. He hasn't the time to do so, and if he had an abundance of time he wouldn't be able to make any headway. He does not own the outfit of a chemist and he couldn't make the analysis if he did own it. There is nothing left him but to trust his grocer and there is nothing left the grocer but to trust the manufacturer.

Thus it comes around to the manufacturer at last. He has in his hands the health of his countrymen. He cannot keep a good conscience unless he is honest. For he cannot send out adulterated food, or food made out of refuse matter, without the consciousness that he is wronging innocent persons who are placing implicit trust in his integrity. And he must be a very bad man if he can betray that popular trust and feel no qualms of conscience. There cannot be many such persons engaged in the business of furnishing the nation's food. There are some; yes. But they are being found out quite rapidly and they are gradually but surely receiving their reward here on earth. So it comes at last to this: The butter-maker ought to be honest, but so should the catsup maker and the jelly maker and the maker of sausages and the manufacturer of oleomargarine and all who in any way have to do with the food of the country. And that is what the pure food laws are gradually but surely bringing to pass.

THE MISBRANDING OF CERTAIN EXTRACTS.

The board of food and drug inspection at Washington has issued a bulletin in connection with recent misbranding of lemon, raspberry and strawberry extracts in which the following official notice of judgment is made:

"In accordance with the provisions of section 4 of the Food and Drugs act of June 30, 1906, and of regulation 6 of the rules and regulations for the enforcement of the act, notice is given that on the 21st day of January, 1909, in the district court of the United States for the District of Oregon, in a prosecution by the United States against the Dwight-Edwards Company, a corporation of Portland, Oregon, for violations of section 2 of the aforesaid act in the shipment and delivery for shipment from Oregon to Idaho and Montana of three certain articles of food labeled, 'Pine Bur Flavoring Extract, Lemon,' 'Edwards' Dependable Pure Extract Raspberry,' and 'Edwards' Dependable Pure Extract Strawberry,' which were misbranded within the meaning of section 8 of the aforesaid act, as hereinafter stated, the said Dwight-Edwards Company having entered a plea of guilty, the court imposed upon it a fine of $25 for each of the three offenses.

The bulletin goes on to say that the "Pine Bur Flavoring Extract" was found to contain 1.62 per cent. of oil of lemon, 3.38 per cent. less than the normal and recognized lemon extract, a sample having been purchased by an inspector of the United States Department of Agriculture and analyzed in the bureau of chemistry of that department. The samples of the "Edwards' Dependable Pure Extract Raspberry," and "Edwards' Dependable Pure Extract Strawberry" which were purchased and analyzed were found to be an imitation flavor, artificially colored. The company that manufactured the aforementioned extracts was given an opportunity to show if any error had been made in the analysis, but it failed to take advantage of the offer and at a later stage in the proceedings, as recited in the first paragraph of this article, plead guilty and was fined a total of $75.

We are pleased to observe that the federal authorities are at work enforcing the federal law. It is amazing that some manufacturers and dealers will persist in violating the law. It seems scarcely probable that those who are caught and punished find the business of ignoring law profitable and comparatively few are likely to escape in the future. In this business of manufacturing extracts and other articles "honesty is the best policy," as it is in other occupations. Some day nearly everybody will realize the truth of this statement.

A CONSTANTLY IMPROVING OUTLOOK.

Whatever may be the final result of the year's work concerning pure food matters it is at least very encouraging to observe the constantly enlarging interest the people of the country are taking in the matter. Not many years ago this question of the things that men and women and the little people eat very seldom engaged the attention of anybody but a few professional folks, while the newspapers almost wholly ignored the matter. Any other topic was considered of more importance.

There has been a marvelous change within recent years. The country contains a large number of ably edited trade journals, each number of which furnishes a great deal of valuable matter concerning the qualities of various articles of food, comments upon the meaning and value of the dairy and food laws of the several states, together with narratives of the doings of those officers whose duty it is to see that the federal and the State laws are honestly and impartially enforced. On the whole, it is a body of literature of the highest value. It has nearly all sprung into existence during the last few years.

Another very interesting circumstance is to be found in the fact that manufacturers and retailers are also taking a lively interest in this matter. Some are kicking against the pricks, but the majority recognize that the movement for better and purer food which started among the people some years ago had a good foundation. They are likewise convinced that the chap who endeavors to withstand the swelling tide is just about as foolish as was King Canute (or Knut) when he undertook to stop the advance of the ocean tide.

The State Dairy and Food Bureaus have received valuable assistance from the manufacturers and the retailers in many instances, while the trade press, with a few exceptions, cannot be praised too highly for its timely and sincere support of just laws.

Even more important, the agitation in favor of pure food, pure beverages and pure drugs has reached thousands of the home of our country. The housekeepers have begun to take notice. They have observed the beneficial results of such pure food regulations as have been enforced and are anxious to improve upon the past. The condition of affairs in our own State, while by no means ideal, is very much better than it was a few years ago and is constantly improving. Men and women have better health; the life of a generation is getting longer. The people will never consent to take the back track on the pure food proposition.

THE PRICE OF FOOD PRODUCTS.

While the Bulletin recognizes that occasions may arise when the head of the family is compelled to economize and must, therefore, purchase cheaper goods than his more wealthy neighbor can afford, it is also convinced that every American family is entitled to the best and it believes that liberal wages should be awarded an honest and fruitful day's work. It fears that some persons seek the cheapest goods in the market, not because they are obliged to do so, but from a desire to live well within their income. They are so anxious to lay up something for a rainy day that they do themselves and the members of their families real harm by their refusal to purchase the best grades of food. This is an American failing. It came into vogue many years ago and is still widespread. It is the spirit which crowds many of the department stores with bargain hunters. It is the conviction that a thing which does not cost much money is a great bargain.

It was this urgency after cheapness which led to the extensive adulteration of food products in times past. There was a perfect mania after bargains. Retail dealers urged manufacturers or jobbers to find them something "just as good" as the high-priced articles which could be sold at a much lower rate and still at a profit. Many manufacturers yielded to this continued clamor. They felt that they were compelled to do something to satisfy the clamor of their patrons who in turn were pressed to the wall by the demands of their customers for goods of which they could get a large supply for a small price. The matter of quality was not taken into consideration. It was not suggested to the consumer that he made a blunder by putting cheapness above quality; by insisting upon cheapness, in fact, and raising no question of quality. It was some years before the situation became so desperate that men and women began to agitate for pure food laws. They realized that they were not getting the sort of food they needed.

We are told now that the restrictions and requirements of the laws regulating the beverages and the food supply of the people are so irksome and so harassing that they necessitate an increase in prices. To which it may be responded that the first essential in the preparation of human food is that it shall be genuine. If one must pay a little more for a pure food than for its inferior imitation one should not complain, since the difference in price is apparent only, the more expensive article being really the cheapest. Unreasonable prices should be opposed, but no one should object to giving the honest manufacturer or dealer a living profit on a valuable and healthful article.

THE MILK SUPPLY AND ITS PERILS.

The dairymen of Pennsylvania have been making a very good record during the last few years. Here and there an exception merely proves the rule. The extra care taken by the dairyman and the increasing knowledge of his patrons have done much to reduce the chances of disease and the death rate has been growing lower and lower. This is especially true of little children. It is still true that the infant mortality is entirely too high but it is not nearly so bad, as a rule, as it used to be. In most of the cities of the State the infant mortality was exceptionally low. The babies were fed on pure milk and they were vigorous enough to withstand the debilitating effects of the hot weather. In connection with this it must not be forgotten that many mothers have learned that the health and possibly the life of the infant largely depends upon the care of it. The improvement which has begun is likely to continue with the best of results. It will be a great day for the State when its infant death rate has been reduced to a normal figure.

Now and then a dairyman is responsible for the appearance of typhoid fever in a community. Perhaps it would be better to say that the physician who attended the case of fever in the dairyman's family is responsible. If he had reported the matter to the proper authorities of the district and if he had given the dairyman proper instruction in regard to the discharges from the patient and their sanitary disposal, nothing serious would have occurred. We recall at this moment two small epidemics of typhoid fever which appeared in one of the cities of this State in successive years. In each instance the attending physician maintained silence concerning the matter and said nothing to the milkman. Later on, when the fever appeared, the health authorities set on foot an investigation which soon traced the sickness to the milk supply and at a later period they learned the facts which had led to the infection of the milk. In one instance several deaths followed the outbreak of the fever; in the second instance the disease did not appear in such virulent form.

All this shows that while our milkmen are doing splendidly and deserve much credit for the care they have taken to furnish their patrons with a pure and healthful article, it remains true that eternal vigilance is the price of security. Physicians should be thoughtful enough of the health of the community to promptly report all cases of contagious or infectious disease occurring anywhere and especially in the family of a milkman and the latter should cease supplying milk the moment he is informed that he is likely to carry death to his customers unless he does.

SOME DEADLY SOFT DRINKS.

The Pittsburg Leader recently contained a long article concerning the baleful effect of many of the so-called soft drinks sold at the soda fountains of this and other states. Basing its observations not only upon actual experience, but also upon certain statements sent out by the federal government, it declares that many of these drinks are very dangerous. The ordinary soda water, of course, contains nothing of a dangerous quality. It is the other preparations that are warranted to create a feeling of exhilaration, to remove the evidence of fatigue, to brighten the intellectual faculties that are dangerous.

The Leader makes the positive declaration that some of these "soft" drinks contain as a base an insidious drug. It is this drug which produces the pleasant effect described in the advertisements, but it likewise creates an appetite which draws the customer back to the drug store or fruit store where it is sold at inevitably shortening intervals. Little children as well as their parents are drawn within the influence of this deadly drug and in course of time are wrecked in body and mind. - Cocaine is often used in these drinks, we are told. Now cocaine is one of the most terrible of drugs. The man, woman or child who falls under its influence is usually doomed. It is far more malevolent in its effect upon the body and the brain of its victim than morphine.

As already stated the bureau of chemistry of the United States government has issued a warning to the public to beware of certain sorts of so-called soft drinks, that is to say, those containing health-destroying ingredients. To show that such warning does not come too soon or without sufficient provocation, the statement is made that a recent analysis of certain such beverages by government chemists has disclosed the presence of the deadly alkaloid cocaine in no fewer than thirty-nine of them. It is said that many of these thirty-nine are sold at soda fountains all over the United States. The Leader indulges in several columns of statements concerning the peril which hovers about the habitual frequenter of the soda fountain. It claims to have investigated the matter and to have facts for every one of the terrible accusations it makes.

As already said, plain soda water, obtained at a reputable fountain, or the ordinary drinks dispensed at a fountain, will harm no one in the sense of creating an insatiable appetite. But some of the most popular beverages will, and they should be avoided. The truth is that the less one indulges the soda fountain habit the safer and the healthier one is likely to be.

THE CHANGING YEARS.

There are a great many subjects of discussion among the people of the country which are supposed to possess much interest. Some of these topics are physical, some intellectual, some moral and some religious. Many possess no real importance. A passing wave of excitement draws momentary attention to them and for a longer or shorter period they occupy the front of the stage. Others are of more value. They hold public attention for a longer period. The discussion concerning them does good.

Of all purely physical problems none is of more importance than that which deals with the food of a people. In the days of our great-grandparents this was a very simple matter. But the rapid increase in population, the drawing together of distant parts of the republic by hands of steel, the multiplication of large cities, the ease and facility of communication between widely separated sections, all these things and others not mentioned, have wrought a mighty change in the manner of preparing food and in putting it up for the use of consumers.

Large manufacturing concerns having for their exclusive business the preparation of food products were unknown. Outside the large cities each family provided the greater part of its own living or purchased from the nearby farmers. The housewife put up her jellies and jams. Applebutter boilings were numerous and were the occasion of frolics in which the greater part of the community participated. Each family had a couple of hogs, as a rule. If the head of the family did not care to be bothered with the care of the porkers he had little trouble in purchasing of a neighboring farmer at moderate rates. Usually he bought a quarter or a half of beef also. In the smaller towns no regular butcher plied his trade. Very little fresh meat was accessible except in the autumn or early winter.

All this has been changed, greatly changed, as the older readers of the Bulletin who are able to recall the years before the great Civil War well know. The primitive methods have vanished. The boilings and the other frolics have ceased, except in isolated places. Great establishments have taken in hand the business of supplying the food products of the country. The cry for cheapness influenced manufacturers to resort to various experiments for the purpose of cheapening their output. It was by no means entirely the fault of the manufacturers. But the abuse of foods produced a demand for the pure food laws now existing in the nation and many of the states. All of which has raised many questions, none of which will stay until it is settled right.

ENTITLED TO COMPLETE PROTECTION.

The people of this country are obliged to eat the food provided by their grocers or dairymen. Most of them are entirely too busy to bother much about the quality of the products they get at the grocery or from other dealers. They are absorbed in their work and they have confidence in the dealer. They do not give a great deal of attention to the controversy that has been going on in relation to food-stuffs. True, they concern themselves more about this matter now than they did a dozen years ago, but they have other things to think about and take what is put before them without asking troublesome questions. And then again, many of the consumers know nothing whatever about the use of chemicals or their effect upon the human system. They are not posted on chemistry and must depend upon the agent of the State or others for guidance in the matter of what they eat and what they drink. Many of them are really ignorant. Nearly all who were born here and many who came from abroad are able to read and write, but all cannot be said to be educated. Some thousands are quite illiterate. It would be impossible for them to read labels or to understand them if they could. What they know about food is a very little thing compared with the vast amount of their ignorance. You know we have them here, even if this is the most enlightened country on the planet.

This Bulletin contends that these people are entitled to protection. It is the duty of manufacturers of food products to be honest with them. The manufacturers are put on honor in cases like this. And we are glad to believe that many recognize the obligation and act accordingly. They are honorable men, proud of the good name they have acquired with the passing of the years and proud of the quality of the goods they manufacture. Such men take good care of their patrons and will continue to do so during the coming years without reference to the nature of the national or state statutes dealing with food products and regardless of the intellectual calibre of their ultimate customers. If there were no other sort of manufacturers or no retailers who knowingly undertake to adulterate many articles of household consumption there would be no need for laws to protect the consumer. Neither the nation nor the State would be compelled to enact a body of legislation and appoint officers whose duty it is to carry those laws into effect. As the situation stands, however, laws and officers must exist and the latter must be vigilant, unwavering and impartial in the discharge of their duty. Until men and women become perfect the law and its agents must protect the weak and the ignorant from the depredations of the unscrupulous.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Persist in carefully examining the label on the food products purchased for the use of your family.

The vigilant and wideawake housekeeper who insists upon having nothing but the best for her husband and children is the pure food law's best and most useful friend.

Moderate eating of food that contains nothing that is injurious to the human stomach will preserve the health and prolong the life. Immoderate eating is more dangerous than some diseases.

In this life the wise man accepts the inevitable in food regulations with whatever tranquility he can muster. He is responsible for his own conduct alone; he is not the government's keeper.

The business of selling rotten eggs in bulk and in liquid form seems to have been banished from Pennsylvania only to appear in certain other states. It should be spoken and legislated against everywhere. Nobody with a particle of conscience would knowingly engage in such a horrible occupation.

The western section of the State has always had more violators of the pure food laws of the Commonwealth than the other parts for the reason that it has been more difficult to bring offenders to justice. For a considerable time public sentiment seemed to be actually on the side of the lawless, but the situation is improving rapidly now.

Are there any grocers in the State who carelessly neglect to secure proper guaranties from the jobbers or manufacturers from whom purchases are made, and who are willing to run the risks involved in the sale of adulterated or misbranded goods, within the meaning of the act of Assembly? If such there are, let them refrain from upbraiding the law or its officers when they get into trouble. For there will be nobody to blame but themselves.

The dealer who is polite to all his customers, attentive to their wants and anxious to treat the poorest with the same civility he accords to the wealthy is on the right track. He is likely to win the friendship and confidence of the entire community, thus securing a constantly widening patronage and winning the best sort of success—one that will leave no sting behind.

The National Food Magazine calls attention to the significant fact that many persons are convinced "that chemicals are not necessary to preserve food when perfect sanitation prevails, that they are drugs, fit only for medicinal purposes and should not be administered except by competent physicians."

Some of us used to think there was no food more delicious or more healthful than good milk, fresh from the cow. Nor have we been cured of that notion yet, no matter what the theories brought by the advancing years.

After it has received certain information from physicians and other competent authorities concerning the actual effect of food for infants and invalids, The National Bureau of Chemistry proposes to undertake a careful analysis of all such foods now on the market for the purpose of determining whether they contain any harmful ingredients, or whether extravagant and untruthful claims are made in the labels. The results of this investigation will be awaited with great interest.

No prudent person will take any of the "headache" powders put up by manufacturers and sold in many of the drug stores. When afflicted by headache the proper plan to pursue is to consult the family physician. The average headache powder or tablet is a dangerous drug and should be avoided by all who do not wish to die before their time.

The federal authorities are doing a very good work by arresting and fining dealers in sham medicines. To rid the country of these things is to render a needed public service.

A German physician says that buttermilk is a great blessing to sufferers from gout. If anyone has a troublesome joint he should drink all the buttermilk he can relish whenever and wherever he can, but it should be freshly churned and wholesome.

In Massachusetts ninety-two of the women's clubs are working at pure food or civic problems. When all the women of a state are concerned about the food their families consume there will be a wonderful improvement in the situation.

The pure food inspector of Tennessee has appointed three of the leading women of Nashville assistant food inspectors.

The State Association of women's clubs in Colorado is said to be intensely interested in the pure food question and means to work for the ending of all chemical preservatives in food.

Compactly and truthfully the National Food Magazine puts it, thus: "Healthy cows, cleanly surroundings, sanitary dairies, prompt delivery and no preservatives, are the conditions that every community should strive for in an endeavor to insure an acceptable and healthy milk supply."

Madame Housekeeper, look carefully for the label on the articles of food you buy. Look carefully, for some of the inscriptions are in insignificant letters and near the bottom of the container. It is only by reading labels and acting upon the knowledge obtained that the households of the land can insure themselves pure and uncontaminated food.

A Chinese gardener living at Fresno, California, who formerly worked for Luther Burbank, the plant wizard, claims to have succeeded in producing an odorless onion. If his claim is backed by facts the chap's fortune is made.

Word comes of an up-to-date grocer out in the State of Indiana who determined last summer to keep only sanitary goods if his customers would sustain him. Perishable goods were kept away from dust and flies and fruit and vegetables were no longer displayed. We shall anxiously await the result of this public-spirited dealer's experiment.

The Dairy Record, Minneapolis, Minn., observes that the Denver convention of the Dairy and Food Commissioners was quite animated, so far as food topics were concerned. After Secretary Wilson reminded them that they were neglecting the "good old cow," they dropped the benzoate of soda and other food problems and resolved against the proposed repeal of the oleomargarine law and asked Congress to strengthen the existing law by a clearer definition of the word "color" as now used in the law.

One wise confectioner kept the inquisitive and dangerous fly out of his place of business during the summer by keeping scattered about the place a plentiful supply of mignonette. The flies dislike the odor of the plant and will not stay where it is. This confectioner's plan should not be hard to follow next time the flies become troublesome.

A Detroit sculptor used a ton of butter in making a farm scene for exhibition at the Michigan State Fair. The scene consisted of a house and barn, trees, cows, fowls, etc.

Co-operation between the vender and the consumer for the purpose of securing the best possible food products will be the usual thing in course of time. It will be greatly to the advantage of both.

For the last two years the Tennessee Experiment Station and the Dairy Division of the Department of Agriculture have joined hands for the purpose of assisting dairy farmers in growing and preparing dairy rations, the breeding and selection of milk cows, the testing of milk and the keeping of monthly and yearly records, as well as in adopting such sanitary methods in the keeping of their cows and the handling of their dairy products as will command the very best prices for milk and butter.

We are well acquainted with a large number of mechanics and with some laborers. They are not enthused over the action of the manufacturers of oleomargarine in describing it as "the poor man's butter," and demanding that the tax on colored oleomargarine be reduced to a nominal sum. The workingman is not feeling kindly toward those who are trying to make capital at their expense.

The individual who peddles oleomargarine about the country palming it off upon unsuspecting persons for pure yellow butter is a criminal and deserves no sympathy when he finds himself in the grasp of the law. He is on a level with any other sharper or swindler. He intentionally deceives his confiding customers in order to put money in his pocket.

The law permits the sale of oleomargarine when no attempt is made to deceive the purchaser. So long as it is sold under its own name and exactly for what it is, neither the national nor the state government will interfere. Its sale under such conditions is a legitimate business transaction. If all dealers were honest enough to do that there would be no prosecutions. Nor would anybody be cheated.

There are a great many interesting and difficult problems now before the people of the United States, all clamoring for solution. Some have been solved, we are told, but we observe they are still clamoring. It is a fact which some forget that no question is solved until the correct answer has been obtained.

Too much attention cannot be paid to the cow. It is true that some enterprising individuals claim to have discovered satisfactory substitutes for a portion of her products, but the consumer does not share that belief. The cow deserves the protection of the State so that she may not be forced to enter into an unfair and unequal competition with substitutes and imitations. There is every reason to believe that Congress will listen to no proposition which proposes to relegate genuine butter to the shelf.

Out in Minnesota the pure food authorities have been making the situation decidedly interesting for farmers who sell cream which is unfit for food.

Dairymen and others who deal in milk are advised to view with suspicion all patent preservatives offered them by dealers in such articles. The laws of this Commonwealth are rather severe on those who undertake to preserve milk.

In Rockford, Ill., during the past summer all the merchants who made displays of fruits and vegetables in front of their places of business were compelled to cover them over with screens or to have the baskets or barrels in which the goods were kept tightly covered so as to prevent flies or insects getting at them. Eventually that rule will be in effect in every portion of the country.

In various sections of the country consumers are complaining that the dealers from whom they make purchases do not always give honest weight. That is another evil under the sun for which a remedy must be found.

Dealers in canned goods, such as corn or succotash who use the word "cream" on the label of the goods claim that this word does not mean that cream is actually used in the preparation of the goods for market, as the agents of the government have supposed. They use it, they affirm, simply to show the quality of the goods. And they insist that they are not violating law.

Have you secured the proper guaranty from the manufacturer or wholesaler from whom you purchased the goods on sale in your store, Mr. Retailer? If you have not do you not know that you are liable, if the goods be found to be impure or misbranded or in any other way, to violate the act of Assembly?

The manufacturers of bleached flour, comprising a decided majority of the millers of the country, unless reports are false, are very much opposed to the enforcement of the adverse decision of the national authorities concerning their product. They are trying to secure the appointment of a reference board to consider and investigate the matter and hope, if successful, to have as good fortune as the benzoate of soda people.

The grocer who makes his place look clean and attractive is certain to win the confidence of housekeepers who are attracted by cleanliness and order in the management of a grocery equally with the control of a house.

Many grocers are favorable to the idea of selling all articles by weight and in several of the states bills to that effect have been brought before the legislature. When that comes about some caution will have to be exercised to prevent the occurrence of such incidents as that related by the retail dealer who purchased a bag of potatoes billed to him as weighing 112 pounds and found that it contained fourteen pounds of dirt.

The grocers of New York City were recently considerably stirred up by the publication in one of that city's newspapers of a statement to the effect that the grocers and vegetable men there expected to make from 50 to 200 per cent. They deny that such is the case and claim that their profits are decidedly moderate. Great risks are run in every branch of their business and there is much loss in fruit and vegetables.

Here is a sentence from the pen of Editor Elton J. Buckley, of the Grocery World that contains a great deal of truth that is often unrecognized: "The merchant who is afraid to ask a price—who fears to sell the best because 'my trade would never pay the price,' who hesitates to sell the best grade because a competitor is selling a poorer grade at a lower price, on the ground that the people wouldn't know the difference and would think he was high—is always the merchant who grubs along on the outskirts of success."

The wise dealer has a standing order with his patrons to complain when they get an inferior article or when anything goes contrary to their notions of the fitness of things. When he knows what his customers are thinking about, or when he is informed concerning any grievance they may be brooding over the chances are that he will be able to right the wrong and keep their friendship and their trade. But if they are displeased and he knows nothing about it he is likely to lose them.

According to the National Canner reports coming in from all the states show a remarkable decrease in the production of tomatoes. It goes on to tell its readers that the only state producing a good crop from a reduced acreage is Utah and her pack will not affect the situation one way or the other. And yet the same week the foregoing was put out other trade journals reports tomatoes specially plenty and prices correspondingly low.

The best food products are always the cheapest in the end. And they are pretty certain to be the healthiest, also.

Missouri has recently put in force a new law regulating bakeries. It contains very stringent sanitary provisions and provides for compulsory Sunday closing. Everything about the place is to be kept in perfect sanitary condition. The State Factory Inspector is required to inspect each bakeshop at least once each year and he is required to enforce all the provisions of the law.

Representatives of the American Feed Manufacturers' Association recently held a meeting in the city of Washington for the purpose of coming face to face with Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, and getting some authoritative statements concerning the meaning of certain provisions of the federal food and drugs act. Dr. Wiley, head of the Bureau of Chemistry, presided and Secretary Wilson attended the meeting. The feed manufacturers are hoping for excellent results.

S. H. Baer, secretary of the Flavoring Extract Manufacturers' Association, declares that his association is one of the very few trade organizations formed for the purpose of pushing and boosting the national pure food law. He says: "The flavoring extract manufacturers not only favor the national pure food bill, but we will fight to have every state in the country adopt that bill." That should be highly gratifying to the federal authorities.

Kansas city is rigidly enforcing her ordinance prohibiting the display of fruits and vegetables on sidewalks. It cost one dealer $25 to find out that the ordinance was not intended as a joke.

Dairy and Food Commissioner French, of Minnesota, has issued a bulletin in which he praises the manufacturers of canned goods in that state for the care they exercise in the preparation of their products for market. He says that careful inspection shows that all the vegetables put up in Minnesota are packed in accordance with the provisions of law and under proper sanitary conditions.

A writer in the Baker and Confectioner says that the banana and the tomato are rapidly increasing in popularity as articles of diet. The tomato especially is now used by persons who formerly regarded it as little better than a poison. This publication goes on to say that up to a certain point tomatoes can be used with advantage in the manufacture of a bread that has the fine flavor of the fruit and many stimulating and nourishing qualities.

The Dairy Record contributes to the growing Polar literature the statement that Dr. Cook "grew up in the milk business, peddled milk in his younger days, still owns a big dairy in partnership with his brother, and his family has been supported during his absence by the proceeds of his part in the dairy."

The optimistic Walla Walla Union expresses the devout hope that the action of the Denver convention of national and state dairy and food commissioners in vindicating the decision of the Remsen board on the use of benzoate of soda will end a long and somewhat unpleasant wrangle. But it is not likely to do anything of the sort.

Professor M. E. Jaffa, who conducts the department of pure food and drugs in American Beverages and Food Journal, declares that it is possible to disguise putrefactive changes that have already begun in food products by the use of benzoate of soda. After the preservative has been applied the process of putrefaction is stayed, he says, but it does not cure that which already exists. And there you have it.

The authorities at Washington have prepared an ordinance requiring all wagons used for the transportation of foodstuffs to be kept perfectly clean.

The housekeeper who remembers that milk readily takes on the odor of any substances that may be in the room in which it is kept, and that it also quickly absorbs poisons, will be careful about the disposition of the family supply of this important but very sensitive food.

The pure food laws of the nation and the several states are receiving much support from public-spirited and upright manufacturers of food products. It is very gratifying to the officers having the enforcement of these acts in charge to observe this very helpful attitude of the most influential and important manufacturers.

The grocer should take one or more of the trade journals devoted to his branch of business. Some very fine ones are printed and their regular visits to the desk of the retailer will be worth many dollars in the course of the year.

A large number of men are very sensibly affected by their environment so that things which others approve they condemn and vice versa. But everybody should be able to stand harmoniously on a pure food platform.

The Michigan State Dairymen's Association will hold its next annual meeting in Detroit, February 1-4, 1910.

The Creamery Journal advises the butter-makers who read its columns to spare no pains in the effort to make good butter. It admits that the difference in price between good butter and poor is not what it ought to be, but there's some reason to believe that the situation will improve, and in any event it ought to be a matter of conscience with every buttermaker to do the best that can be done.

The federal government has been trying to illuminate some dark corners of the land by giving educational exhibits at large fairs and exhibitions. Its most successful work is done by the use of moving pictures. This feature will always attract attention. Among the pictures shown are those of model creameries and of some that are far from being model. The good that is done by way of contrast in enforcing truth upon the minds of the owners of other dairies can not be calculated. The method is an excellent one.

The coming convention of the Iowa State Dairy Association, which will be held in Cedar Rapids, November 16-20, promises to be one of the most interesting meetings ever held by the Association. A fine programme is being prepared.

The Iowa Dairy Union has been organized with State Dairy and Food Commissioner Wright as President and E. R. Shoemaker, editor of the Creamery Journal, as secretary. The object of the new association is to work in co-operation with the National Dairy Union in protecting dairy interests from the aggressions of the oleomargarine forces, who are about to wage a campaign for the reduction of the tax on colored oleomargarine from 10 cents a pound to 3.

President Shilling, of the National Dairy Union, is convinced that the butter interests are about to have the greatest fight of their lives. He says: "We have got to rally all the power at our command to throttle an action which means ultimate disaster to the great dairy industry should it become a law." Mr. Shilling wishes to organize a dairy union in every dairy state and already several have been established.

Good butter can have no rival. But poor butter is detestable. And a great deal of poor butter is sold. This should not be. Buttermakers will serve themselves as well as the public by insisting upon excellence of output.

The New York correspondent of the Grocery World says an effort is to be made to ship frozen meat from Uruguay to New York to be distributed among the market of this country, especially the eastern markets.

"If oleo were sold honestly it would probably be all right," exclaims the editor of the Grocery World. That is the entire question. Let oleo and butter each stand on its merits with the consuming public.

It is said that the wholesale butter men of Philadelphia are thinking of asking the next legislature to repeal the law dealing with process or renovated butter. They say there is such a scarcity of butter as to demand action that will not continue to exclude renovated butter from the market.

The agents of the Dairy and Food Bureau have brought prosecutions against a goodly number of dealers for selling catsup containing more than one-tenth of one per cent. of benzoate of soda. Should these dealers be in possession of proper guaranties from the persons from whom they bought the goods they will be exempt from prosecution but must cease selling the goods which have been condemned.

So far as possible every vender of adulterated or misbranded goods in the State of Pennsylvania will be prosecuted in obedience to the command of the law. The wise dealer will shelter himself behind the guaranty of the manufacturer or wholesaler from whom he purchases his goods.

Canada has a law making it a criminal offense for a jobber or retailer to violate a contract to maintain prices fixed by an agreement, or, in other words, prices fixed by the manufacturer and which the jobber or retailer has agreed to use as a selling price when he accepts the goods.

The starvation method by which some men cure themselves of divers ills is simply the rational plan of permitting the overworked and abused stomach to enjoy a little vacation season. If more persons were to try the experiment of cutting in two the daily quantity of food they eat there would be fewer dyspeptics in the land. But appetite is a hard thing to control.

The retail dealer should acquaint himself thoroughly with the provisions of the law under which he does business. And he should be guided by its restrictions and provisions.

THE COMING CONFLICT.

Under the above heading the Creamery Journal, published at Waterloo, Iowa, indulges in some remarks concerning the threatened conflict between the dairy and the oleomargarine interests of the country before the next session of Congress. The readers of the Bulletin may be interested in the following extracts:

That there is to be desperate action this winter on the oleo question seems to be taken for granted. Secretary MacVeagh is reported to strongly favor abolishing the tax on colored oleo—10c a pound—and taxing all oleo (without regard to color) 3c per pound.

Such action, even though it might have some restrictions thrown around it, would be most detrimental to pure butter interests in that it would make possible the sale of colored oleo as and for butter.

The right of the consumer to purchase oleomargarine in preference to butter, if that be his desire, cannot be disputed. If he likes oleo better than butter, well and good. If the price is lower and the product appeals to him on that account, well and good. The trouble lies in the fact that oleo, if it be colored, is sold as and for butter and not as and for oleo. The purchaser thinks he is buying butter but is getting oleo. He is paying for one thing and receiving another. That is fraud. And fraud of every nature ought to be legislated against.

The present (Grout) law has helped. But there are serious defects in it that have been brought out by experience with the measure.

There has been a great hue and cry of late (in an advertising way) attempting to show how pure and cleanly and healthful a product oleo is, and playing up its manufacture under government inspection as a weighty reason for its value as a food. If oleo be as good as its makers say it is, if it be as cleanly and pure and wholesome and appetizing and nourishing as they would have us believe, if it is so much better than butter, then why should there be any need of its masquerading as butter to meet ready sale? If oleo is so edible a product, the public would take to it kindly and the manufacturers would, it seems to us, if their line of argument be followed out, find it of very great advantage to give to oleo some different shade than that by which butter has so long been known in order that oleo might readily be distinguished from butter by the buyer.

The truth of the whole matter is simply this: The public would rather have butter than oleo. Permitting oleo to be colored opens up the way for its ready sale as butter. This is neither just nor right, and should not be permitted.

We are not trying to keep people from eating oleo. All we ask is that such laws be provided as will guarantee that oleo be sold as oleo and that the purchaser be in no wise imposed upon.

The dairymen have found that the Grout law needs strengthening. The oleo people want something else entirely. It is felt that the protection of the dairy interests require a number of changes in the law, chief of which are: The law provides a chance for escape from punishment to those who choose to claim they have not "knowingly" violated it. It should not be necessary to prove that the yellow color of oleomargarine is due to foreign substances introduced for the purpose of giving color. A method should be provided for preventing revenue collectors from settling cases. There are other ways in which the law should be strengthened, but the principal points have been mentioned.

The National Dairy Union officials are active now developing their organization, the membership of which has not needed to be especially aroused since the passage of the Grout Bill. Branch unions are being organized in the various states so that a united, vigorous and well-nigh instantaneous action can be taken when the time comes.

It looks like a fight. It means much to the dairy interests. And the dairy interests must win.

PENNSYLVANIA BUTTER SCORE THE BEST.

By Professor C. W. Larson, of Pennsylvania State College.

The butter entered in the fifth Educational Butter Contest of the year, conducted by the Pennsylvania State College, was scored on September 6th by C. W. Fryhofer, federal inspector of New York city. Criticisms and suggestions were made by C. W. Larson.

Ralph Martin, Font, made the highest scoring butter, 94; while W. D. Marshall, Lyndell; W. H. McGranahan, Pittsburg, and O. D. Mott, Edinburg, tied for second with a score of 93.

The following received a score of 90 or above:

Otis Blish, McCall Ferry, Pa.,	92½
L. H. Cooley, Castile, N. Y.,	92½
James Dean, Scott Centre, Pa.,	90
Chas. Dodge, Townville, Pa.,	90
H. G. Hawthorne, Monroeton, Pa.,	92½
L. W. Keir, Nichols, N. Y.,	91
W. D. Marshall, Lyndell, Pa.,	93
O. D. Mott, Edinburg, Pa.,	93
Ralph Martin, Font, Pa.,	94
W. H. McGranahan, Pittsburg, Pa.,	93
Theo. Niering, Wapwallopen, Pa.,	92½
H. F. Rockefeller, Towanda, Pa.,	91
H. W. Saxton, Kumry, Pa.,	92

The butter on the average was the best for the year, some showing a decided improvement over previous scores. By careful wrapping of the tubs the heating of the butter in transit was also avoided. With less ripening some of the samples would have been better. With old and poor cream it is necessary to add starter and ripen to 5 or 6 tenths per cent. but with good, whole milk cream, a lower acid will give better results. Most of the contestants have overcome the difficulty with mottles, but a few are still having trouble producing butter with the proper body. Some are churning warm and washing cold, thus injuring the body of the butter while others churn cold and wash warm. One or two samples were injured by overworking.

The butter which scored the highest was made from whole-milk cream, which was held in factory 21 hours. Twenty per cent, of commercial starter was added after separating, and ripened at 67 degrees F., until evening when it was cooled to 45 degrees F., and churned the next morning. The butter was churned at 54 degrees and washed at same temperature. The butter was washed 20 revolutions and worked 18 in a Disbrow churn. A small amount of water was left in churn during the working. The time required to churn was 31 minutes. The condition of the butter from churn was firm and dry.

On account of a shortage of cream in the cities, many of the contestants are shipping all their cream, making it impossible for them to take part this time. The next contest will be held the latter part of October.

"THANK GOD WE ARE ALIVE."

From Bottles and Barrels.

Commissioner Cannon's witty reference at the close of the Denver pure food convention to the above phrase with which he extended the invitations therefor, seems to us a felicitous description of the situation "as she is spoke." There is occasion for congratulations all around. Mr. Wilson may be congratulated upon having signalized his first appearance at a food convention during the twelve years he has been Secretary of Agriculture, by the successful employment of tactics hitherto unprecedented in assemblages of scientific authorities. He has given the learned experts of the chemical laboratories a lesson on how to solve knotty scientific problems which they are not likely to forget soon and will profit by assuredly. Moreover, he has given the public at large an illuminating exposition as to which side of the pure food question has the sympathy and support of the national official principally responsible for food law enforcement. Perhaps this exposition was not needed. At any rate, it demonstrates conclusively that however important the people may consider the purity and truthful labeling of food products, the Secretary of Agriculture, who is in a much better position to know what the public ought to eat and drink than the public itself, is fully persuaded that other interests are paramount. And we believe the public will not be so selfish and narrow-minded as to insist that Mr. Wilson shall be restrained much longer from devoting his broad-minded activities exclusively to the promotion of these paramount interests. Our loss will be their gain—and his, doubtless. "Oh, never star was lost here but it rose afar."

Dr. Wiley may be congratulated upon emerging from the Denver convention a more impressive and imposing figure than ever before. His unruffled serenity in the midst of the acrimonious discussions, cabals and caucuses in which he took no part, his bland adherence to the role of a scientist whose conclusions are not reached by nor subject to political considerations, and his smiling inability to see in the envenomed assaults of his enemies any occasion why he should resign his official work for the country that confides in him—well, there's only one Dr. Wiley and let's thank God he is alive and with digestion unimpaired, either by rotten fish or rotten politics!

President Emery and his supporters may be congratulated upon having made a gallant and dignified fight for principle in the face of wire-pulling, buttonholing and intimidation, paralleled, perhaps, but hardly excelled in the annals of ward politics, and upon having wrested victory from apparently inevitable defeat at the finish. The committee on resolutions may, in particular, be complimented upon its success in transmuting a flat-footed endorsement of benzoate of soda into a polite bouquet thrown to the powers that be, with a courteous suggestion that they "guess again" as to preservatives. And upon having snatched the dangerous whiskey question out of the forefront of observation at a time when the compounders' lobby might have mustered enough votes to accomplish their darling design of causing the association to stultify itself upon this substance—no longer a burning issue, either with the States individually or collectively.

The commissioners who supported Secretary Wilson—and we have no slightest intention of questioning the sincerity or integrity of their motives—may be congratulated upon—well, upon having a full year to think things over before they again are asked to surrender their initiative as immediate representatives of the people and submit to Federal dictation when that dictation takes the form of surrender to powerful commercial interests admittedly hostile to food control, and of an acceptance of "uniformity" based upon the weakest and most wishy-washy construction these commercial interests are able to impose by concentrating their fire upon the harried and beset officials at Washington.

We congratulate both sides to the Denver discussion upon the ample apologies and reparations made for words spoken in the warmth of debate. Like the courteous and high-minded gentlemen they are, they recognize that, however they may differ in matters of detail, they are a band of brothers and with identical interests to conserve, and that personal differences and animosities could have only the ultimate effect of weakening the influence and efficiency of all.

And, finally, we heartily congratulate President Taft upon the swift-coming and brilliantly conclusive evidence afforded by the gathering of the special interests at Denver and their inroad upon the deliberations of a convention of scientists and food-control officials, as to the truth of the predictions made when the whiskey-labeling controversy was reopened. It needed no ghost come from the dead to tell us that any concessions made to the whiskey compounders would give heart of grace to every other interest adversely affected by food-control laws and regulations, but the greedy and unblushing way in which this was made manifest at Denver—quite in advance of the President's final word as to whiskey—may very well have the effect of making the President postpone indefinitely any further action tending to encourage such onslaughts. The country is beginning to suspect that the man who now occupies the White House is a very thoughtful person, not prone to hasty conclusions and singularly open to conviction, even against his own predispositions. Truth need not tremble before the upright and dispassionate judge. And we trust it is not too early to congratulate the country upon having just that sort of a man as its chief magistrate. So let's repeat with Commissioner Cannon, "Thank God we are alive."

WHY NOT TWO CONVENTIONS?

By JAMES FOUST, Dairy and Food Commissioner, Pennsylvania.

Since the adjournment of the annual convention of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments, held at Denver last August, there has been more or less discussion of its work and of the sum of good or evil resulting from that work. It is admitted on all sides that the one question which occupied the time of the convention and provoked the most animated controversy was that concerning the effects of benzoate of soda upon the human system. It is also pretty generally conceded that the action of the convention, while provoking considerable bitterness, convinced few if any of those who were upon the losing side. It is a controversy in which distinguished scientists are arrayed against each other and since they strenuously advance and defend radically opposing ideas it is impossible for the consuming public, largely ignorant of chemistry, and dependant upon the wise men for information, to come to any settled conclusion. Thus the discussion of such problems in a convention which should devote its attention to practical matters, to matters affecting the administrative features of the federal and state laws, is largely wasted effort. It distracts the attention of the public but it does not inform. It raises doubts instead of settling them. It irritates the minds of the people instead of leading to tranquility.

The Honorable James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture under the National Government, grasped the situation in a little speech delivered at Denver. He suggested that too much time was being devoted to technical matters, to subjects of a nature so abstruse that the average man cannot grasp their import; so difficult of solution, indeed, that the wisest men we have are divided in opinion, one saying this, another saying that, and between them so confusing the layman that he is ready to exclaim: "A plague on both your houses." That is not exactly what Mr. Wilson said, but I think it is pretty nearly what he meant when he reminded the convention that "the good old cow" has been ignored too much of late and deserves some consideration at a convention representing the dairy as well as the food interests. In other words, I think that the dairy and food conventions in the past have laid just a little too much emphasis upon the scientific part of their work and not quite enough upon the practical side. There are others beside the National Secretary of Agriculture who are beginning to cherish and to express similar views. And this is one of the most encouraging and hopeful signs of the times. If it should come to be shared by public officials, as it is felt by the people, the results promise to be highly beneficial.

The fact is that the common people are beginning to express the conviction that there is too much chemistry and not enough of practical discussion and investigation at these annual conventions of the State and National Food and Dairy Departments. The writer suggests a remedy in the separation of the chemists and the Dairy and Food Commissioners. Why not have two conventions, one consisting of the chemists, the other of Dairy and Food Commissioners, and possibly, the Agents of the States and the Inspectors of the Federal Food Department? Both conventions might meet at the same time and place, but each would be a distinct entity, attending to its own business, having its special programme and in no way connected with the other except as its proceedings may supplement those of the other body. In this way technical and scientific problems would be wholly relegated to the convention of chemists, while in the dairy and food convention proper other matters would be discussed. And I think it will be generally admitted that while the analytical work performed by the chemists is of the greatest importance and while their investigations are peculiarly interesting and often very illuminating, yet the problems encountered almost daily in the executive work of the dairy and food bureaus are of equal importance and many of them come much closer to the retailer and the consumer than the matters that come within the province of the chemists.

There are scores of matters that might be discussed with profit by the representatives of the administrative branch of the Dairy and Food Departments at their annual meeting. Various problems concerning the administrative work might be considered. The matter of wages or salaries could be examined. Some States may have a better way than others of getting the samples from the retailers and of transporting these samples to the chemists. The various provisions of the laws of the several States might be compared with each other and with those of the Federal government. In no other way will greater progress be made toward uniformity in the provisions of the National and State dairy and food laws and in methods of enforcement. It is needless to enlarge upon this branch of the subject. Its potential possibilities for good will be apprehended readily by all who are interested in the practical side of the pure food problem.

How would it do, then, to divorce the chemists and the Dairy and Food Commissioners and their Assistants and Agents, to the end that each division may be better able to consider its own peculiar problems and that the time of the dairy and food convention may be wholly occupied in the discussion of the questions of administration continually confronting its members? Under such an arrangement as is proposed the dairy and food convention would not give place on its programme to any matter coming under the supervision of the chemists. Should the suggestion herein outlined be adopted no chemist would be eligible to membership in the dairy and food convention proper unless he should likewise be a Dairy and Food Commissioner, nor would the latter be eligible to membership in the chemists' convention. This would greatly simplify matters in every direction and would doubtless be to the advantage of the pure food cause. It would make the conventions of the Dairy and Food Commissioners very much more practical from the standpoint of the consumer and it would probably remove some of the perplexities which now beset the path way of the retailer.

THE KIND THAT MOTHER MADE.

Readers of the Bulletin may be interested in scanning the opinions of the Kennebec Journal, the leading newspaper of Maine, concerning the use of benzoate of soda and other chemical preservatives in the food of the people. It informs us that "echoes of the Denver convention of State and National Dairy and Food Commissioners and other officials, continue to reach as far east as Augusta, Maine. The 'echoes' are in the form of propaganda from publicity bureaus maintained by the benzoate of soda men and anti-benzoate of soda men. Those who favor the use of food preservatives declare that it is harmless and point to decisions of the Department of Agriculture, or of chemists connected therewith, to support their claim. They also assert that foods are preserved at the present time under the most sanitary conditions, and that there is nothing in the condiments which is injurious to health. Their whole campaign in behalf of the use of benzoic, boric, salicylic acids and their compounds is based upon that proposition.

"The advocates of strictly pure foods are confining their activities to two lines. First, the education of the public as to the harmfulness of all so-called food preservatives, and to the fact that the use of preservatives enables unscrupulous manufacturers to embody decayed fruits and refuse in food; and the conduct of a campaign which has for its purpose the condemnation of food preservatives by resolutions on the part of physicians in their national, state and county medical associations in this country. The public is notified that there will be presented to congress at its next session a bill which will have for its aim the further safe-guarding of the public from injurious food preservatives. The medical organizations, as a rule, take the stand that chemistry is an exact science, and that it is not within the province of the chemist to define to what extent the materials with which he experiments, will affect the complex human organisms with which only the physician and diagnostician are called upon to deal. This bears directly upon the assertion that chemists in the employ of food preservative men are making experiments designed to mislead the public. The pure food men claim that the action of the Denver convention in endorsing the report of the Remsen board (favorable to benzoate of soda) was brought about through log rolling and machine methods. They are now seeking to overcome whatever advantage would accrue from a technical endorsement by so important a convention by giving the widest publicity possible to their claims that such endorsement was not an expression of the opinion of the regular delegates.

"The Department of Agriculture has become involved in the discussion and through it serious opposition to Secretary Wilson has been aroused. The public has a right to and demands clean foods. So large a percentage of the population of this country is dependent upon the corner grocery that anything which tends to destroy the consumer's confidence in the food which that grocer sells him is a very serious matter, readily reflected upon the receipts of the industry which furnishes him his preserved food. On the other hand, a man can never be sure that he is receiving pure food unless the government safeguards him at the point of manufacture, it being obvious that he cannot personally oversee the cooking and canning of that which he eats. If the Agricultural Department endorses benzoate of soda, concerning which there is admittedly some doubt, and manufacturers continue to use it, the consumer will be compelled to eat it or abstain from the use of preserved foods. Thus any decision of the Department is vital to the welfare of the public. It occurs to us that the use of benzoate of soda was not considered necessary by our mothers during the fall canning season, and that the food she preserved was surprisingly better than that which we are now able to buy at any price. It may be that we are misinformed, but our remembrance of the matter is that when the food was properly canned, little spoiled. If that method was satisfactory for our mothers, we fail to see where it has lost any of its efficiency at the present time. We prefer our food free from all preservatives and believe that the great majority have the same preference."

Thus far the Kennebec Journal. Perhaps the manufacturers of canned goods might retort that they do not employ benzoate of soda in the preparation of their wares. The obnoxious benzoate of soda is chiefly employed in the manufacture of tomato catsup, although it may be found in some jellies and in shredded codfish. The sentiments of the Journal are likely to be endorsed by a multitude of consumers of the latter articles. The average citizen is unwilling to run any risks in connection with the food he eats and if he cannot get his favorite brand free from suspicious preservatives he will forego its use. In so far as it stands against the use of suspicious chemical preservatives the Kennebec Journal undoubtedly voices the sentiments of a considerable body of the American people.

HOW THE PURE FOOD LAW WORKS.

We find some remarks on the editorial page of the Bradford Star concerning the methods of the pure food authorities at Washington which may interest and inform some readers of the Bulletin:

"Uncle Sam's officials charged with the administering of the pure food law are doing much to forward the cause of truth. And incidentally, they are daily giving membership papers in the Ananias club to more folks than Roosevelt could have recommended for initiation in that institution had he worked overtime at the job.

"Nowadays it behooves a manufacturer of food products to tell the whole unvarnished truth about his staple on the label. Little, measly untruths are just as bad, in the eyes of the law, as the whoppers. And the Department of Agriculture, which supervises and sees that the pure food law is obeyed, yanks the small falsifier up just as quick as the big liar.

"For instance, the other day a certain shipper was fined for misbranding water. It doesn't seem possible to prevaricate about plain drinking water. Nevertheless this shipper had stated in the labels on his bottles, that they contained natural lithia, whereas, the department discovered, it was plain distilled water artificially lithiated.

"A pound must weigh a pound; a quart must contain a quart; otherwise the canner or bottler is liable to fine for misbranding. Recently a judgment was obtained in Kentucky by the department against the canner of 800 cases of canned corn, for underweight. A big shipment of canned tomatoes from Utah was likewise forfeited for the same cheat.

"An alleged maple syrup company in Los Angeles, which merely flavored a sugar syrup with a little maple sugar, was fined because the label read, "Pure Maple Syrup." A cereal breakfast food manufactured up in Connecticut and advertised as a rich concentrated food, which aided in the digestion of others, was held under suspicion because the government chemists found the stuff wasn't really a concentrated food, and didn't stimulate digestion, as claimed on the label. The manufacturers were fined.

"The pure food law, it might further be explained, grants the government supervision over all foods, either for man or beast, the broadest sort of a weapon against dishonest dealers. Owing to the provision covering food for beasts, some very interesting cases have recently been prosecuted by the government. A large number of manufacturers of chicken feed have been held for misbranding, chickens having been held to be 'beasts' within the meaning of the law.

"Prosecutions for misbranding hay are frequent. Incidentally it has been found that not a few farmers of the country are violating the law. Here is a hypothetical case: A farmer lives in New York near Limestone. He raises a crop of clover hay, but when he gets ready to market it mixes a lot of timothy with the clover. He loads it, hauls the mixed hay up to Bradford and there sells it as 'clover hay.' He violates the pure food law and is liable to prosecution. The hay isn't 'clover hay;' it is 'clover and timothy.' His crossing the state line makes the hay 'interstate commerce' within the meaning of the law, and amenable to the pure food law."

So far the Bradford Star. In commenting thereon this Bulletin is led to remark that some persons wax very indignant with state and federal officials because they insist upon the rigid enforcement of those sections of the various pure food acts which forbid misbranding. But aren't they right, after all? Let us consider the cases above mentioned. Hasn't the man who pays for natural lithia water a right to get precisely what he paid for? Suppose his physician advises him to avoid the artificial product? He purchases according to the label and at a later period learns that the article which he supposed to be exactly what it purported to be when he bought it contained artificial lithia. Would not such an one have a good case against the manufacturer who deceived him? In the same way the housekeeper who pays for maple syrup has both a legal and a moral right to the identical article she purchased. The person who deceives her should be punished and the law is right when it provides for his arrest and conviction. And the man who buys clover hay may well complain when he learns by close investigation that it is half timothy.

Both the national and the state food laws were enacted in the interest of the consumer. They were enacted because humbug and fraud had crept into the food business to such an extent that the purchaser never knew what he was getting for his good money. The laws that now govern interstate commerce and rule in the several states were enacted for the purpose of protecting the conscientious grocer and the uninformed consumer. In so far as they prevent adulteration or misbranding and thus supply the markets with pure food, they are accomplishing the purpose of their creation.

FOOD INSPECTION DECISION ON SHELLFISH.

Food Inspection Decision No. 110, issued by the Department of Agriculture at Washington, is as follows:

The Department has investigated the preparation and shipment of oysters, clams and other shellfish. A public hearing on this subject was held by the Board of Food and Drug Inspection on May 20, 1909. At this hearing growers, packers, dealers and the public were afforded an opportunity to be heard.

It is unlawful to ship or sell in interstate commerce oysters or other shellfish taken from unsanitary or polluted beds. The pollution of oysters with sewage can readily be detected by bacteriological examination and such polluted oysters or other shellfish are adulterated under section 7 of the Food and Drugs act of June 30, 1906, in that they contain an added "poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient which may render such article injurious to health."

Such articles are likewise adulterated under section 7, in the case of foods because they consist "in whole or in part of a filthy, decomposed, or putrid animal or vegetable substance."

In it unlawful to ship or to sell in interstate commerce oysters or other shellfish which have become polluted because of packing under insanitary conditions or being placed in unclean receptacles. In order to prevent pollution during the packing or shipment of oysters, it is necessary to give proper attention to the sanitary condition of the establishment in which they are packed and to use only receptacles which have been thoroughly cleansed as soon as emptied. In order to prevent the possibility of contamination, it is desirable that such containers be sterilized before using.

It is unlawful to ship or to sell in interstate commerce oysters or other shellfish which have been subjected to "floating" or "drinking" in brackish water, or water containing less salt than that in which they are grown. Such food is adulterated under section 7 of the law because a substance "has been mixed and packed with it so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect its quality or strength." There can be no objection to "drinking" shellfish in unpolluted water of the same salt content as that from which they have been removed. Attention is called, however, to the dangers resulting from "drinking" shellfish near polluted fresh water streams and near other sources of pollution.

It is unlawful to ship or to sell in interstate commerce shucked oysters to which water has been added, either directly or in the form of melted ice. Such food is adulterated under section 7 of the act because "a substance has been mixed and packed with it so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect its quality or strength," and also because "a substance has been substituted wholly or in part for the article."

The packing of shellfish with ice in contact may lead to the absorption by the oyster of a portion of the water formed by the melting ice, thus leading to the adulteration of the oysters with water.

Only unpolluted cold or ice water should be employed in washing shucked shellfish, and the washing, including chilling, should not continue longer than the minimum time necessary for cleaning and chilling.

In view of the fact that the shipping season has begun and shippers will require several months to provide themselves with suitable containers for the shipment of shellfish out of contact with ice, no prosecutions will be recommended prior to May 1, 1910, for the shipment or sale in interstate commerce of oysters or other shellfish because of the addition of water caused solely by shipment in contact with ice.

"HONESTY IS THE BEST POLICY."

Elsewhere we give the views of an experienced lawyer, who is also the editor of one of the most widely circulated trade journals, concerning the folly which leads a merchant to misrepresent the facts in connection with any article on sale by him. In the case under consideration the indiscreet dealer actually violated law and subjected himself to arrest and fine, besides deceiving his customer who wanted and needed a different article from that furnished him. But even where deception concerning the quality of an article does not result in the arrest of the vender for violating the pure food laws, is it a wise policy to pursue? Does it produce good business results?

Let the reader put himself in the purchaser's place? Did you ever buy an article which turned out to be very different from what it was represented by the vender? And did you ever return and remonstrate with him in vain? If you have had an experience of that sort—and most of us have—did you continue to purchase from that dealer or did you take your patronage elsewhere. To ask the question is to answer it. No man or woman with average intelligence who is intentionally deceived by a dealer, and who at a later period discovers the truth, will return to that store. He who has been sold once usually concludes that if the same thing is done twice by the same individual it will be the fault of the buyer. "The burnt child dreads the fire."

There is only one way in which a dealer who deceives his customers can hope to continue in business; that is by changing his location so frequently that he is perpetually getting new customers. The itinerant vender of patent medicines and cure-alls may do very well at his business because it is an accident if he faces the same person twice in the course of his business lifetime. But one who wishes to settle down in one locality and to build up a settled trade among his neighbors cannot risk any such policy as that carried on by the dealer in humbug and chicanery. He must gain a reputation for truth telling. He must tell the truth, no matter how strongly tempted to hide it or ignore it or trample upon it for the sake of making a few fleeting dollars.

We have many dealers in Pennsylvania who long ago recognized the absolute truth of the foregoing statements. They abhor a lie, whether it be spoken or acted. Their public knows them. They are doing a good business. Some of their patrons have been with them for many years. They have mastered the fundamental principles of business success and are happy in the good-will and esteem of their friends and patrons.

FAITHFUL AND FEARLESS.

Where the question of guarding the health of the people is concerned it is always the imperative duty of the pure food authorities of the national and state governments to tell the truth as they understand it, without much reference to the effect upon their own popularity. But this duty is a dangerous one. Whenever greed seeks to add to its stores by palming off inferior products upon the consuming public it is sure to undertake to secure rulings and decisions which will aid its purpose, and whoever stands up against such schemes is pretty certain to provoke harsh criticism and to create bitter and powerful foes. It is the way of the world; it has always been the way of the world; we suppose it will continue to be the way of the world until the dawn of the millennial morning makes a summary end of every evil thing. It is one of the most unremunerative occupations in the world, this business of standing up resolutely on behalf of the rights of the rank and file. For it often happens that the champion of fair treatment for the consumer is ground to powder between the upper and the nether millstones of selfish interest and popular indifference.

Take Dr. Wiley, for instance. He is the head of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Agricultural Department, at Washington, as the readers of this Bulletin well know. His office and his duties have made him a conspicuous figure during the last three and one-half years. He has many friends and some enemies. It was inevitable that such should be the case. A man of positive convictions, magnifying his office, regarding himself as the conservator of the interests of the consumer, as honest as the sunlight, absolutely fearless and scornful of consequences to himself, he has been the subject of incessant and bitter criticism and of constant and enthusiastic praise. The criticism was as inevitable as the praise. Not all of it is uttered by business interests which are enraged because he has undertaken to thwart their selfishness. Not all the sincere men in the country are upon his side. But with the critics who are moved by the best of motives are associated others whose "craft is in danger."

The federal authorities have not always stood by Dr. Wiley. Indeed, during recent months they have stood quite constantly with those who seek his overthrow. But while his counsel has been rejected and his recommendations unheeded, no request for his resignation has been tendered. His sincerity is recognized and appreciated; the hold he has on the love and confidence of the people is understood in the Agricultural Department and in the White House. Thus fearless sincerity has its appropriate reward.

CONCERNING COUNTERFEIT CIDER VINEGAR.

Recent developments show that much fraudulent "cider" vinegar is being shipped to various sections of the country by jobbers in St. Louis and other cities. Last year the Dairy and Food Division of Pennsylvania was obliged to institute a number of prosecutions against dealers who were selling an article labeled "pure cider vinegar," but which analysis proved to be guiltless of even a trace of apple juice. Grocers should be very careful from whom they purchase the vinegar they hand out to their customers. The state is not willing to permit its people to be duped in regard to this matter of vinegar. The prosecutions of the past will undoubtedly be followed by others unless the dealer strictly complies with the law.

Pennsylvania has a very excellent vinegar law upon the statute books. It was enacted several years ago and has been reprinted in full in this Bulletin. Its purpose is to encourage the farmers of the state to utilize their surplus apple crop in the manufacture of cider vinegar. The law provides that vinegar labeled "cider vinegar" shall contain nothing but the pure juice of the apple. If the grocers of Pennsylvania would encourage the farmers of their respective neighborhoods to make cider vinegar they would do a kindly act to the farmers and benefit their patrons who need more or less vinegar every week. Good vinegar is wholesome, but some of the stuff sold under the name of pure vinegar is a shortener of human life.

But the farmers should not wait until the retailers manifest their desire to deal in pure cider vinegar made on the farm. They should hasten to take advantage of the provisions of the act of assembly and thus add a little to their annual income. Some of them are doing this; have been doing it for years. But there is room for improvement both in the storeroom and on the farm. If these two forces could be induced to work together, each consulting the interest of the other, impure and unwholesome vinegar would soon be driven out of the market and the stomach of many a consumer would soon take on a healthier tone. Many of the victims of acids and drugs have no idea of what the trouble is. They never think of putting it to the discredit of the so-called vinegar they have been using. If they knew what was wrong they would speedily apply an effective remedy.

Let us hope that the federal and the state governments will soon find themselves upon a common platform of opposition to counterfeit vinegar and friendly interest in the manufacture of the genuine article. There are many things which loom up larger in the public eye, but few that are of more vital importance.

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION OF STATE MILLERS.

The thirty-second annual convention of the Pennsylvania Millers' State Association was held at State College and was a very interesting meeting. It was the opinion of those who attended that no better convention has been held by the millers of Pennsylvania since they organized their association. The address of welcome was delivered by Dr. Edwin E. Sparks, president of State College, and was one of the happiest efforts of that versatile educator. The response was made by Colonel Asher Miner. The annual address of President Landis Levan considered the events of the year and referred to the difficulties put in the way of the millers by the great advance in wheat during the last few months. At the morning session on the second day the annual report of A. P. Husband, secretary of the association, was presented. It showed that eight members had been received during the year, while five had resigned and one died, leaving the present membership 234. The receipts were slightly in excess of the expenditures, which amounted to $1,238.63; the balance on hand is $65.13. The secretary said the new legislation adopted concerning feeding stuffs, while not all that could be desired, is much more favorable to the milling interests than the original draft of the bill. He recommends the appointment of a legislative commission to watch legislation. One of the most interesting addresses of the convention was that delivered by George G. Hutchison, of the Department of Agriculture, explanatory of the new Feeding Stuff Law enacted at the last session of the legislature. Mr. Hutchison went into details, speaking at considerable length and at the conclusion of his address answered a large number of questions put by members of the convention. Papers were also read by H. V. White on "Wheat for Milling, as a Miller Views It;" by Dr. Henry Prentiss Armsby on "By-Product Feeding Stuff;" by Dr. Thomas F. Hunt on "Factors Affecting the Price of Wheat;" by Professor Frank D. Gardner on "Milling and Baking Tests." Ex-Governor James A. Beaver also delivered a short address which was highly appreciated by the convention. The officers for the ensuing year are as follows: President, H. V. White, Bloomsburg; First Vice President, U. G. Barnitz, Barnitz; Second Vice President, C. Y. Wagner, Bellefonte; Treasurer, A. C. Godshall, Lansdale; Directors, Landis Levan, Lancaster; E. E. Rein-dollar, Taneytown, Md.; Edward S. Wertz, Reading; A. B. Spanogle, Lewistown, Jacob V. Edge, Downingtown.

"SO ANXIOUS TO MAKE A SALE."

"E. J. B.," writing in the Grocery World under the foregoing title, relates a little incident which occurred not long ago and which set him to thinking about the folly of some retailers. After calling attention to the fact that two grades of peppermint extract are recognized—the extract for stomach troubles, usually sold by a druggist, and the extract for flavoring purposes, usually sold by grocers—and noting the additional fact that while the federal law requires but 3 per cent. of oil of peppermint in the flavoring extract, while that for stomach troubles must contain not less than 10 per cent., the writer relates his experience with a federal inspector and an incident which happened in connection with a recent prosecution, as follows:

"I appeared as counsel for a manufacturer who had sold peppermint extract to a Pennsylvania retailer marked 'Flavoring.' The retailer, in spite of the mark, was accused of having sold it to an inspector as medicine. I was interviewing the inspector and he convinced me that what he charged was true.

"After which he observed: 'These grocers are so anxious to make a sale that they don't care what they say.'"

"Which strikes me as exceedingly important, coming from a man who goes among hundreds of grocers and has made cases against a great many. He appears to have found the same tendency I have noted in a large percentage of merchants—by no means grocers alone, a tendency to say anything or claim anything if they think the sale depends upon it. A merchant of this type is on the verge of making a sale. The customer is slow to reach a decision. He asks questions—wants to be shown. The merchant, hot after the sale, afraid of losing it unless he satisfies his customer's doubt, forgets caution and prudence and says things he has no right to say; things that come back to roost, like the Pennsylvania grocer's unwary statement that the peppermint was just what the inspector needed as a medicine."

"The man that can curb this almost universal tendency in himself—who can resist the temptation to say anything not proper and truthful to say, is a strong man."

Thus far Brother Buckley. He might have added that the man who can trample under foot the temptation to deceive an intending customer is a wise man as well as a strong one. For a deceived customer is likely to become a foe; he will certainly never return to that particular store. His patronage may be worth many dollars a year, but it will surely go to a rival. No business man can afford to be untruthful.

THE COW AND THE HIRED MAN.

A Cincinnati traction magnate who owns a fine herd of Jerseys has some strong opinions on the subject of cows. One is that a cow's teeth should be brushed. Another is that she should be dressed sufficiently to protect her against insect annoyances.

According to a dispatch, the results apparently justify his views. The glossy Jerseys, immaculately attired in one piece garments and having shining ivories, have increased not only the quantity but the quality of their daily output.

Now that at least a strong presumption has been raised in favor of his methods, the cow owners all through the country will possibly make similar experiments. There seems no particular reason why anything that will make a Jersey cow a more satisfactory producer should not work on other varieties, even on what is generally known as the common or garden variety.

The hired man will, of course, welcome this pleasing variation of his otherwise monotonous labors. As he rises about 3 a. m. and does nothing except feed and curry eight or ten horses, cut up enough wood to last all day, milk ten or fifteen cows, repair all breaks in the farm machinery, grind an ax or two, feed the shoats, and a few little things like that, he naturally has a good deal of spare time before eating breakfast and getting off to the field about 6 o'clock.

Instead of being compelled to hang around and chafe for something to do he can take a few toothbrushes and an armful of natty garments made to bring out the good points of the individual cows and keep busy right up to the ringing of the breakfast bell. Nobody but a hired man can understand what a boon that would be.

As for themselves, there is no reason why they should not eventually give other and additional proof of their appreciation. It is not improbable that they would not only increase the quantity and quality of their output, but also abandon some of their most irritating habits.

One of these, of course, is switching their tail with force right in the face of the hired man when he is milking. A cow that would continue this annoyance which hired men resent so bitterly after having had her teeth nicely brushed and her dress put on by that same hired man that morning would, we sincerely trust, be the exception. It would argue an extremely ungrateful disposition, to say the least.

And a cow that would have the heart to kick a brimming pail of milk over or sideswipe the hired man with a quick scrape of the right hind foot or kick the stool from under him after having received the delicate attentions mentioned would not be one whit better.

When we think of the tremendous possibilities of this new way of treating cows, it is difficult to restrain a sense of exultation that we have at least a few magnates who are not too busy with making money to stop and consider means for improving the condition of the cow business and giving the hired man sufficient exercise.

NATIONAL DAIRY UNION AT MILWAUKEE.

Tuesday, October 19, was the time fixed for the annual meeting of the National Dairy Union, in the Auditorium, Milwaukee. The meeting was called to order at the designated hour by President S. B. Shilling. Sessions were held during the forenoon and the afternoon at which reports of committees were received and disposed of and other routine business transacted. Hon. W. D. Hoard, ex-Governor of Wisconsin and editor of Hoard's Dairyman, offered a resolution which was adopted by a unanimous vote, practically reorganizing the Union. It was to the effect that a board of directors be chosen, consisting of five, and given full executive powers to act as the agent and representative of the Association. These directors are clothed with authority to elect a president, vice president and secretary from among their own number, the treasurer to be chosen from outside the board. The board is also empowered to fix the compensation of the secretary.

The resolution having been approved by the Union it was determined to proceed at once with the election of the board. The result was the selection of the following gentlemen: Hon. W. D. Hoard, ex-Governor of Wisconsin; Dairy and Food Commissioner James Foust, of Pennsylvania; J. A. Walker, a large creamery butter producer, of Illinois; Assistant Food Commissioner George L. Flanders, of New York; S. B. Shilling, editor and publisher of the National Dairy Union, Chicago. The newly chosen board of directors held a meeting the same night, talked over various plans and adjourned to meet in the city of Washington, at the call of ex-Governor Hoard. At that time an organization will be effected and plans laid for the battle over the oleomargarine problem which will begin with the opening of the regular session of congress on the first Monday of December.

It is now planned to present for the consideration of the congress a bill amending the Grout act. The chief purpose of the amendment is to eliminate the word "knowingly" from the present act regulating the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine; to require that oleomargarine colored in any shade of yellow, regardless of the method by which the color is produced, to be taxed at the rate of 10 cents per pound; and to tax uncolored oleomargarine at 3 cents per pound; to compel applicants for federal license to give their correct names and location, and providing that any false declarations as to either shall constitute a misdemeanor; to prevent the settling of cases by revenue agents or the prosecutors whenever the federal oleomargarine law has been violated, and requiring all such cases to be disposed of by the court having jurisdiction; requiring all oleomargarine to be put up in one, three and five pound packages, each package to contain a revenue stamp and a serial number, so that it may be traced from the consumer to the factory.

It is quite possible that additional amendments will be offered, discussed and incorporated in the bill. The intention of the representatives of the National Dairy Union is to ask congress to insist upon the sale of oleomargarine for precisely what it is. There is not the slightest desire to deny the legality of the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine. All the dairy people insist upon is that it be sold upon its own merits and that such amendments be made to the Grout act as will make it increasingly difficult for oleomargarine to masquerade over the country in the guise of genuine butter.

THE SOFT DRINK SITUATION IN PENNSYLVANIA.

By JAMES FOUST, Dairy and Food Commissioner.

On March 11th, 1909, the legislature passed an act relating to non-alcoholic drinks, which are defined so as to include

" * * * carbonated beverages of all flavors, sarsaparilla, ginger ale, soda water of all flavors, lemonade, orangeade, root beer, grape juice, and all other non-intoxicating drinks."

The Act specifically prohibits the addition of

" * * * boric acid or borates, salicylic acid or salicylates, formaldehyde, sulphurous acid or sulphates, hydrofluoric acid or fluorides, fluoborates, fluosilicates, or other fluorine compounds, dulcin, glucin, saccharin, betanaphthol, hydronaphthol, abrastol, asapol, oxides of nitrogen, nitrous acid or nitrates, compounds of copper, pyroligneous acid, or other added substance deleterious to health."

The act also includes, under its definition of misbranding, "coloring or flavoring in imitation of the genuine color or flavor of another substance," or labeled in such a manner to deceive or mislead the purchaser, or the use of any statement, design or device that shall tend to have such effect. The act, however, makes an exception in the case of goods plainly marked as compounds, imitations or blends, and defines the latter terms in the language of the National Food and Drugs Act of 1906.

Immediately after the passage of the act an earnest effort was made to acquaint the soft drink trade with its provisions, both through the medium of official publications and of copies of the act sent to trade organizations, and to individual bottlers and dealers so far as they were known to the office.

During the past summer—the time of year when soft drinks are so largely used—about eight hundred samples were collected by the agents of the bureau and analyzed by its chemists. About eighty per cent. adulteration and misbranding were found and were followed by immediate prosecution and the collection of penalties imposed by the act. In almost every instance it ought in justice to be said that the bottler accepted the responsibility for his wares and bore the penalty, and further that the result has been a marked correction of the evils found in this series of examinations.

Among the principal violations of the act that the analysts found were the very common use of saccharin instead of sugar as sweetening agent, the use of coal tar dyes to imitate natural fruit colors, and the use of misleading names and pictures of fruits upon preparations that were wholly artificial; also the use of cayenne pepper to add pungency to so-called "ginger ale." In fact, many of these preparations were nothing but tap-water of uncertain purity, sweetened with saccharin, flavored with an essence, often artificially colored with a coal tar dye, and made foamy with tincture of soap-bark, despite the fact that the label called for the genuine fruit base with its fine flavor and health-giving qualities.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The next convention of the Wisconsin Butter Makers' Association will be held in Fond du Lac some time during the month of February, 1910. The secretary was authorized to fix the exact date of the meeting.

Nobody objects to the sale of oleomargarine under its proper name. The objection is to the attempt to palm it off upon the consuming public as genuine butter.

The grocer who keeps his room in order and gives his shelves and counters an attractive appearance never loses anything by the operation. Quite the contrary.

Good citizens are sometimes brought face to face with a law which they do not like. But they obey it implicitly so long as it is un-repealed.

The man who deliberately sells adulterated food or drink is a bad citizen and deserves exemplary punishment. He who sells such products ignorantly should be held innocent and advised to sell no longer.

The dairymen of the state are pretty good citizens. They have shown a sincere desire to obey law and to comply with the regulations of local health boards. And in this way they have contributed largely to the very perceptible decrease of the death rate.

The grocer and the consumer should work in partnership. Neither can get along without the other. Why not enter a covenant to be perfectly frank with each other? Many have already done so with encouraging results.

The Creamery Journal, of Waterloo, Iowa, has a shoemaker for an editor and a saddler for assistant editor. Both are doing excellent work from month to month, too.

Concerning the fairy tale recently circulated to the effect that the Standard Oil Company had discovered and meant to put on the market a substitute for butter, an official of that organization is credited with this remark: Oil is a wonderful product, and chemical research of it has developed many surprises, but what a tremendous stretch of imagination between petroleum and butter, and what a faith in advertising it implies that anyone should ever be able to make the public eat it.

The annual convention of the International Milk Dealers' Association was held in Milwaukee, beginning on Monday, October 18.

California has a law requiring storage eggs to be sold for exactly what they are. In the work of enforcing this act several interesting questions have sprung up. One man wants to know whether eggs which have been transported in a refrigerator car are storage eggs, while another inquires if a fresh egg should be labeled storage after he had kept it in a refrigerator for a few days.

The Grocers' Magazine declares that "any attempt to make people honest by legislation is of course, too ridiculous for serious consideration. Legislators interested in passing such laws are wasting their time." And yet the Grocers' Magazine would scarcely recommend the repeal of all laws and the inauguration of anarchy.

The statement is made that much harm is being done by the sale of cheap bronchial and stomach remedies. It is said that many a man has completely ruined his stomach by swallowing 10-cent dyspepsia tablets. These alleged remedies catch the fancy of certain persons because they are so cheap. But they cost a great deal in the end.

The food laws of Indiana are rather severe on the producer of poor products. A farmer in that state has been arrested for selling poor eggs to a grocer.

Wheeling, West Virginia, has been holding a food exhibit at which a baby show was held every afternoon and baking contests were regular features.

Out in South Dakota they have a very stringent law against the sale of rotten food. Much annoyance has been caused by the prohibition against receiving stale eggs, and the commissioner, in an effort to make things as easy as possible has issued an edict in which he declares that "it is unlawful to buy or sell decomposed animal foods or even to receive them. It is therefore ruled that all eggs bought and sold in the market must in all instances be subject to candling." The Inland Grocer says that this undoubtedly prevents the sale of current receipts of eggs at wholesale or retail in South Dakota.

The guaranty clause was inserted in the Pennsylvania pure food law for the purpose of protecting the innocent grocer from punishment for the sins of the manufacturer. But it can protect no retailer who is too careless to take advantage of its provisions.

State Dairy and Food Commissioner R. W. Dunlap, of Ohio, decides that the placing of ice or water in shucked oysters is an adulteration and therefore a violation of the pure food laws of that state.

The announcement of the failure of another co-operative mercantile plant confirms the theory that the friends of that form of business venture in the United States are still minus the secret of success which appears to be in the exclusive possession of their English brethren.

Buffalo's Food Show, held during the last week of September and the first week of October, is said to have been one of the finest ever held and in many respects the most successful.

Food Commissioner Cook, of South Dakota, has issued an order prohibiting the use of alum or aluminum salts in pickles, vegetables and other foods, since the burden of evidence "indicates that it is detrimental to health. Until further notice, alum will be allowed in baking powder, since at present the evidence in regard to it is less conclusive than in case of other foods."

The first conviction for selling oleomargarine as butter was secured by the pure food authorities of Missouri during the closing week of September as we learn from the Eli Grocer. It occurred in Judge Taylor's court in St. Louis and the offending dealer was fined fifty dollars and costs. Judge Taylor's court simply affirmed a conviction which had been secured in one of the lower courts and had been appealed from.

The records of this bureau show that several grocers have recently plead guilty to the charge of selling catsup containing excessive quantities of benzoate of soda and paid fines of $60 each. Dealers who sold baking powder containing alum have been arrested also. It is not safe to violate the pure food laws of this commonwealth.

The authorities of Minnesota are notifying butter makers in that state that labels which do not definitely state the actual weight of the butter put on sale must be altered to conform with the law. The consumer of any article is certainly entitled to the quantity for which he pays.

It may interest housekeepers and others to know that of 700 samples of food commodities gathered early in the summer by the agents of the Dairy and Food bureau seventy-five were samples of tomato catsups, or some other condiment in which benzoate of soda was used as a preservative. The labels said they contained the legal limit of one-tenth of one per cent. Upon being analyzed half of the samples were found to contain more than the legal limit. Many of them contained three times the permitted quantity.

Missouri is making it uncomfortable for hotel keepers and restaurateurs who furnish guests with oleomargarine under the name of genuine butter.

The Pennsylvania grocer who takes the pains to provide himself with a guaranty from every jobber or manufacturer from whom he purchases, a guaranty framed in accordance with the requirements of the act of assembly, and who complies with the law in other particulars, will be in no danger of prosecution.

Food Fairs are becoming increasingly popular. Several have been held in various sections of the country during the present year. Many were made very attractive by the painstaking persons who had charge of the arrangements.

Investigation by the Food and Drug Department of Missouri shows that more than one-half of the vinegar having the color of, and selling for apple vinegar in that state one year ago, was distilled vinegar with an artificial color.

Obedience to law becometh the high and mighty as well as the lowly and humble.

Public interest in the question of food and drink is never likely to decrease. The people recognize the tremendous importance of pure food and unadulterated drink. They will never consent to take the backward track.

There is something to be said in favor of a statute compelling advertisers to adhere to the truth in extolling the virtues of their goods. It is a comparatively easy matter to deceive the busy or the ignorant and it is done to a very large extent in this country today.

The cow is one of humanity's best and most urgently needed friends. She is entitled to the best of treatment all the year round. In Pennsylvania she is getting it, except in isolated instances.

He who makes it a point to secure and consume pure food every day of his life, and not too much of that at any one time, is likely to live longer than his neighbor who is too busy or too careless to take such precautions. This is a truth which is coming more and more into favor with the passage of the years and the increase of knowledge.

The county fairs held throughout Pennsylvania during September and October were generally very largely attended and were profitable both to the visitors and the exhibitors.

Perhaps the laws are not all some of us would have; but what of that? Let us obey them while they are on the statute books and endeavor to replace them by others more to our liking.

The guaranty feature of the Pennsylvania pure food act has been explained frequently. It is of the simplest description, and yet it is essential that it should be regarded by all retailers doing business in this state and care taken to procure it from jobbers or manufacturers from whom purchases are made.

Nobody should object to giving customers full weight. Every man is entitled to all he has paid for. He who pays the price for a pound of butter or of coffee should be given a full pound.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Andrew French, of Minnesota, intimates that some creamery secretaries and managers are engaged in the work of deceiving their patrons and he warns them to desist, advising them that honesty in the creamery business is the best policy, as it is in other occupations.

A new scientific bulletin just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture shows that the tubercle bacilli do not exist in the blood of tuberculous cattle. The authors of the bulletin, Dr. C. E. Schroeder and W. E. Cotton, of the experiment station, believe that while the disease-producing bacteria may originate in the lungs or throat or pass through the body of an animal without losing their virulence, there is no foundation for the newly advanced theory that the bacteria find their way into the blood.

The Denver Field and Farm says that Miss Sylvia E. Bender, of Colorado Springs, probably holds the record for milking the highest number of cows. She milked thirty-eight cows in three hours and thirty-eight minutes.

Hoard's Dairyman says that at the Jean Du Luth farm, Duluth, Minn., the milkers are required to wash their hands in a four per cent. solution of zenoleum or creolin after milking each cow, in order to prevent the spread of cow-pox and other infectious skin diseases from cow to cow by the hands of the milkers. It is said there is not a single sore udder in the herd and the time taken does not average over a minute or so per cow.

The enforcement of the federal food and drugs act has scarcely begun yet, and in some respects it has been badly crippled by recent decisions, but one should be fair enough to acknowledge that it has done much good already and is likely to do more.

The organized movement among the farmers is still marching on. During the year ended September 30, 1909, the Patrons of Husbandry in the United States added 431 new granges to the list and re-organized fifty-six, making a total actual increase of 487.

The cow is of such vital importance in the domestic concerns of the average American family that the condition in which she is kept is of very great interest. It will not do to permit her to lie around in any old place nor is it fair either to her or to the consumer to allow her milk to come in contact with anything likely to contaminate it and injure the child to whom it is fed later on. That is the reason state and city authorities insist so strenuously upon sanitary dairy surroundings.

At the convention of the retail dealers of Washington state among other resolutions adopted was one deploring the high price of food products and asking that the president and the congress of the United States appoint a commissioner to investigate the matter. The convention also condemned false advertising and dishonest weights and measures.

The retail merchants of California held their annual session in Los Angeles this year. The attendance was good and the proceedings interesting. The resolutions condemn trading stamps, short weight packages, free deals of all kinds and the parcels post. A noteworthy address was delivered by M. H. Newmark, a wholesale grocer, who revealed the position of the wholesaler and declared for his necessity as a factor in the business world.

There are trade wars also, as well as newspaper wars, railroad wars and industrial wars. And the results are usually just as destructive as in other wars, all of which are foolish and not one of which accomplishes any good.

At the recent hearing on short weights, appointed by the federal Food and Drug Board at Washington, representatives of the cheese, spice and flavoring extract industries alone appeared. The cheese and spice men claimed that their goods were properly labeled when put up but lose weight from various causes. The spice men said the weight of their goods depended to a large extent upon the elevation at which the grocer stored their goods. The extract men admitted that there was much short weight extract on the market and blamed it on the bottlers. The board reserved its decision.

Des Moines, Iowa, is about to enact an ordinance dealing with the sale of meat and food products. An inspector is to be appointed without whose stamp of approval the sale of meats will be unlawful.

Out in Utah a dealer who had been found guilty of violating the pure food law of the state because he had used sodium sulphite in preserving meat sold in his store is going to appeal the case holding that the law is unconstitutional.

The supreme court of Ohio has decided that a Cleveland dealer who was fined $10 for an alleged adulteration of maple sugar must pay his fine.

The grocers of Youngstown, Ohio, are trying to prove that the city ordinance compelling grocers to cover all green goods and fruit exhibited out of doors is unconstitutional. They claim that it is unjust because it discriminates against them and in favor of the hucksters who are not compelled to cover their goods.

The Pennsylvania Pure Butter Association and the Pennsylvania State Grange have joined forces in a crusade against the persons who are engaged in the sale of oleomargarine under the guise of butter. It is said that Senator Penrose has undertaken to prepare and introduce the bill in congress. It will provide for the severe punishment of venders of counterfeit butter.

Of course if a law is unjust, oppressive and unconstitutional it should be brought to the test. Nevertheless, as a rule, it is less expensive to conform to the provisions of most acts of legislatures or congress.

A moderate profit is the right of every business man. He would be an unreasonable citizen who would refuse to concede that much.

Presently the time will arrive when the Golden Rule will govern the actions of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, not to mention customers. Then there will be few prosecutions because there will be few deceptions.

Tradesmen tell that the apple crop is going to be light and the cost correspondingly high.

Here is an item from the American Grocer which confirms a belief frequently aired in this Bulletin: "A grocer in a New York village kept cheap canned goods and the people first kicked at quality, then stopped using them. A canner sent a supply of high grade goods and told him to put a good price on them. This year he will buy 400 cases."

Cheap goods are usually goods that dissatisfy the purchaser. Then he stops buying that particular brand. He feels that he is entitled to something better.

Food manufacturers and retailers should sympathize with each other and with the consumer also.

The housekeeper who telephones her orders finds that method very convenient and a wonderful time-saver but the results are not always as beneficial as a personal visit to the grocer or the butcher at his place of business.

The guaranty feature of the act of assembly regulating the sale of foodstuffs in this state was intended to protect the honest grocer from punishment for the sins of those from whom his goods were purchased. But when he fails to take advantage of this protection he cannot justly blame anybody but himself.

The consumer is frequently compelled to purchase the cheaper products for the reason that his income is so modest as to forbid indulgence in luxuries or even in high priced necessities. He is entitled to the worth of his money and it is the duty of the state to see that he gets it.

The meat inspection bureau of Pennsylvania has done a splendidly useful work since it was created. It has rendered the consumer reasonable protection and will continue to do so. Such agencies for the benefit of all the people are popular in proportion as the value of their work becomes known to the rank and file.

The agitation against the use of adulterants or preservatives in food stuffs has already done a great deal of good. It is preparing the way for an even better condition of affairs in the state and the nation. Education in this direction has made great progress during the last few years. Notwithstanding the evident desire of some officials to move backwards the people will not have it so. The signs of the times do not look particularly propitious in the nation, but the clouds will clear away and the sun of progress will illuminate the dark places.

The consumer who pays a stiff price for eggs has a right to the genuine article. It is the intention of the dairy and food bureau of Pennsylvania to give the violator of law in this respect a few mighty unpleasant half hours. Those who wilfully sell rotten eggs deserve no consideration from the courts or the public.

The superior quality of the milk now sold in this commonwealth has done a great deal for the babies. And therefore for the coming generation.

Hoard's Dairyman, published at Fort Atkinson, Wis., and edited by ex-Governor W. D. Hoard, is one of the most instructive and interesting publications coming to the Bulletin's table. As its name indicates, it is devoted to the interests of the dairyman and the farmer. The able senior editor is assisted by almost a dozen of the most eminent men of this country and Canada and the reader finds in every number of the publication many articles of great value. This Bulletin acknowledges its obligations to Hoard's Dairyman and wishes it and its editor and his assistant the best of fortunes.

According to the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle the enforcement of the pure food laws of the several states and the show of activity by the federal government in the enforcement of the food and drugs act have combined to make the Dominion of Canada the dumping ground for much impure food. This is especially true of spices. Out of 145 samples of ground cloves collected in various localities only 74 were genuine. Chickory and roasted grain are frequently found in coffee. Looks as though Canada, in sheer self-defense, will be compelled to enact a stringent pure food law.

While some violators of law manage to escape for many months, yet the majority are picked up very soon after they enter upon a career of evasion and very few escape entirely. It is best for anyone to inquire what the law is and to pay it the tribute of obedience.

At intervals one who follows the day's news observes that retail dealers in this or that locality are gathered in for carelessly violating the statutes. Many made no effort to secure the guaranty provided for by the act of assembly and meant to take care of them. For those who do not try to learn and who exercise no prudence there remains the imminent prospect of suffering.

Uniformity of action between the federal government and the several states in the matter of legislation concerning the food or the beverages of the people is a consummation devoutly to be wished for. Nevertheless it is going to be exceedingly difficult of attainment. When forty-seven separate and independent entities undertake to legislate about the same subject local conditions are certain to intervene to produce many dissimilarities. Yet nobody need despair. Uniformity is not impossible; it is merely improbable.

SOME FEATURES OF SECRETARY WILSON'S WORK.

Some reference is made elsewhere to the last annual report of Secretary Wilson, of the Federal Department of Agriculture, with reference to the value of the year's crops and the price of meat. In the following brief articles the reader will find short narratives of some features of the work of this extremely important department of our government. That it is a considerable force in the performance of the people's work is demonstrated by the fact that the total number of its officials and employees is now 11,140, a net increase of 740 during the year.

OBJECT LESSON ROADS.

The office of public roads has continued to aid road improvement by studies, experiments and object lesson work. Over $16,000 was expended in object lesson road work on sixty-nine sections of road, with a total surface area of 661,992 square yards. The operations covered macadam, gravel, earth, shell, sand-clay and burnt-clay roads, and treatment with asphaltic oils.

MEAT INSPECTION.

The Bureau of Animal Industry accomplishes much, not only for the live-stock industry, but for the health of the people, especially through meat inspection and work for a purer milk. The inspection of meat was conducted at 876 establishments, located in 240 cities and towns, an increase of 89 establishments and 29 cities and towns. There were inspected after slaughter, 55,671,367 animals of which 7,325,337 were cattle; 2,046,713 calves; 35,427,321 hogs; 10,802,903 sheep, and 69,193 goats. Of these 141,085 carcasses and 899,628 parts of carcasses were condemned. Tuberculosis seems to have been the principal cause for condemnation. In addition there were condemned for sanitary reasons on re-inspection more than 11,000,000 pounds of meat products.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE.

The outbreak of foot and mouth disease caused a considerable reduction in the exportation of cattle and sheep. Expert inspections numbered 397,925, including re-inspections of 227,255 animals for export from the United States. During the year 473 inspections of vessels carrying live stock were made. In stamping out foot and mouth diseases 3,636 animals were slaughtered, the value of which was $90,033.18. The amount expended for the eradication of the disease was kept within the special appropriation of $300,000.

WORK FOR PURE FOOD AND DRUGS.

The Agricultural Department claims to have made a great forward movement in enforcing the food and drugs act. It now has branch laboratories for the examination of samples at twenty-one of the leading commercial centres, about one-half of these being seaport cities. Samples of foods and drugs imported from foreign countries are taken by agents of the Treasury Department. Inspectors of the Bureau of Chemistry collect samples of domestic products and inspect factories. The number of factories inspected during the year was 1,300, and the number of samples of domestic products taken was 15,000. Nearly 10,000 of these were examined in the laboratories and about 2,000 were forwarded to the department for re-examination. Of the imported products more than 8,000 samples were taken; 2,500 of these were sent to Washington for re-examination.

EDUCATING THE MANUFACTURERS.

The willingness of manufacturers to comply with the law and to co-operate with the department has made its work largely educational. A great volume of inquiries has come to the department and many perplexing questions have been raised. To grapple with these questions the department has a Board of Food and Drug Inspection which not only investigates all these difficult questions but holds public hearings at which all persons who may be interested can appear and make statements. When decisions are reached they are printed and sent out for the guidance of all whose interests are affected. When cases are heard in the courts the department prints notices of the judgments rendered and sends these out for the instruction and guidance of manufacturers.

ENFORCING THE PURE FOOD LAW.

While the manufacturers and jobbers have shown great disposition to comply with the department's rulings, and the department has endeavored to act without harshness, some flagrant violations of the law have occurred and prosecution of the violators has been vigorous. The Department Solicitor has prepared and reported to the Attorney General 494 cases and of those tried but two were lost. Convictions and fines aggregating over $2,000 were secured in 85 cases and in 98 cases decrees of condemnation and forfeiture were issued, covering many tons of foods and drugs. As a result of these operations, misbranded and adulterated products are rapidly disappearing from interstate commerce. So declares Secretary Wilson.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN IMPORTED PRODUCTS.

By careful inspection of foods and drugs imported from foreign countries, and a vigorous enforcement of the law, marked improvement in the character of the imports has been secured, and very few fraudulent or misbranded articles have been offered for import.

THE REFEREE BOARD.

This is what Secretary Wilson has to say about a matter that has created fierce controversy in this country and concerning which opinions are still as much divided as they were before the decision of the "board of eminent scientific men" was made public: The use of preservatives which may be injurious to health is one of the largest and most perplexing questions arising under the food and drugs act. In order to determine the effect of preservatives on health, a board of eminent scientific men was appointed, and these are testing the various preservatives in actual experiments with human subjects. So far only one experiment has been completed, that with sodium benzoate. The decision which has been published declares this preservative to be non-injurious, and it may be used without violation of law, provided the percentage used appears on the labels attached to the packages.

THE RISE OF THE PRESCRIPTION SCHEME.

Since the passage of the food and drugs act, says the Secretary of Agriculture, the "prescription scheme" has arisen. Under this plan of selling proprietary medicines, a prescription is sent through the mails. The prescription will contain several well known medicinal agents, but also a coined name of some unknown product. To fill the prescription the recipient must purchase the agent sold under the coined name. Analyses of these products have shown that they usually consist of the cheapest and commonest of ingredients, though advertised as panaceas for various diseases. Such remedies are plainly fraudulent, since they have no curative properties for the diseases for which they are recommended.

HEADACHE REMEDIES.

An investigation of the effects of acetanilid, antipyrin and phenacetin, drugs commonly used in headache remedies of the present day, showed that the indiscriminate use of remedies containing these drugs, without the advice of a physician, frequently produces poisoning, a drug habit or, in some cases, death.

RELATION OF THE CONSUMER TO THE PURE FOOD LAW.

[At the annual meeting of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women held in Harrisburg, Wednesday, November 10, Dr. William Frear, of State College, made an interesting address, of which the following is a brief synopsis:]

The summer and fall of 1905 was an important crisis in the legislative history of the country. For years the National Pure Food and Drug congress and the State food executives had been working for the passage of a National food law against the adulteration and misbranding of the foods and drugs subject to interstate commerce. Their efforts were ineffectual; though temporary enactments governing imports and some exports and certain provisions against special phases of misbranding had been secured, the National legislature had failed to embody into law the fundamental principles, the adoption of which was sought. Powerful influences against the legislation sought were brought to bear by business interests. Our national representatives were uncertain whether their constituents were earnestly enough in favor of a National pure food law of general scope to support them under the attack of the hostile forces.

At this critical time the National Federation of Women's clubs lent its aid in support of the measure and every mail brought to the president's desk missives that came from Women's clubs in every part of the land, urging in no uncertain tone his advocacy of the pending bill.

And the women without votes, were able to bring to pass that which the men, with all the votes they could muster, had not been able to accomplish. The president voiced to Congress in his message the women's desire and set himself to the fulfillment of their will. Some time later he put the finishing touches to the Food and Drug acts of 1906 and to the Meat Inspection act, by attaching his signature.

The women of America have lent their aid in securing laws against the adulteration and misbranding of foods but their work in the matter is not yet done. Responsibility still rests upon them. Some one has said, "The hands that rock the cradle rules the world," but let us not forget the influence of the hand that sets the table. By the change of condition the board has replaced the fireside as the chief, and sometimes almost the only family gathering place. Not only does the wise housewife fix, in the setting of her table, the conditions of family cheer, but also those of health; for while disease lies in lurk every hour out of the twenty-four, at the well ordered table the body is provided with wholesome nourishment and the mind with hope and cheer, the fortification and the weapons with which the myriad foes are to be resisted and overcome.

As we read of the swift movements and hot battles of the ragged army of the Po, organized and animated with supreme courage by the military genius of Napoleon, we sometimes regard it as a signal illustration of the triumph of the mind, but it was the same Napoleon who enforced the importance of the commissariat as an essential to military successes, in the terse sentence, "An army lives upon its belly." Of all the parts of the wonderful prayer of mankind, rounded out by the lips of our Master that portion which statesmen and rulers have been taught by stern lessons to heed most closely is the phrase, "Give us this day our daily bread."

Woman is the arbitrator in the selection of food for the family. When she accepts the manufacturer is encouraged and enriched. When she rejects he is ruined unless he remodels his plans so as to make products she will accept. If she does not perform this function and qualify herself for its exercise, the family will remain the victim of the ignorant and the prey of the greedy. Society has appointed no one to take her place. All that the pure food laws have provided is some assistance to her in this department of her work.

How fully this is true will be perceived upon consideration of the general food laws which prohibit the adulteration and misbranding of foods and drugs, define the terms adulteration and misbranding, fix penalties for violation of the law and designate some officer or officers for its enforcement.

The term "food" is not defined alike in all the laws. In this State it includes any article used as an ingredient in the preparation of food as well as the finished product. The term "drug" is defined in the National act so as to include preparations for external use as well as those intended for internal administration.

Adulteration is defined in most of the acts so as to cover the dilution of an article, the removal of valuable materials therefrom, the substitution of other substances, the sale of rotten, decomposed or contaminated food, the external treatment of an article by coloring, bleaching, coating, powdering or polishing, whereby it is made to appear better or other than it really is, and finally, the addition of poisonous or injurious articles to food which may cause it to become injurious or unwholesome.

The Legislature of Pennsylvania, in the exercise of its constitutional police powers, has assumed the responsibility of prohibiting as injurious a long list of chemical preservatives, bleaching substances and artificial sweeteners.

The fact of adulteration is not readily ascertained by casual inspection of the article, and the injury is one from which the consumer cannot easily protect herself. The law has wisely granted to the Food Commissioner the authority to employ experts by whom a systematic and constant examination is made of the foods on sale in the Commonwealth, to the end that the facts may be published for the information of the consumer and the violators of the law may be punished.

Misbranding is defined in such a manner as to include any false statement upon the label of an article, covering the use of any representations, designs or devices that may deceive the purchaser.

It is at this point that the purchaser is to exercise her individual responsibility. It is assumed that she is able to read and will read the labels on the food she buys. The law does not, except in a few cases, require that foods be labeled, nor prescribe the facts that are to be set forth on the label. The laws in this particular are, in fact, negative in character, and recognize that the buyer has responsibilities as well as the seller. The principle is also recognized that the maker of proprietary articles is not obliged to set forth the composition or process of manufacture of his products. Except in the case of proprietary medicines containing habit forming drugs the National law requires the kind or kinds of such drugs shall be set forth upon the label. You will understand that the food law is not designated to relieve you of all responsibility for the protection of your household against undesirable foods. It simply provides a guide to aid you where the ordinary skill and experience are insufficient for the purpose. It is urged that you make it a part of your system of buying to read carefully and fully the labels on the foods you buy. This is one part of your duty in relation to the food laws. It is clear that the housewife cannot make the most of the facts set forth on the food labels unless she acquaints herself more exactly than is common with the meanings of the terms used.

Another fact regarding the law requires notice: In case an article is a mixture, a compound or a blend, and is so marked on the label, the law requires only that the article be not spoiled nor have received an addition of a poisonous or injurious substance. These words appearing upon the label warn the buyer of the indefinite nature of the commodity. The term "blend" is particularly defined to mean "a mixture of like substances, not excluding harmless flavoring and coloring matter used for flavorings and coloring only." Thus far the phrase "like substances" has been construed so narrowly as to make this definition conform to the spirit of the law and to distinguish blends from compounds.

A few examples will serve to illustrate points regarding the careful reading of labels. Some meat packing establishments mix starch and water in their sausage meat in lieu of more expensive ingredients, the added starch being capable of holding several times its own weight of water. The regulations of the United States meat inspection service have permitted the use of the words "sausage with cereals" as the name for such products. The buyer will bear in mind that in all cases where this word appears she may be paying meat prices for water. The use of geographical names for articles made in some other locality than that which the name indicates is contrary to the National Food act. For instance it is unlawful to affix to a cheese made in America the name "Camebert," or to a California olive oil the name of an Italian locality. In some cases the pulp used in the manufacture of tomato ketchup is made from the waste of the cannery and the consumer will do well to question at once a ketchup label on which it is stated that this "ketchup is made up of whole tomatoes, pieces of tomatoes, etc." Ketchup is also sometimes thickened and made smooth by the use of starch, which if used should be declared upon the label. It is commonly the case that ketchup to which benzoate of soda has been added as a preservative, contains more water than that made without such addition. When the words "corn syrup" appear upon a label the buyer should understand that these words mean glucose and not a saccharine juice of the corn boiled down to a syrup consistency; that the kind of sugar present is very different than that contained in rock, cane, sorghum and maple syrup. Attention was also called to the low flavor and low table value of many jellies of fruits and to the sale of imitation flavoring extracts.

The food laws have been placed upon the statute books because of a very deep and widespread sentiment against the continuance of grave economic sanitary and moral evils. The laws are designed to prohibit. They are general in character and much is left to the judgment of the executive officers and the courts to secure their enforcement in full spirit. We must not blind ourselves to the fact that the technical enforcement of such laws will result in needless hardships of the trade and in the final revulsion of sentiment. Executive officers should not be harshly judged when they exercise a reasonable discretion to avoid such over technical exercises of their offices. On the other hand these officers are subject to a constant pressure often very powerfully applied, to assign too broad meanings to trade names, so as to permit the sale under such names of materials which the consumer would not regard as properly designated thereby.

Prosecutions for alleged offenses against these laws must be made and convictions secured before the courts in order that the punishments may be visited upon the violators of these laws. The only way to make these laws effective and to continue their effectiveness is to maintain a sound, strong public sentiment in favor of such laws. The food control officer really has little official responsibility for the development of such sentiment. It rests primarily with the individual citizen, and in consequence of the division of duties and responsibilities in the home, the chief responsibility for the creation and maintenance of such sentiment devolves upon the housewife. If she does not interest herself in these matters, if she does not do her part in the protection of the household, if she does not support by her influence, the food control officer and the public press in its important work of diffusing information upon the subject to the general public, public sentiment cannot be maintained at the proper level, and these laws will lack the support necessary for their effective operation.

SHOULD RETAIL GROCERS BE LICENSED?

The following communication was sent to Commissioner Foust in the form of a personal letter and without the slightest expectation upon the part of its author that any part of it would see the light of day. We imagine, however, that its suggestions will possess a novel interest for the grocers of Pennsylvania and other states and possibly for some of their patrons. Without disclosing the identity of the writer we give some extracts from his letter. Perhaps other readers may wish to discuss the same question or some phase of it:

"Can you inform me what progress has been made in Pennsylvania toward licensing retail grocery stores? Some time ago I read of a movement along that line in your State. This is a subject in which I am very much interested and if you can give me any information as to what, if any, progress has been made I shall appreciate it very much.

"It has long seemed to me that there should be restrictions placed on the retail grocery business, some method by which only those competent to conduct grocery stores, could run them. We all know that foods are not as cleanly handled as they ought to be; that there are ever so many dirty stores; that cheap foods are sold by ignorant grocers with the assurance that they are of excellent quality; that the sanitary conditions are not what they should be, whole families living in adjoining rooms, and so on.

"It has long seemed to some of us that only persons who have had a previous training in the grocery business of, say two or three years, should be allowed to conduct grocery stores. That is to say, that it wouldn't be a bad idea if in the future both grocers and those who wait on the trade, had to pass an examination as to knowledge of the business. Are not the people, as far as health is concerned, largely what the grocers make them? If the grocer sells good food, as a rule, not the cheapest kind of compound, are not the people benefited, while on the other hand, if the grocer sells what he can buy at the cheapest price, are not the people injured?

Would not the public be able to buy good foods at lower prices if, ten years from now, restrictive measures resulted in reducing the number of stores 20 per cent., and wouldn't such a system draw to it a better class of men than are now engaged in the grocery business? Nearly all other lines of business have some restrictive feature. A farmer or sea captain who wants to go into business can become a real estate agent, an insurance agent or run a grocery store. He cannot become a plumber, druggist, electrician, gas fitter, or, in some states, even a barber, without a license, first having shown himself to be proficient."

Thus far no legislation has been accomplished in Pennsylvania along the line indicated by the author of the foregoing letter. The Bulletin knows of no person who is proposing such legislation in the future. It may surprise our correspondent to be told this, but, the truth is, an effort of the sort indicated might contain considerable political dynamite. The effort to make an arbitrary reduction in the number of grocers in the state might accomplish all the good things suggested, but it would be antagonized by the entire grocer force of the State and by all their friends. It is probably true that a reduction in the number of local dealers would work in the direction of greater efficiency and perhaps it might result in cheaper groceries, but then it might not work that way at all. Many of the people would look at the effort to eliminate a certain proportion of existing grocers as an insidious scheme of the trusts, and that suggestion would be enough to make an end of the project. At present the Bulletin will keep the middle of the road.

It is quite true, however, that a higher average of intelligence among retail grocers would result beneficially for dealers and patrons alike. No person should be permitted to go into business in this State who is unable to read the food laws and other acts placed on the statute books by the Legislature. Many of those who get into the toils of the law for unlawful selling would have escaped trouble and expense if they had been able to comprehend the meaning of those provisions which were placed in the law for their special benefit. At least it seems incredible that an ordinarily prudent business man would ignore the plain directions of the law if he comprehended them.

It is also true, as our correspondent suggests, that grocers who purchase the cheapest goods and sell them to their customers as the best do a great wrong to themselves and the consuming public. Every grocer must depend to a very large extent upon the dealer from whom he makes his purchases; he should select a house that has an established reputation and also insist upon having a legal guaranty accompany each invoice of goods. If he does this he is not likely to fall into trouble and he will soon have a goodly company of pleased patrons.

PRESERVATIVES IN BUTTER.

The New York Produce Review and American Creamery, under the above heading, makes an extract from a recent article by one London M. Douglas, a resident of Glasgow, Scotland, and a lecturer on food industries. The article gives his impressions of the Second International Food Congress held not long ago in Paris. The extract follows:

"One of the most important discussions took place concerning dairy produce and the use of preservative in butter and other produce. It was decreed that 'boron preservatives' were not only allowable, but were absolutely necessary in the manufacture of butter. It was also held that the addition of such a preservative should not require to be declared in future, any more than the presence of salt would require to be declared, and thus the addition of preservative would be reduced to the regular operations recognized as being essential to the good conduct of the butter industry. It was also decreed that the standard water contents of butter should be raised from 16 to 18 per cent."

The journal with the long name has finally permitted itself to be convinced that "the tendency of scientific thought in connection with legislative control of methods of food preparation is toward a recognition of the value of harmless preservatives." It speaks about "the economic necessity of carrying prepared food from one season to another, and of transporting for long distances, and believes this makes the question one of great importance. It declares that "in former discussions of the question" it has always opposed the use of preservatives of any kind in butter, but it is now "inclined to believe that legal restrictions should, in this respect, be modified to permit the use of certain preservatives now pretty well known to be harmless in the small quantity necessary."

"Whatever may be the 'tendency of scientific thought' in connection with the use of preservatives of any sort in the manufacture of food products, it is clear to this Bulletin that the tendency of popular thought is decidedly away from such use. It does not make a particle of difference how many eminent scientists may give the preservatives a good character, the rank and file of the people will have none of them. If they eat articles containing these preservatives it is either because they are careless about the examination of labels or are not sufficiently well-informed to know how or where to look for the danger signal.

This Bulletin, therefore, representing the popular thought, as it firmly believes, is radically opposed to the use of any sort of preservative in butter for the purpose of making old butter taste like fresh, or for any other purpose. It would be a terrible blunder if the butter makers of the country were to yield to this temptation.

VALUE OF FARM PRODUCTS IN 1909.

Most prosperous of all years is the place to which 1909 is entitled in agriculture, declares the Secretary of Agriculture in his thirteenth annual report. The value of farm products is so incomprehensively large that it has become merely a row of figures. For this year it is $8,760,000,000, a gain of $869,000,000 over 1908. The value of the products has nearly doubled in ten years. The report says: "Eleven years of agriculture, beginning with a production of $4,417,000,000 and ending with $8,760,000,000! A sum of $70,000,000,000 for the period! It has paid off mortgages, it has established banks, it has made better homes, it has helped to make the farmer a citizen of the world, and it has provided him with means for improving his soil and making it more productive."

The most striking fact in the world's agriculture is the value of the corn crop for 1909, which is about $1,720,000,000. It very nearly equals the value of the clothing and the personal adornments of 76,000,000 people according to the census of 1900. The gold and silver coin and bullion of the United States are not now of greater value. It has grown up from the soil and out of the air in 120 days—$15,000,000 a day for one crop, nearly enough for two Dreadnoughts daily for peace or war. This crop exceeds in value the average of the crops of the preceding five years by 36 per cent.

Cotton is now the second crop in value, and this year's cotton crop is easily the most valuable one to the farmer that has been produced. With cotton lint selling at 13.7 cents on the farm November 1, and with cotton seed selling for about $25 per ton, the lint and seed of this crop are worth about $850,000,000 to the farmer. No cotton crop since 1873 has been sold by farmers for as high a price as this one.

Third in value is wheat, worth about $725,000,000 at the farm, and this largely exceeds all previous values. The November farm price was almost an even dollar a bushel, a price which has not been equalled since 1881. This is the third wheat crop in point of size, with 725,000,000 bushels.

The hay crop is valued at $665,000,000; oats at $400,000,000; potatoes at $212,000,000 and tobacco at nearly $100,000,000. Beet and cane sugar and molasses and syrup, from farm and factory, will reach the total of about $95,000,000. The barley crop is worth $88,000,000, flaxseed, $36,000,000 and 1,000,000,000 pounds of rice $25,000,000.

Surely the American farmer has no reason to complain about the return which his industry has brought him in 1909. Quite the contrary.

OLEOMARGARINE VERSUS BUTTER.

The laws of the State of Pennsylvania do not interfere in any way with the sale of oleomargarine when it is placed on the market under its own name and when no effort is made to sell it as butter. The national law is to the same intent. The heavy federal tax upon colored oleomargarine is the result of an effort to discourage the manufacture of the colored article for the reason that persistent and extended efforts have been made and are now being made to deceive the buyer into the belief that he is buying butter when in fact he is getting nothing but oleomargarine colored and put up in exact imitation of yellow butter. The State recognizes that the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine is a lawful business. Its efforts are confined to preventing deception. It is not oleomargarine that has been condemned by this Bulletin; it is the unlawful and deceptive methods of those who persist in deceiving the consumer. So long as this practice goes on there will be trouble. When the manufacturers of this article and the venders thereof come out in the open, as many dealers are doing, and advertise it in such plain language that nobody can be deceived, the trouble between the State and the dealers will be at an end.

The trouble is that men will persist in violating law. Quite recently there have been many convictions in the Allegheny county courts of various persons who either thoughtlessly or intentionally served their patrons with oleomargarine which the customers believed to be butter. If the hotel and restaurant men who fell into the clutches of the law had been wise enough to warn their patrons that they were eating oleomargarine and not butter, conspicuously labeling the oleo, the State would have found no fault with them. If the grocers and other dealers whose patrons supposed they were buying butter had been careful to disillusionize those customers there could have been no convictions. Unfortunately for the defendants it was shown that they had done nothing of the sort. They had been guilty of deception. The pure food laws, national and State, do not permit this. It is held that the customer has a right to know the exact truth, so far as the dealer can impart it to him. Those who catch the purport of the act and who are wise enough to shape their course accordingly are in no danger. Who will hold that a law which punishes only the guilty is an unjust law? Surely nobody who is interested in securing pure food for his family and himself.

FAKE FOODS AND MEDICINES.

The Secretary of Agriculture suggests in one of the sections of his interesting report copied in this number of the Bulletin that since the food and drugs act became a law some adventurers have been graciously advertising their willing eagerness to send free of charge to all applicants the formula for a very valuable medicine. When the formula arrives it contains one ingredient that can be obtained of nobody but the advertiser. This branch of the art of humbugging the public may have sprung into renewed activity recently, but it was not wholly unknown fifty years ago. It must be considerably longer than that since "an old retired physician whose sands of life have nearly run out," began to fill the newspapers of that earlier day with his charitable desire to help the sufferer by sending free of charge a valuable prescription. Persons who tried the old physician tell us that the method pursued by him was precisely that described by Secretary Wilson. So it is proved once more that there is nothing new under the sun, nothing new even by way of humbugging the sons and daughters of men.

And yet it is positively surprising how many men and women who ought to know better fall easy victims to the cunning advertiser. It looks so cheap; all one has to do is to send one's name and address and the thing is done. But in most instances he who indulges in the initial nibble ends by swallowing the whole hook. The Bulletin advises its readers to fight shy of all drugs or other preparations that are recommended by strangers and to ask the advice of the family physician before taking anything that is not positively known to be harmless. This advice also applies to the headache powders mentioned by the Secretary of Agriculture. The matter of proper medicine is quite as important as that of pure food and it should be given similar attention. When it comes to buying food one does well to patronize a grocer in whom one feels persuaded it is safe to trust. For it is a well known fact that there are grocers and grocers and the family is not safe that falls into the hands of a dealer in foodstuffs who is moved solely by the desire to add to his profits. Neither is the man who indulges in a blind credulity in a vender of unknown medicines. The health is one of man's most precious possessions. It is injured by evil food and poisonous drugs. The wise person always knows what he is doing; he declines to take a leap in the dark in either the matter of food or medicine. In imitating his conduct one treads the path of safety.

SECRETARY WILSON ON MEAT PRICES.

Secretary Wilson has just finished a unique investigation made for the purpose of his report relating to the increase of wholesale prices of beef when sold at retail. Through employes of the Bureau of Animal Industry inquiries were made in 50 cities—large, medium and small—in all parts of the country. A schedule was prepared to record the actual experiences of retailers in buying and selling a carcass or half carcass of beef, and among the facts ascertained were the weight and retail price of every cut for which a uniform price was charged by the retail dealer. Thus it became possible not only to compare high-priced and low-priced cuts, but also to compute accurately the total retail price per pound and consumers' cost of the beef piece for which the wholesale price per pound and cost of the entire piece had been reported.

For the 50 cities the total retail cost charged to customers above the wholesale cost paid by the retailers is 38 per cent. In five cities the rate of increase is 20 per cent. or under; in 10 cities, 21 to 30 per cent.; in 12 cities, 31 to 40 per cent.; in 12 cities, 41 to 50 per cent.; and in 11 cities, over 50 per cent.

The average retail price exceeded the average wholesale price by 31.4 per cent. in the North Atlantic States; by 38 per cent. in the South Atlantic; by 38 per cent. in the North Central; 39.4 per cent. in the Western, and the highest increase was found in the South Central States, 54 per cent.

A gross profit of 20 per cent. was found in New York City and in Philadelphia, 28 per cent. in Buffalo, N. Y., 36 per cent. in Boston, Mass., 17 per cent. in Baltimore, Md., 42 per cent. in Washington, D. C., 46 per cent. in Chicago, Ill., 25 per cent. in Cincinnati, Ohio, 23 per cent. in Omaha, Nebr., 28 per cent. in Kansas City, Mo., 27 and 35 per cent. in Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., 40 per cent. in Milwaukee, Wis., and Detroit, Mich., 39 per cent. in St. Louis, Mo., 64 per cent. in Mobile, Ala., 39 per cent. in San Francisco, 24 per cent. in Seattle, and 37 per cent. in Denver, Colo.

The lower the grade of beef the greater the percentage of gross profit. In Boston, for illustration, the rate of gross profit is nearly twice as great for beef costing 8 cents at wholesale as for beef costing 11 and 11½ cents. Low-priced beef is marked up nearly twice as much relatively as high-priced beef. In other words, perhaps it is a safe inference that the poor people pay nearly twice as much profit as the well-to-do people pay.

The retailer's delivery service is costly, however, and the retail business is overdone. The multiplication of small shops is a burden to consumers and no source of riches to the small shopkeepers. When twenty or more small shops divide the retail business within an area that could be served by one large shop, the expenses of the many shops for labor, horses, rent and other things, that are in excess of what would be sufficient for the one shop, must go into the retail prices of the meat sold.

Furthermore, customers choose the higher priced cuts of meats. Steaks and roasts are the preference, and these must have names that are regarded as respectable. Consequently, one fifth of the carcass is bought at the highest price—porterhouse steaks at prices as high as 25 and 30 cents a pound, sirloin at 20 to 25 cents, and rib roasts at 20 cents.

The ascending prices of meat suggest inquiry as to whether the prices of the farmer's beef cattle and hogs have increased at the farm in the same degree that meat has to the consumer. For the purpose of making comparisons, the mean price level of 1896-1900, a period of comparatively low prices, is adopted as a base line, represented by 100, and for each animal and commodity this price level is computed.

The farmer has failed to receive a share of higher beef prices with regard to the raw animal. The price level of two-year-old steers at the farm being regarded as 100 for 1896-1900, the price of such steers rose to 135.9 in 1900, declined to 85.5 in 1905, and rose to 100.8 in 1909, all for the date of January 1 and for prices at the farm, substantially before corn feeding had begun.

The price of corn in 1909 at the farm is represented by 218.6 compared with 100 for the price level of 1896-1900, and the price of the best native steers at the Chicago Stock Yards in the same year is 139.9, which is much above the "index-number" for the price of the animal at the farm and much below the price of corn at the farm. The inference is that the farmer gets some return for the high-priced corn that he feeds to his steers, but not a return equal to 60 cents a bushel for his corn, which is the price for the last two years. As for the unfed steer, it does not participate in the upward movement of prices in its farm value.

The wholesale prices of fresh beef carcasses have increased in about the same degree that the prices of steers have at the stock yards, and the retail prices of fresh beef have kept pace with the wholesale prices.

The increasing prices of fresh beef, therefore, are due to increasing prices of animals at the stock yards, and this is explained by the abnormal circumstances to which the raising of beef animals has been subject in recent years.

There has been a breaking up of range herds consequent upon the enforcement of the "no-fence" law by the National Government and by encroachments of the settlers upon the ranges, made possible by the practice of "dry farming." Not all of the cattle have gone directly from the ranges to the slaughterhouses; a great portion of them has gone to farms for maturing and finishing, largely upon corn. This extra demand on the corn crop is reflected in corn prices, which are now higher than they have been since the records of the Department of Agriculture began, in 1866, except for 1881.

Half a dozen years of this abnormal movement of beef cattle from ranges to the great markets began to tell upon the supply in 1908, when the deliveries fell off in a marked degree, and the decrease continued in 1909.

The farmer's situation with regard to hogs is more fair to the farmer than the cattle situation is, but still it is apparent that during the last three years the price of corn has been too high for the price of hogs. The relative price of hogs on the farm January 1, 1909, was 147.3 as compared with 100 for the mean price of 1896-1900, and the average cost of all hogs slaughtered at principle markets in the year before was 148.1, or about the same as the farm price. The price of dressed hogs of 160 pounds in New York in 1908, stands at 145.7; and the carcasses of market pigs at Chicago at 148.4, which is approximately the number representing the relative retail price of fresh pork.

In the case of hogs, therefore, the farmer has fully participated in the rising prices, whereas in the case of the farmer's cattle the unfed animals are barely as valuable as they were 9 to 14 years ago, and had not the price of corn ascended to a high figure, perhaps he would not have shared in the higher beef prices.

The foregoing conclusions are for fresh meat. The prices of cured and prepared meats have increased in much greater degree than the prices of other meat have increased, both for beef and pork. These cured meats include bacon, pickled beef, pickled pork and lard.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The pure food cause may have its misadventures, but it will win out.

Wonderful progress has been made during the last decade and advance will continue.

The spirit of the people has been stirred up against abuses by some conscienceless manufacturers.

The prudent housewife has grasped the truth that her husband and children are entitled to the best that's going.

The growing sturdiness of the children and the good humor of the husband are satisfactory results of pure food.

Once having tasted the best the average family is never willing to be satisfied with inferior products on their table.

There is a taste in food as there is in literature. Those who are not acquainted with the good are satisfied with the inferior.

Once lead a child into the joys of the best literature or into the enjoyment of proper food and you have won its allegiance for the best.

The good housewife who is likewise vigilant and careful is the most potent friend and advocate of correct food and of the right sort of laws.

That is one reason why every girl destined to be the head of a family should be thoroughly trained in proper methods of selecting foods.

Many a man's life has been added to by the vigilance and the expert knowledge of his wife. She has known food and the man and fitted one to the other.

The girl who turns up her delicate nose at the suggestion that it is her duty to qualify herself as a food expert for the sake of her possible children, makes a big blunder.

The most effective agent of humanity is the enforcement of reasonable State and Federal pure food laws is the woman of the house who has qualified herself to pass upon food.

Men and women have plenty of difficulties to contend with in their little journey through the world. While here they are entitled to good and wholesome food and the law is on their side.

Much of the infant mortality which appals the world is due to the ignorance or the carelessness of the mothers of the little ones. What is needed is a campaign of education in that direction.

Much uproar has been occasioned by differences of opinion concerning "practical education and its actual meaning. One bit of practical education that should no longer be neglected is the housewifely instruction of the girl.

The woman who knows a good deal about foods and their preparation is pretty certain to be the happy queen of a well pleased family and to be very useful.

There is more in the food problem than some folks imagine. Sometimes poor food badly cooked drives the husband and father into dyspepsia and then into evil habits. It is not always the fault of the man if there is domestic unhappiness.

When the woman who is the head of the house's culinary department is a food expert and when she uses her knowledge to the best advantage in the purchase of the family supplies she frequently does a great deal in a very quiet way to increase the sum of happiness.

It is a reasonable proposition that the husband and father, who is the wage-earner should endeavor to provide such a reasonable support for that family as would make possible the purchase of food that has the quality of purity. All others are dangerous.

The progress already made by the nation and many of the states in pure food legislation is very satisfactory. It was in response to a real need that the agitation began. It met with powerful opposition then, just as the enforcement of advanced laws do now.

The advanced standard of the consuming public is measured by the increased interest manifested by the people in the result of attempted legislation, either by Congress or the State Legislature. Also by the increased attention given the matter by the big newspapers.

Once it was a very unusual thing for the daily newspapers to pay any special attention to health problems and especially to questions connected with the question of food. This has now changed so that some papers have regular discussions of such matters, discussions that are popular.

Food products which are manufactured upon the principle that cheapness is the over-ruling principle of business life, are apt to be inferior. In times past they have been adulterated with harmful substances that have shortened the lives of many of the consumers while enriching manufacturers.

The Federal government has not advanced quite as rapidly as some pure food enthusiasts have desired. But it has not stood still entirely. In some instances the very enactment of the law led to improved conduct and the arrest and punishment of some violators of the act intimidated others.

The grocer did not always suspect that he was selling poisoned products to his patrons and using them on his table. That was the best evidence of his sincerity. A sane man does not injure the health of his own family. But the retailer has learned much with the passing of the years.

One of the most encouraging signs of the times is the willingness of a large majority of the manufacturers of food products in the United States to comply with the reasonable requirements of proper laws. Many of the most effective helpers of those who enforce pure food laws are manufacturers. They wish to do exactly right.

This Bulletin has spoken upon other occasions about the great value of a good name. Many manufacturers of food products in this country are justly proud of the reputation their wares have acquired. They feel that the people trust them and would go a long way to get their products. Such a reputation is worth a great deal.

While a beginner in business may be just as careful in the preparation of his products as the most celebrated of his established competitors and should not be discriminated against on the foolish principle that he has never been tried, yet it is a fact that the best way to accumulate a big business to get a reputation for merit.

We do not know what progress the crusade against the pestilent and dangerous fly made during the past summer. Observation leads to the conviction that many dealers in household goods are yet in need of instruction. In some towns there was little if any effort to protect berries, fruits and vegetables from either flies or dust. Still, no one should grow discouraged. Rome was not built in a day.

The Women's Clubs of Pennsylvania held a very interesting meeting in Harrisburg during the month of November at which they transacted much interesting business. Among the other notable things they did was the adoption of a resolution commending the present pure food law of the Commonwealth and placing its merits above those of the Federal food and drugs act.

The delegates from the Women's Clubs are evidently ladies of discernment. One can see that they have been examining food laws, both State and National, and have been observing the results. When the Legislature enacted the Murphy law some who did not look into the matters so closely uttered sharp criticism of the act and predicted many vile consequences. They were unduly alarmed.

Some of the features of the act would have been different if the Bulletin had been asked to frame it. But immediately after it had been approved by the Governor we said it was the most drastic food law ever enacted in this or any other State. Attention was also called to some of its many prohibitions and the prediction made that it would be instrumental in ending many abuses.

The sensible man does not long pursue his little journey in the world until he discovers that one very seldom obtains everything he desires. He sees that he must either make up his mind to accept what he can get and be content for the time being, or run the risk of being a chronic objector to whatever is. And it frequently happens that by making a trifling concession valuable advantages are gained.

When one compares the situation in Pennsylvania to-day with that existing before the first pure food law was passed, it must be admitted that a great deal of progress has been made. At that time preservatives of various sorts were freely used so that then, and for long after, the human stomach was often the receptacle for foodstuffs that had been actually embalmed. Nothing of the sort would be possible in Pennsylvania to-day.

The situation is still far from perfect. But perfection is not attained by a single leap; it comes as the result of years of strenuous effort. Here in Pennsylvania we have been advancing steadily. Almost every session of the Legislature has produced some noteworthy legislation, so that at the present moment, in the estimation of one of the most intelligent bodies of women in the State, the existing act is better than the national law. And this opinion is founded upon actual experience.

The fight that is to be made in Congress during the coming winter for the amendment of the Grout oleomargarine act, will not be against oleomargarine as such. The efforts of the friends of the amendment will be directed against those sections of the existing act that afford shelter and protection to those whose chief business in life is to sell this artificial product as and for pure butter.

This Bulletin has never yet said a single harmful word against the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine as such. On the contrary we have repeatedly declared that it is a legitimate article of commerce, just as legitimate as any other. The objection is not to oleomargarine, but to the numerous attempts to impose it upon the purchasing public as genuine butter. Reasonable persons should be able to see the difference between opposing an article and opposing its sale as something else.

The pure food laws of this and other commonwealths hold that it is wrong to misbrand any article. They were framed upon the theory that every purchaser is entitled to the precise article for which he pays. For that reason it is unlawful to sell a perfectly harmless preparation under a false name. Oleomargarine is a harmless product. Nobody who has looked into its composition believes it is injurious. So long as it is sold under its own name complaint will not be heard. It is only when it is palmed off as butter that the law takes hold of the venders.

The farmers and dairymen of Pennsylvania and other states assert that in spite of the law now existing prohibiting the sale of any substance under an assumed name, oleomargarine is still unlawfully colored and then put on the market under the guise of butter. They claim this is unfair to them and unjust to the consumer who pays for butter and gets an imitation. For that reason they object to any law which permits the coloring of oleomargarine in imitation of butter and for the obvious purpose of putting it on the market as butter.

Every article should stand on its own merits. That applies with special force to food products. Men and women have a right to know what sort of food their grocer is selling them. They are interested for the sake of their children, not to mention their own health. It is not unjust to insist that the full intent of the law be carried into effect by those charged with its administration. On the contrary it is the essence of justness and fairness to all concerned.

According to a statement recently issued by one of the big packing houses of Chicago, charged with engineering a corner in butter, the intention being to enhance its price with intent to create a prejudice in favor of oleomargarine, there are now 49,500,000 pounds of butter in storage. This firm confesses to having 2,300,000 pounds, but denied that it is a party to any crooked practices or any effort to keep up the prices of butter. If that stored butter were thrown on the market it might help some. But the chances are that the storage was for the purpose of putting up prices.

HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL!

Although the New Year will have begun to grow old by the time this number of the Bulletin is published, yet the Bulletin feels that it should not ignore the gracious custom which now obtains such universal observance, of extending the compliments of the season to its readers, and of wishing to every Pennsylvania home not only a Happy New Year, but also a Happy year. The Bureau which it has the honor to represent feels that it has been under special obligations to many thousands during the year. The majority of the manufacturers, of the wholesalers, of the retailers have done what they could to lighten the burdens of the officers and agents of the Dairy and Food Division, and that means that they accomplished a great deal.

Perhaps the most serious problem which confronted those charged with the enforcement of the pure food laws was found in the oleomargarine question. That is to say, it was found in the persistency with which certain dealers persisted in selling colored oleomargarine for genuine butter, contrary to law. The activity of the venders of this product was enhanced by the indifference of the authorities in some places and by the fact that public sentiment was not thoroughly aroused. During recent months there has been a decided change for the better and it is allowable to hope that there is going to be a turn of the tide. The incessant efforts of the oleomargarine peddlers to sell their product as butter has aroused farmers, dairymen and consumers and a strong effort will be made to secure additional and much needed legislation at the approaching session.

There is reason to believe that the babies of Pennsylvania are enjoying much better health and that fewer of them died last summer than ever before in proportion to population, and that this was the result of increased care in the preparation and sale of milk. The parents of the babies are thankful for the increased vigilance of state and city officials and when the little ones grow up to be useful men and women they also will certainly be in the front rank of pure food promoters. In other respects there has been an advance along the whole line. The new legislation of the year was of the most vital importance. By it Pennsylvania took a long step in advance. The several acts were carefully synopsisized in the Bulletin soon after they received the approval of Governor Stuart and it is not needful to refer to them more particularly at this time. On the whole, the year has witnessed considerable progress in the direction of better and purer food for the people and what 1909 gained 1910 will hold. Happy New Year!

CONCERNING OLEOMARGARINE AND BUTTER.

In the western part of Pennsylvania not many weeks ago some dealers in oleomargarine got into serious trouble with the courts. They were not arrested for selling oleomargarine as such. There is no law against that. If they had confined their efforts to disposing of that product under its true name, warning all purchasers of the real nature of the goods, they would have escaped the subsequent painful experiences which fell to their lot. They would have been quite as safe as the venders of other pure food.

But these people were merchants who sold oleomargarine for and as yellow butter, or they were hotel proprietors or restaurant keepers who placed it on their tables without labeling it for what it was, thus permitting their guests to suppose they were paying for yellow butter when in fact they were buying oleomargarine. In every instance the offense was the same—it was not the sale of oleomargarine, but its sale under the name and guise of yellow butter. To sell oleomargarine is not an offense; to sell it as butter is.

The punishment of the venders of oleomargarine masquerading as butter is in strict accordance with that portion of the law which forbids misbranding. The state of Pennsylvania is not concerned about the relative merits of butter and oleomargarine. It is quite willing that consumers shall decide that matter for themselves. But it is determined to do whatever it can to give them a square deal. If they want oleomargarine they are entitled to it; if they wish pure butter surely they should have it. There is nothing unreasonable in a proposition of this sort to anybody except those who wish to profit by the sale of a low-priced product in the name of veritable butter.

Until there is less disposition to secretly color and unlawfully sell oleomargarine for the butter which it is carefully made up to imitate, the state of Pennsylvania will use its influence at the national capital to prevent the reduction of the present tax of ten cents a pound on colored oleomargarine to three or any other figure. While the states have so much trouble with violators of law who deceive thousands of their fellow citizens every year, the Bulletin will insist that congress should make more stringent laws rather than repeal the ones they now have or reduce the tax upon the colored product. Quite aside from the policy of protecting the butter makers of this state from a dangerous competition already existing, the pure food authorities of this state are convinced that it would be very bad policy to make any concessions that would aid those unscrupulous persons who are selling oleomargarine and calling it butter. They are causing enough of trouble now.

THE COLOR QUESTION.

Under the above heading Hoard's Dairyman indulges in the following observations concerning a matter of considerable interest:

"The question is often asked, Is it not just as legitimate to color oleomargarine as it is to color butter? To this we answer, No! Butter is colored in obedience to the demand of the consumer. It is never colored to make the consumer think it is something which it is not. Like cloth, the color is a matter of taste. Butter is never colored to deceive the consumer. Its value depends on its flavor. Poor, ill-flavored butter cannot be made to sell for good butter because of its color. It is the fresh flavor of the butter that governs the price.

"But oleomargarine, which is a counterfeit, is colored to deceive the consumer. Therein lies its value. It is neutral in flavor. The more perfectly it deceives, the greater is its commercial value. It is a business that is based on deception and cheating. It cheats the farmer out of his legitimate market; cheats the consumer into paying a butter price for what is not butter; and cheats the government constantly, wherever it can.

"And yet, fraud as it is, it has defenders among editors of city papers, hired chemists and certain members of Congress. The editors and congressmen are often led by specious reasoning on color and other things, into the belief that it is as good, as wholesome and digestible as butter. It is simply a commercial counterfeit, seeking to supplant butter by unfair means."

Thus far Hoard's Dairyman. It speaks as an advocate, just as the champions of the oleomargarine industry do. The Bulletin must speak if it speak at all in the capacity of an impartial and passionless judge. It is obliged to recognize the fact that oleomargarine is a merchantable product; that its manufacture under certain well-defined conditions is perfectly lawful under many federal and state statutes and that so long as those who make and those who sell live up to those conditions it has equal rights in the markets of the country with butter. But the Bulletin likewise recognizes the truth that a large number of men have been doing the thing which explains the heat of Hoard's Dairyman and goes very far to justify that heat. Efforts have been made, are being made now, will continue to be made to find a market for oleomargarine at the expense of genuine butter, not upon the ground that it is as good as butter or is cheaper than butter, but by means of a cloud of deception and with the insinuation that it is butter, the genuine article. That's where the complaint of the dairymen finds a just foundation.

The Bulletin has an elderly friend who has been shaking his head for some time past over the suggestion of Hoard's Dairyman that butter is colored to answer a demand of the consumer. He tells us that so far as one consumer is concerned no such demand has ever been or ever will be made. He cannot bring himself to believe that sensible men and women are prejudiced against butter which does not present a yellow appearance at all seasons of the year. He admits he is old-fashioned, has done very little traveling and may not know the heart of modern thought; still he insists that butter untampered with is the best butter in the world the whole year round.

He says that the first twenty-three years of his life were spent in the country. He remembers the good milk he used to drink—some times while it still carried the warmth of the cow's body. He recalls the delicious taste of the butter which daily found its way to the table at which he took his meals. Rancid butter was an unknown factor then. The butter used in his own home was manufactured by his mother or his grandmother and it never had time to spoil. This butter changed its color and also its flavor with the passing months. During the spring and early summer when the cows were knee deep in clover it had a golden color and a taste that was obnoxious to those who were not acclimated. As the year grew older the color of the butter became paler and paler until in midwinter it was perfectly white. Let it be said though, that the whiteness was peculiar, belonging to no other product than genuine winter butter. And the taste of that butter cannot be imagined by one who has not had the happy fortune of rolling its delicious sweetness under the tongue. To the notion of the elderly gentleman the taste of the winter butter was more delicious than that of the clover butter of the summer. He wishes the butter makers would get back to the practices of the olden days and he says he is acquainted with some persons who agree with him. He understands that the arguments against the artificial coloring of oleomargarine do not apply to the artificial coloring of butter. He agrees with Hoard's Dairyman there.

What the elderly gentleman seems to mean is that it is not necessary for dairymen to use artificial coloring matter in the preparation of their butter for the market. They have the right to do it since their purpose is not deception of their customers, but he thinks they make a mistake.

CONDEMNING CHRISTMAS CANDY.

According to reports in the daily newspapers just before Christmas the health department of the city of Chicago made certain investigations into the quality and surroundings of the Christmas candy on sale in that city. The agents of the department found some things that did not please them. As a result of their investigations nearly 10,000 pounds of candy was condemned and destroyed as unfit for human food.

Among other things said in the department's report the following sentences concerning candy factories will bear quotation: "It will be insisted upon that the premises be kept clean and that the employes shall exercise every sanitary precaution in the handling of the products. Candy produced under unsanitary conditions is totally unfit for human consumption and a rigid enforcement of sanitary regulations is therefore insisted upon." That seems to reach the spot. It is a notification from the health board of the city of Chicago that the health of the little ones who are in the habit of purchasing their wares is of quite infinite importance and that they must either produce goods that will do the children no harm or go out of business.

It is believed that the manufacture of candy, wherever carried on within this commonwealth, is done under proper sanitary conditions. The agents of the pure food bureau have given the matter considerable attention and have also had the cordial co-operation of almost all the manufacturers. The latter are just as anxious to produce pure goods as the state is to have such goods made, and it is a very pleasant duty to bear witness to the straightforward actions of most manufacturers in Pennsylvania. The result is that children who eat Pennsylvania made candy are getting an article which is produced under proper sanitary conditions and contains pure and wholesome ingredients. It is to be hoped this favorable condition will continue indefinitely.

It is generally believed that candy is injurious to children, but many are convinced that good candy, eaten in moderate quantities and at proper times, does no harm to either young or old. Perhaps the injurious effects sometimes noticed are the result of over-eating or of eating candy that has been made under unsanitary conditions or contains adulterants not congenial to the human stomach. At all events the health department of Chicago did a good thing for the children of that city when it waged that crusade against poisonous candy just before Christmas.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION ICE CREAM MANUFACTURERS.

The ninth annual convention of the National Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers was held in the city of Cincinnati during the week beginning December 6, 1909. The Ice Cream Trade Journal, which contains a full report of the proceedings, says that the meeting was in almost every respect the most successful ever held. The local committee having charge of the arrangements did its work in a very complete and satisfactory manner, not only providing for the comfort and pleasure of the delegates, but also freely advertising the meeting so that the attendance of delegates and other interested visitors exceeded 800 and was far in excess of any previous enrollment. Many excellent papers were presented and read during the several sessions. Many delegates and visitors were in the hall during each session and close attention was paid to the several papers. The next convention will be held in Atlantic City. The only resolutions adopted, so far as the Bulletin has been able to discover, referred to the sad death of the wife of one of the delegates while on her way to the convention with her husband. The officers for the ensuing year are as follows: President, R. A. Woodhull, Chicago; Vice President, Edwin C. Sutton, Buffalo; Secretary, L. W. McCray, Cincinnati; Treasurer, W. F. Luick, Milwaukee. The following gentlemen constitute the Board of Directors for the ensuing year: Claude Myers, Ottumwa, Iowa; George L. Boedeker, Dallas, Texas; John T. Cunningham, Chicago, Ill.; H. C. Horton, New York; Robert Crane, Philadelphia, Pa.; John Semon, New Haven, Conn.; A. H. Ives, Minneapolis, Minn. The report of Secretary McCray, corroborated by that of Treasurer Hoadley, is to the effect that the receipts, including balance in the treasury, were $3,891.37; that the expenditures were $2,436.32, that the balance in the treasury is $1,455.05. It was intimated that some local associations had been marked down as members of the national association without their knowledge or consent, the mistake having occurred through contributions sent in to a common defense fund. Others have failed to respond to the request to pay their dues and are liable to expulsion. Nevertheless, the national organization is in good shape and in excellent spirits and starts the year with large expectations for the future. Already the members are looking forward to the session of 1910, which will be held at Atlantic City earlier in the year than the last one, with great expectations of pleasure and profit.

SOME OLEO PROSECUTIONS IN ST. LOUIS.

Many interesting things in connection with the sale in St. Louis of colored oleomargarine as and for butter have come to light during the last few weeks. Many dealers who have been selling oleo to their customers have been prosecuted and some have been convicted. It appears that the Retail Grocers' Association of St. Louis is back of these prosecutions and that its single purpose is to eliminate the element of deceit from the sale of the oleo.

The Eli Grocer and General Merchant, which has been taking a vivid interest in the matter, suggests that the chief problem is still unsettled. It remarks: "In each of these cases and in the ones that are pending Creamery, Wisconsin or Illinois or Elgin Creamery Butter was asked for. That at least was the evidence in the cases heard last week, and so far as there is any decision to the contrary dealers may still sell oleo when the word butter is omitted. That if a customer sees a sign displayed and asks for a pound of that Wisconsin Creamery he may be sold that particular brand of oleo without conflict with the law."

Eli Grocer goes on to say that one of the defendants, testifying in his own defense, stated that he had instructed his clerks that in case a customer asked for Elgin Creamery butter to stop him and say that it was not butter but "Elgin Creamery, commonly called oleo." But in case the customer did not use the word butter the oleo should be sold. He added that this was the custom among 95 per cent. of the dealers and had been the custom for the ten years he had been in business. Eli Grocer says this man is not a criminal and no doubt perfect honest in his belief that he does not violate the law when he sells oleomargarine to a customer who wants butter, but does not happen to mention it when he asks for "some of that creamery." If that isn't dishonesty we do not know what the word means.

Eli Grocer suggests that those interested in having the courts finally settle this matter should bring a suit against some dealer who was simply asked for creamery and not specifically for creamery butter. It believes the whole matter will be up in the air, so far as St. Louis and Missouri are concerned, until it has been definitely settled whether or not such a sale as the latter would be could be regarded as a violation of law. And it seems to be right in its contention.

LOOKING FORWARD.

Some critics of the administration of the federal food and drugs act are impatient over the conservative manner in which the officers in charge are enforcing that act. They do not think all is being done that might be done.

Some think this commonwealth might have improved upon the acts now in force, by the enactment of others and by the strengthening of those already existing. They made a great outcry while the legislature was still in session or just after it adjourned, and they are not yet satisfied.

Such criticisms are to be expected. The critics are of a great deal of use in the onward progress of the world. Things get done because of their activity that might sleep for centuries in the womb of the future. Sometimes they are annoying and exasperating, creating trouble just when their neighbors feel like taking a little repose. Very often they are unreasonable. Yet Providence makes use of them.

And it must be granted that a good deal of substantial progress has been made during the last twenty years by way of securing better food for the people. The condition was desperate enough when the first pure food act found a place on the statute books. The incessant demand of the consumer for cheap things; his invariable habit of patronizing the dealer who gave him the cheapest, without the slightest reference to the quality; the natural anxiety of the manufacturers to keep his trade and enlarge it; the willingness of the retailer to put the cheapest of goods on sale; all these things influenced manufacturers and dealers and the result was the production of alleged foodstuffs that were a menace to the health and the life of the consumer.

Finally the situation became so that the states began organizing dairy and food departments, with a view to assist in checking the worst evils. After long agitation and a bitter struggle the federal government took the matter in hand and the food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, became a national law. During the period intervening between the beginning of the agitation and the present moment great progress has been made. There is no reason for gloom or discouragement.

THE LIQUOR QUESTION.

The President of the United States, after having had voluminous testimony taken on the subject by the Solicitor General of the United States, and after having heard the arguments and read all the briefs of the parties interested bearing on the subject, making thereby such an investigation as has never before been made in this country, has reached the conclusion that:

- (1). All potable distilled spirits from grain, are "whisky"; and
- (2). All potable distilled spirits from grain, are "like substances," within the meaning of the Food and Drugs Act defining a blend; and, inasmuch as the Federal Government, by the Department of Justice and the President, have defined "whisky," the Pennsylvania Legislature, at its next session, should enact a law in harmony with the attitude taken by the Federal Government relating to alcoholic liquors.

PROGRESS IN MICHIGAN.

Writing to Hoard's Dairyman a correspondent who has been looking at the dairy situation in Michigan notes many signs of improvement. He observes that stables are in better condition; that more care is expended on livestock, especially cows, and it is more intelligently directed; more attention is paid to ventilation, although there is still room for considerable improvement in this respect: farm buildings are more generally in good repair and fewer of them are unpainted or in urgent need of attention; old fences have been repaired or replaced by new ones. This is an indication of gratifying progress in that section of the republic. Improvements like those suggested are of great value to the human family.

SUBSTITUTES FOR BUTTER.

There could be no reasonable objection upon the part of either the state or federal government to the preparation and offering for sale of any article recommended to the consuming public as a substitute for butter. It is permissible to make and sell substitutes so long as they contain no harmful ingredient and are sold under their own names as substitutes. The consumer who purchases under such circumstances is supposed to be properly informed and to be getting exactly the article he wants when he accepts the substitute. It is only when the proposed substitute is so colored as to closely resemble yellow butter and sold under the name of butter, so that the purchaser is deceived, believing he is taking butter to his family, that the state steps in and says that such conduct is a fraud upon the consumer and therefore a violation of law. Ordinarily intelligent persons should have no difficulty in understanding the intent of the act and the duty of the Dairy and Food Bureau.

WHAT IS HAPPENING ELSEWHERE.

While the violators of law in Western Pennsylvania have been facing the judgment bar, men guilty of the same offense—that is of selling colored oleomargarine as genuine butter—have been arrested, tried and convicted in other states. There has been notable vigilance in Chicago and St. Louis in the matter of arresting venders of colored oleomargarine who had neglected to pay the tax imposed upon that product by the national law. These prosecutions, of course, have been brought by the federal officials who have detected the offenders. What with the general government and the several states going after them with unusual vigilance and energy, the people who pretend that oleomargarine is butter are having a rather unpleasant time of it. Nor is the end in sight.

CONCERNING SHORT WEIGHTS.

The Grocer's Review indulges in some plain speech in its January number, declaring that "a certain class of manufacturers, jobbers and wholesale houses have carried on a persistent warfare against the enactment of laws which require that the net weight or measure of product be shown, and in nearly every instance where such opposition has been found it has come from those who are in a considerable measure defrauding the public in some way." This is a very serious charge. If it be true it should constitute a very strong argument in favor of the speedy formulation and enactment of the laws proposed. The superintendent of weights and measures for the state of New York says: "Shortage in weights and measures is due to three causes—inherent dishonesty, acquired dishonesty and negligence or ignorance. There are, unfortunately, in every community a few inherently dishonest, and, while they cannot be eliminated, then can be restricted and controlled by a vigorous, systematic and frequent inspection." There seems to be a large portion of truth in the observations of this superintendent.

THE COST OF FOOD.

There is a general conviction among consumers that the cost of many articles of food is entirely too high. It is rapidly reaching that point in our national history when there must be a decrease in the cost of meat and other standard articles of food, a heavy increase in wages and salaries, or a change in modes of living among the laborers as well as all others who are in receipt of a moderate income. Some of the big men of the world are telling us that there will never be a reduction in prices. If this be so there must needs be a readjustment of conditions. The American mechanic has been in the habit of eating meat every day of his life; he makes large use of eggs; his family has been accustomed to the liberal use of genuine butter. He has no disposition to alter the style of his living and he is pleased to hear that the Secretary of Agriculture is about to set on foot an exhaustive investigation whereby he hopes to arrive at an explanation of the increase in prices and discover an effective remedy. There does not seem any good reason why prices should remain permanently high. The assertion that the soil is exhausted is perfectly absurd. Methods are very wasteful, it is true. By studying the practice and following the example of the French gardeners it will be quite possible to increase the already large product of American farms tenfold. And as for the price of meat and eggs and butter, a remedy should be possible.

COLD STORAGE IN SAN FRANCISCO.

According to the Grocers' Advocate, of San Francisco, the retail grocer who sells cold storage eggs without marking "cold storage" on the carton in which it is delivered, or who displays for sale cold storage eggs without having on the price card in among the eggs on display, the fact that they are "cold storage eggs," is violating the pure food law as interpreted in California's chief city. It is said that the law is being widely disregarded by grocers in that city who are taking the chances on the supposition that the pure food officials will wink at such delinquencies. The grocers have all been warned, however, to be careful in their conduct if they do not wish to feel the hand of the law. This provision seems to be a very good one, in line with the requirements of the federal food and drugs act, as well as with those of most of the state laws. The idea is that the purchaser has a right to be informed concerning the quality of the goods he is purchasing and in no other way than by the enactment and enforcement of such an act as that herein referred to is it possible to obtain the desired information.

THE PRICE OF BUTTER.

The Inland Grocer, which believes the provision in the federal law imposing a tax of 10 cents per pound on colored oleomargarine to be an "iniquitous tax," recently suggested editorially that the existing high price of butter would lead to a largely increased use of oleomargarine, the ordinary workingman being unable to pay the price now demanded for butter. To this Mr. E. L. Burrage, manager of the Burrage Company, makes the following reply:

Editor, The Inland Grocer:

Dear Sir: Your editorial in the issue of the 18th reflects, to a certain extent, public opinion and the widespread discontent with the present high prices of food stuffs. That prices are high no one will deny; that they are not high by comparison, the writer asserts and begs leave to submit the following facts:

Take the case of butter; it is the highest it has been in several years but not the highest ever.

The second week in December 1880, the price at Elgin was 36 cents; the same week in 1881, 45 cents; in 1882, 42½ cents; in 1883, 38 cents; in 1884, 30 cents and in 1885, 40 cents. This covers a period of six years and only once in that time was butter lower than it is now. At that time corn in Kansas was worth about 20 cents per bushel, bran was $8 per ton and hay from $4 to $6. These are the feeds largely used to make butter, and compare them with the cost of these feeds today.

Then farmers could get all the labor they could use at $15 to $20 per month. Now they are paying $30 to $35 and good labor is almost impossible to get even at these prices.

Everything that goes into a pound of butter costs now from two to three times as much as it did thirty years ago. From 1865 to 1876 choice table butter wholesaled in the New York market every winter at a price exceeding 50 cents per pound. During the winter of 1875 butter sold for better than fifty cents, flour at $13 per barrel, potatoes $1.50 per bushel, all over the east, while day labor earned from 90 cents to $1 per day. Today labor earns twice as much as then and can buy nearly twice the amount of many kinds of food for a dollar that it could then.

The production or non-production of oleomargarine has but little effect on the price of butter, and proof of this lies in the fact that the November production of oleomargarine was the largest in the history of the industry, and the prices the highest ever realized for the product when sold honestly.

I don't believe there are a dozen grocers in Cleveland who are not actually losing money on every pound of butter they sell. The wholesalers are working on the closest percentage in the history of their business. Surely, then, these men are not to blame.

Thousands of farmers are being driven from dairying because of the cost of labor and feeds. In the face of the primary costs, no article of food is high. It is not a condition peculiar to this country, but is world wide, and the cause lies not in trusts, nor combinations, nor modern methods, but in the enormous production of gold, the rapid increase in consuming population, the decreasing fertility of the soil. These are the underlying causes, and food will continue to increase in price.

C. I. BURRIDGE.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Good laws are conducive to public comfort.

Public sentiment is essential to law enforcement.

The best laws in the world are useless unless enforced.

The support of the people is a great aid in the execution of law.

The householder who persists in carefully reading the labels is wise.

It should be generally admitted that the buyer is entitled to the goods he pays for.

Misbranding is a violation of the eternal principles of justice because it is an attempt to deceive.

Even the use of a harmless substitute for the goods whose name it takes is a wrong to the consumer.

Cereals used in the manufacture of sausage do not injure the health, but the man who doesn't want cereals is entitled to sausage without cereals.

It is difficult to make some manufacturers understand the principle upon which pure food laws are founded. But it is very simple; let the label tell the exact truth.

If telling a simple truth fifty times will not suffice to enlighten manufacturers and dealers, this Bulletin is cheerfully willing to repeat it a hundred times or oftener.

The food laws of the nation and of most of the states are very reasonable, and so are the majority of the decisions under them. The chief thing sought is the protection of the public health.

Those manufacturers who strive most earnestly to obey the laws and who are proud of the reputation they have acquired for reliability may not make large profits at first, but they'll win in the end.

Nothing is left for the honest servant of law save to carry out its mandates to the best of his ability and without fear or favor. He does not make law; he simply executes the commands of the law-makers.

Even when a food is prepared in a perfectly legal manner the consumer has a right to know the names of the materials composing it. That is the central thought of Pennsylvania's law, and also of the federal act. Turn on the light.

Without discussing the question of the wholesomeness or otherwise of oleomargarine, it should be fairly understood by everybody concerned that Pennsylvania permits the sale of oleomargarine as such. It is unlawful to sell it as butter.

Many sincere and honest dealers are now advertising butterine and similar products for precisely what they are. The state has no quarrel with such. For they are telling the consumer precisely what he is getting for his money and no harm is done.

The agents of the pure food bureau are doing their level best to carry out the provisions of the several acts regulating the manufacture and sale of articles of food in this commonwealth. But it is not fair to ask them to make laws to suit the needs of the times.

This Bulletin believes there should be an act on the statute books of Pennsylvania absolutely forbidding the manufacture and sale of adulterated alcoholic beverages.

Perhaps the next legislature will be able to frame a bill and enact it into law in such a manner as to overcome the executive objections. Certainly it will be its duty to make the effort. At present Pennsylvanians must depend upon the national government for protection against adulterated liquors. They should have a special provision of their own.

Davy Crockett's advice to his friends and comrades in the days of imminent peril—"Be sure you're right, then go ahead"—is a good one for the use of the modern critic who speaks without knowledge.

Purity is essential to the growth and health of the babies of the world.

In other years carelessness in this respect has been followed by many fatalities.

Since the state intervened on behalf of the child a better condition has arisen.

While infant mortality is still entirely out of proportion, it is gradually decreasing.

This is largely the result of better laws regulating the care of dairies and the sale of milk.

The dairymen have been a little impatient at times but they have fallen into line and are doing finely.

Whenever the purpose of the requirements of state laws and local regulations is carefully explained satisfaction follows.

For there are few dairymen or venders of milk in the land who are not glad of the chance to prolong human life and prevent pain.

The quality of milk now sold in this commonwealth shows a very decided improvement over that usually furnished consumers a few years ago.

And there is much pleasure to be found in the fact that the chief instruments in this change have been the dairymen themselves who gladly help.

Mothers and housekeepers, too, have more knowledge about milk, its properties and the vital necessity of keeping it from contamination than they had formerly.

And they are now utilizing the knowledge they have gained for the advantage of their babies and the entire family. Having knowledge they employ it wisely and usefully.

Of course there are a few dairymen and retail venders of milk who are not keeping up with the procession. These few care for their own profits, not for the lives of the babies.

There is no question but that the new rules and regulations concerning the dairy and the maintenance thereof in sanitary shape put the dairyman to considerable trouble and expense.

Perhaps some consumers grumble too loudly when there is a prospect of increasing the price of milk. And yet the assurance that the milk one buys is perfectly healthful ought to be worth considerable money.

No article of common domestic use is more sensitive to taint from other articles in the same room or even in another room the door of which is frequently opened, than milk. Hence the need of extreme precaution.

A recent definition of certified milk says that it must be obtained from cows that have been annually examined for tuberculosis and that are kept absolutely free from all kinds of diseases. The buildings in which the animals are housed must be sanitary, the water supply must be pure.

Many so-called butter-men who have really been manufacturing colored oleomargarine and neglecting to pay the federal tax have been run down recently by government officials. Several hundred pounds of this oleomargarine have been seized by the government and some men who were in this business are going to face an ominous judgment day.

At the state convention of the Retail Grocers' Association of Ohio, held some weeks ago, it soon became apparent that there was a very strong sentiment among the delegates in favor of the adoption of the weight system in buying and selling vegetables. The president of the association predicted that before many years pass the average grocer, while selling by the pound exclusively, will not be able to recall how many pounds are in a bushel of potatoes.

The artificial coloring of any substance whatever may seem to add to its appearance but fails to improve its quality. Indeed, it is the belief of some men and women who have given the matter a great deal of thought that coloring an article of food injures its quality, takes away the fine flavor which nature imparts and is an entirely inexcusable practice in any event. They may be prejudiced, but they are holding to their convictions and must be taken into consideration in any proper consideration of the uses of artificial coloring matter. Beauty unadorned is adorned the best. So it is that nature can never be improved on by the human artist.

State Food and Dairy Commissioner Wright, of Iowa, declares that whoever offers for sale as strictly fresh eggs, eggs which are not fresh violates the pure food law. If a dealer places a label on a basket of eggs, said label declaring they are fresh when they are not, he is brought under the dominion of law. He has had some men arrested and fined under this decision.

Out in Iowa some time ago a certain agent for an Omaha creamery company got to doing all the business. A rival company wondered what the trouble was and after a little investigation made a complaint against the successful agent, charging him with giving a fraudulent test on cream. The court which heard the case fined the agent $50 and he paid the costs, amounting to $20 more. His offense consisted in giving too high a test and thus favoring the seller as against his own company. It was natural that he should get all the business.

A Maryland firm is said to have sent out in very bad condition over two thousand cases of tomatoes, each case containing two dozen cans. The jobbers to whom the goods were consigned declined to receive them and the federal officials investigated the matter. They decided that the tomatoes contained what seemed to be salts of tin. The goods were seized by the government.

The Commercial Club of Muskogee, Oklahoma, has demonstrated its usefulness by securing the agreement of the merchants constituting its membership to patronize no advertising scheme, outside the regular newspapers, which has not first received the approval of the club. There has been a large amount of fake advertising out that way lately and it is hoped to counteract it by this sort of an arrangement.

At the recent session of the Southwest Teachers' and Parents' Congress in the city of San Antonio, Texas, so much was said about the necessity of pure food that a large number of the women of the city met and organized for the purpose of inaugurating a pure food crusade. A committee was appointed to take charge of all articles of food believed to be adulterated and to send them to the Pure Food Commission at Denton. This is another illustration of the kindling of a great fire by a very little matter.

Switzerland enacted a pure food law in the beginning of 1909, but the proper authorities have decided that the application of its provisions to dried fruits—apricots, peaches, pears, etc.—from California shall be postponed until July 1, 1910. That will give ample time for preparation for the changes provided for in the law.

An unnamed attorney instructed the Retail Merchants' Association of Ohio, at its recent session, that no legislation intended to tax trading stamps out of existence would be upheld by the courts of Ohio.

The majority of the delegates seem to think that the trading stamp would vanish very quickly and without legislation to assist the exodus if each individual dealer would decline to associate it with his goods.

The Inland Grocer is somewhat heated in spite of the cool weather. In a recent number it quotes "a well-informed grocer" as declaring that "these fellows are crazy," meaning the manufacturers of butter. This refers to the advance in the price of butter. The Inland Grocer goes on to say that Congress ought to repeal "the iniquitous tax upon colored oleo," and it suggests that the Ohio and Pennsylvania legislatures should also "repeal the equally infamous prohibition against the sale of colored oleo in those states."

The United States has been invited to participate in a great international agricultural exhibition which is to be held in Buenos Ayres next November. It is believed our government will gladly accede to the request of the Argentine Republic and manifest a lively interest in the coming event. No better method of expanding our trade could be devised.

That is a mighty good law which forbids the artificial coloring of any substitute for a well known and popular commodity when the evidence shows that it has been repeatedly colored and sold in defiance of law, and that the overwhelming majority of the sales have been made with intent to deceive the purchaser into the satisfied conviction that he had purchased an entirely different article at a bargain price.

There are not many flies in evidence just now and there is no urgent call for action; still, it is well enough to recall the prudent maxim: "In time of peace prepare for war."

The meat inspection bureau of the state department of agriculture continues to do very valuable and efficient work. The people of the commonwealth are under many obligations to this bureau for the valuable reforms it has inaugurated in connection with the handling of meat.

The helpful criticism of the citizen never offends any sensible public servant. But to be helpful it should be aimed directly at the officer interested and should reach him, not someone who has no authority to correct the evil complained of, possibly no desire to do anything but swell the volume of complaint.

Now that the President has rendered an official declaration of the word "whisky" it is to be presumed that all parties interested will settle down in peace and quietness and undertake to comply with the requirements of the decision. It is not likely to wholly satisfy either of the parties in interest, but it promises to give consumers the benefit of explicit information on the labels.

The Murphy law is not to the satisfaction of all parties at interest. That is scarcely to be expected. In the opinion of the Bulletin it is the most efficient act the state has ever had and its enforcement will insure the sale of fairly good articles of food by the various groceries of the state. In the meantime dissatisfied manufacturers who think it bears too hardly on the businesses in which they are engaged are seeking to have a court decision reached concerning the constitutionality of its various clauses.

Almost every state in the union has strengthened its defenses against unwholesome and adulterated food products during the last few years. The federal act has likewise had a good influence and will be still more efficient after a few years have rolled around. The present prospects may not seem specially illuminating, but the clouds will disappear.

While the champions of radical changes in the oleomargarine law of the federal government propose to put up a big battle in Congress, the friends of pure butter are no less active and are organizing societies all over the country, and especially in the dairy states, for the purpose of antagonizing the reduction of the tax on colored oleomargarine.

The Federal Department of Agriculture is making some stir among violators of the food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, and promises to deal still more vigorously with wrong-doers during 1910. Various articles that were obviously misbranded have been confiscated by the government.

Some excitement has been created in the city of Des Moines, Iowa, by certain proceedings instituted by one A. D. Pugh against the Des Moines Retail Grocers' Association. The association brought suit against him as executor of the estate of Harriet V. Pugh, deceased, to recover on certain notes aggregating $346, made by the said Harriet V. Pugh to a member of the association. Pugh brings a counter suit for $1,038 damages, charging that the association is a trust.

John Hart, a Detroit dealer in oleomargarine, has appealed from a recent sentence of the United States district court, imposed for violations of the federal laws regulating the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine. Should the appeal be not sustained the defendant will be compelled to pay fines aggregating $1,800, a tax of $600 and to serve for one year and ten days in the Detroit house of correction. This salty sentence may be taken as an indication that the government means business.

The attorney general of Kansas has brought suit against all of the produce commission dealers doing business in Topeka, charging them with violating the state's anti-trust laws because they are members of the Topeka Produce and Fruit Exchange.

There is a division of sentiment among the women of Fort Worth, Texas, concerning the relative value to the community of the retail grocers and the itinerant peddlers of fruit. One faction is assisting the grocers to make the situation interesting for the peddlers while the other insists that the grocers would demand extortionate prices. The outcome is doubtful.

Pure food officials of Utah, Idaho and Wyoming met recently and formed a temporary organization known as the Association of Pure Food Officials of the Western States. It is proposed to hold another meeting in Boise next April to which the pure food officials of the other western states will be invited.

Hoard's Dairyman declares bluntly that "colored oleomargarine is confessedly a counterfeit. It is made in the yellow color of butter for the sole and only purpose of cheating the unsuspecting purchaser and the ultimate consumer."

The government of the United States and of the Dominion of Canada have appointed an international commission whose duty it will be to devise some method of controlling the spread of bovine tuberculosis and of suppressing the same. The commission has held one meeting in Buffalo and will meet for the second time in Detroit during the last week in February.

The milk supply of the city of London is said to be exceptionally pure owing to the extraordinary precautions taken by the authorities of the big city to protect the health of its inhabitants, great and small. Since milk is the most necessary of foods its purity is a matter of vital importance.

The treasury department at Washington has issued a notice to collectors of customs concerning the regulations made by the Secretary of Agriculture in regard to the testing of foods and drugs which are brought in at ports where there are no laboratories for testing the same. The collector directs that the collectors at the smaller ports shall send samples of the goods to be tested to the nearest laboratory maintained by the Department of Agriculture.

A. C. Sluiter president of the New York State Association of Retail Butchers, has written and published a reply to the statement of Secretary Wilson that retail butchers are making an average profit of 38 per cent. He presents an array of circumstances which he says cut down the retailer's profits. The important point to the consumer is the undoubted high price of meat; the people know that they pay; they wish the prices could be cut; they are disposed to accept the figures of the Secretary of Agriculture.

According to the New York correspondent of the Grocery World, representatives of the Wholesale Grocers' Association will be present in all state capitols while legislatures are in session. The purpose is to watch closely all legislative developments affecting the food interests and to report promptly to the organization so that the entire membership may be informed as to what is being done.

The housekeeper should resolve to exercise even greater vigilance over the quality of the food provided for her family during 1910 than she did in 1909.

No retailer in Pennsylvania should omit obtaining a guaranty from the manufacturer or jobber from whom he purchases his supplies. Such a precaution will protect him from loss or embarrassment in the event of some of his goods being adulterated or misbranded.

Whatever may be true elsewhere it is a violation of law in Pennsylvania to sell any goods containing more than one-tenth of one per cent. of benzoate of soda, and that only in goods in which its use was heretofore allowed.

The pure food laws of this commonwealth will be effectively administered whenever the householders all take an interest in the matter and refuse to purchase any article of doubtful repute. The law's best helpers are the intelligent women who supervise the affairs of their families.

The President has made a definite settlement of the problem concerning the identity of whisky by his recent decision.

The past year has been a very satisfactory one in the history of the enactment and enforcement of laws bearing upon the problem of pure food in Pennsylvania. Some excellent regulations were placed on the statute books and the majority of those concerned have shown a willing disposition to conform to their requirements.

The State of Pennsylvania has more trouble with the persons who persist in coloring oleomargarine and palming it off upon innocent consumers as genuine butter than with any other class of offenders.

There are honorable dealers who frankly advertise the substitute for butter for exactly what it is. They are to be commended for their honesty.

In every effort made by Secretary Wilson of the Federal Department of Agriculture to get possession of certain vital facts in relation to food and food prices the consuming public of this country will wish him godspeed. To the extent he succeeds in digging out the truth he will prove a public benefactor and earn the sincere gratitude of his countrymen.

There are grocers in this state who are fast friends and supporters of the pure food laws. They are conscientious men and women and are by no means satisfied to yield perfunctory obedience to righteous laws. They wish to sell pure goods because it is right to do so and because they are really interested in the physical comfort and welfare of their patrons. And their number increases yearly.

Selfishness and greed are at the bottom of almost every effort to palm off upon the purchaser a fraudulent imitation for the genuine article. If all men were perfectly honest there would be no need for pure food laws or any other laws, for each individual would be a law unto himself. Unfortunately the millenium has not yet dawned.

The year upon which we are just entering will witness the enforcement of existing laws in this state, but the enactment of no new ones unless some extraordinary emergency should render it necessary for the Governor to convene the General Assembly in extra session. It is a pleasure to say that the laws relating to food are receiving general support in almost every section of the state.

"Adulteration is an ugly word," remarks Secretary Wilson, of the Federal Department of Agriculture. It is, but it describes an ugly and sometimes a dangerous deed. Therefore it is a fitting word and there is no reason why any public official should hesitate to use it.

Sad as the fact is, it is nevertheless true that the only way to put an end to food adulteration is to prohibit it under severe penalties. Between ignorance and carelessness only about one person out of ten ever thinks about looking at the label of the goods they buy, and about five out of ten wouldn't be any the wiser if they did look. It is the duty of the government to take care of those whose health might be endangered or destroyed through the actions of the careless or the ignorant.

Those who are interested in the creation of a public sentiment which shall culminate in the removal of all adulterated or substitute food from the market sometimes feel a bit gloomy when they run across an occasional vivid illustration of the general indifference still existing among consumers or of the crass ignorance of those who should know better. But they should not lose heart. Things are getting better all the time.

There is a possibility that a National Health Department may be created and that the interpretation and enforcement of the pure food act of June 30, 1906, will be transferred to the new agency.

No government should be vindictive in its punishments or unfair in its pursuit of citizens. On the other hand no government should permit any man or set of men to jeopardize the health and happiness of the people by the manufacture and sale of impure foods. Nor should any business man, no matter how important or wealthy he may be, be allowed to elude the hand of the law simply because he moves in the higher circles of society.

Whenever the enemies of a law are permitted to interpret it and suggest the manner of its enforcement, its best and most effective side is seldom shown to the people. Under such circumstances it soon degenerates into a perfect farce. The best of laws loses caste under such conditions.

The country contains an increasing number of helpful societies organized for the purpose of creating sentiment favorable to the enforcement of existing food legislation and to the enactment of additional measures as experience shows them to be needed.

There is a good deal of truth in the declaration: "Show me what a man eats and I will show you what he is." Eating has a very vital connection with the conduct and the opinions of men and women. Those who realize the truth of this very materialistic proposition are naturally anxious that the men and women of the country in which they are chiefly interested should have good food, properly prepared and free from adulterants.

The people of Pennsylvania are getting a very square deal in the articles of food now generally on sale by the grocers of the commonwealth and they are profiting therefrom. There is less sickness in this state today from certain diseases than ever before and the secret of this growing healthfulness is to be found in the better food the people are getting from their grocers and butchers, not to mention others.

Geo. D. Davis, Pres., 406 Ferry St., Pittsburg, Pa. Transferred April 1, 1909, to H. M. Brooks, Resident Mgr., Friedman Manufacturing Company,	Wholesale, ----	Jan. 1.
